Condo plan faces test

Madison Square Garden Corp. is running into trouble selling the idea of 2,700 condominium units on race track property to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission and other village officials.

Commissioners decided not to vote on the proposal and continued their scrutiny of the plan until Tuesday at the village hall.

Before a packed room, commissioners zeroed in on the 2,700-condominium-unit development. The commissioners said the density was too great.

THE COMMISSIONERS were joined by members of the village administration. Village planner Joe Kesler and village planning engineer John Best reiterated opposition to the residential development at the track.

In response to questions raised at an informal session last week, Ronald Labinski, architect retained to design the proposed Chicago Bears stadium, said a domed facility was not feasible. He said "Domed stadiums are not profitable" and money invested in other municipal stadiums may never be recovered.

Opposition to the density centered on use by the developers of the total 450-acre site. Best, reading from an opinion from Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel, said, "that land being set aside for commercial or industrial development should not be used in arriving at acreage-population ratios."

William Hannum, plan commissioner, said of the developer's plans, "I don't buy it. The density is much too high. I don't see how you can use land twice."

WILLIAM J. MOORE, attorney for Madison Square Gardens, said "I'm just not ready to concede that point."

In discussions about the stadium Ed McCaskey of the Chicago Bears reassured commissioners that the football team would not walk away from the stadium before any bond obligation is met. He repeated Bears owner George Halas' pledge to play in the stadium for the life of the bonds.

Michael Silverman, plan commissioner, questioned what would happen if the Bears organization were to cease operation before the bonds were paid off.

MOORE SAID about 25 nonprofessional football events would be staged at the stadium to help make it a profitable operation for the village. He said other stadium users would be the Chicago Sting, professional soccer team; eight nonathletic events, including contemporary music concerts; a college football game; and possibly high school football tournaments.

Moore said such popular attractions as Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand and Billy Graham-style religious crusades would be logical users of the facility.

$960 in equipment stolen from trailer

About $960 worth of equipment was reported stolen Wednesday in a burglary of a construction trailer at the Courtyard Apartments, 382 W. Miner St., Arlington Heights.

Taken were an adding machine, four hard hats, six no-parking signs and six fire extinguishers, an official for Turner Construction Co. told police.

Police said they could find no signs of forced entry.

"NO, NO, NANETTE," a combined musical production of Hersey and Buffalo Grove high schools, runs today through Sunday at Buffalo Grove High, Dundee and Arlington Heights roads. Paula Kinney, right, as Nanette, and Jeff Anderson, as Tom, are among the cast. Performances are 8 p.m. nightly and 3 p.m. Sunday.

It's official! Utility tax not deductible

The Village of Arlington Heights has received confirmation that its 5 per cent utility tax cannot be deducted from residents' federal income tax returns.

The village board's finance committee, which is reviewing the possible elimination of the utility tax, asked the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) in Washington to rule on the deductibility of the tax.

In reply, the IRS said that the utility tax could be deducted from personal income tax returns only if it were reduced to 1 per cent, equaling the village's current share of the state's over all 5 per cent sales tax.

"Since utility taxes, by themselves do not constitute a broad range of classes of items, taxes on utilities are deductible only if the taxes are imposed at the same rate as the general sales tax . . .," said Billy M. Hargett, chief of the IRS individual income tax branch.

NON-DEDUCTIBILITY has been one of the most distasteful features of the utility tax for Arlington Heights residents. Real estate taxes, on the other hand, generally are deducted from personal income tax returns.

In Hoffman Estates, which passed a 5 per cent utility tax effective Jan. 1, residents are able to take deductions because the Hoffman Estates tax is classified as a temporary tax.

The ordinance creating the tax specifies that it will be repealed Dec. 31, 1976.

The Hoffman Estates utility tax was passed for a single purpose — to pay off a $350,000 debt in the fire protection district which the village took over Jan. 1.

Arlington Heights' utility tax has been used for capital improvement projects, such as a $237,000 addition to the village hall and various water and sewer lines. But there is no termination date in Arlington Heights utility tax ordinance.

MOST RECENTLY, the Arlington Heights Village Board voted 5-2 to spend $750,436 in utility tax money to build an equipment maintenance garage at the public works center, 222 Ridge Ave. A million-dollar sanitary sewer for the Ivy Hill subdivision now under construction also is being paid for with utility taxes.

Approval of the garage extended the life of the utility tax at least until next May, according to village budget estimates.

Arlington Heights' utility tax took effect Jan. 1, 1971. It produces about $1.2 million in revenue annually, approximately $300,000 more than the village's property tax.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSEKESCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatooles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatooles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatooles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burleind, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the states attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said.

"A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said. "It depends on what attorney you

$59,000 missing at race track

About $59,000 is missing from the main money room at Arlington Park Race Track, and Arlington Heights police and agents of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation are trying to find out who took it. The money was discovered missing Wednesday and apparently was part of $2.7 million taken in at the track from Saturday's racing. Police say the thieves replaced three bundles of $20,000 in bills with three bundles of paper cut to the size of bills. The thieves topped off each bundle with a $100 bill to deceive cashiers.

Lutheran General to expand

Lutheran General Hospital will add five floors and spend $25 million over the next three years in an expansion program. The hospital also will remodel existing facilities, starting with a 1,000-car parking lot. The addition to Lutheran General will not increase the number of patient beds beyond the present capacity of 685. Instead, the five floors will be used for education of medical students and some office space.

Pahwaukee security hit

The Aviation Safety Institute of Worthington, Ohio, a national safety group, has criticized conditions at Palwaukee Airport south of Wheeling for allowing people to wander on the runways. The institute says it has more than 50 documented cases of people and vehicles on runways because of lax security measures. In one instance, a small girl was found walking across a runway because her bike had a flat tire and "it was the shortest way home."

Schaumburg can't sprinkle

An emergency lawn sprinkling ban went into effect in Schaumburg Wednesday after two deep wells went out of operation. The wells are the village's main source of water, although 16 shallow wells in the village system will keep enough water on hand for home use and the fire department. For the time being, the village will ban watering lawns, shrubs, car washing and other excessive uses of water. The main wells should be back in use in one to three weeks.

Sheet metal strike ends

Striking sheet metal workers at ILG Industries in Wheeling went back to work Wednesday after accepting the company's original contract offer of four weeks ago. Some 70 workers were involved in the work stoppage.

Schools to save energy

A district-wide monitoring system to cut down on the use of energy is being considered by Dist. 214 for its eight schools. The new system will control and monitor heat and electricity at Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Rolling Meadows high schools; Arlington, Forest View, Elk Grove, Prospect and Wheeling high schools will be monitored only by the device at first. Cost will be about $100,000.

Dist. 25 agreement reached

Teachers of Arlington Heights Dist. 25 have reached an agreement with the board of education on a new contract for the 1975-76 school year. Details of the contract have not been released and teachers will not vote on the package until Sept. 3, a day after school begins.

Decision depends on Howlett's move

Pierce weighs bid for governor

by BOB LAHEY

State Rep. Daniel M. Pierce, D-Highland Park, is taking a realistic approach to his ambition to run for governor of Illinois.

"A lot is going to depend," Pierce said Wednesday, on whether there is going to be a candidate chosen by the regular organization. That presupposes that the regular organization — more specifically Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley — is not going to back the reelection of Gov. Daniel Walker.

It also presupposes, realistically, that if the organization goes in search of a candidate, it is not going to go looking for Dan Pierce.

Pierce said he has found strong sentiment for a "non-Daley" opponent to Walker, but acknowledges that such opposition would be futile in a three-way primary contest that included a "Daley candidate."

SHOULD DALEY however, choose not to field a gubernatorial candidate, as a dwindling number of observers think he might, Pierce could hope for last minute support from the mayor against Walker.

Meanwhile, Pierce, like State Treasurer Alan Dixon, "is putting himself in position for lightning to strike," as one Democrat put it.

Both Pierce and Dixon have encouraged efforts on their behalf to drum up support for a primary challenge to Walker.

Daniel M. Pierce

Pierce was encouraged by the response he received to a letter sent to the 102 Democratic county chairmen and members of the state central committee by Lake County Democratic chairman Herbert L. (Hub) Stern of Highland Park.

"Most of them were curious to know how serious a candidate I am," said Pierce, adding that no one has discouraged his candidacy. Pierce believes that his strong point going into a primary contest would be the support of liberal and independent Democrats who supported Walker in 1972 but have become disenchanted with him.

DIXON MEANWHILE is conducting a more concerted effort to drum up support. Unlike Pierce, Dixon has also discussed the possibility of running with Daley, and "was not discouraged," according to an aide.

But both the Pierce and Dixon camps acknowledge that if the mayor decides on a serious effort to unhorse Walker, his first choice for the joust will be Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett.

Another frequently mentioned Walker opponent, Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan, has made no move toward mounting a campaign for governor. That, too, is probably a tacit acknowledgement that if his mentor, Daley, wants to beat Walker, Howlett is the man to do it.

Hartigan, perhaps not yet seasoned enough for a run for governor, meanwhile is in a comfortable position. His options might include running for reelection with Howlett; running for secretary of state if Howlett vacates the office; or running again for his office with or without Walker's blessing.

Howlett remains the key to the hopes of Pierce or any other candidate. Pierce acknowledges "I can't believe that if Mayor Daley and the 30 Chicago ward committeemen came to him and said, 'We need you to get rid of the Walker menace,' that he wouldn't go along with it."

out quietly before the toasts and returned to the Soviet embassy.

Kissinger said Ford had a "useful meeting" with Greek Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis, whom Kissinger described as "one of the outstanding leaders of our period." He said "we believe that domestic developments in the United States have complicated our ability to play a useful role" in the Cyprus negotiations, but pledged the United States will continue to do what it can to solve the Greek-Turkish dispute.

Ford will discuss with Turkish Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel, at a breakfast meeting today, the closing of American bases in Turkey.

Meanwhile, First Lady Betty Ford declared, "I feel marvelous," and to prove it she did some sightseeing, shopped a bit and briskly hiked up a hill which left the rest of her party puffing for breath.

The First Lady canceled her schedule in Poland Monday because of exhaustion, giving rise to some concern about her health. But after resting for a day she said she had simply felt the combined effects of jet lag and too little sleep.

"So I just took a little time off and got some sleep and I'm all caught up and I feel marvelous," she said.

2 processors raise flour, sugar prices

Two of the nation's largest food processors — Pillsbury and General Mills — Wednesday raised wholesale prices on flour and sugar. The higher flour prices were the first solid evidence of the impact of Russian purchases of U.S. grain.

Possible huge oil fields detected

Underwater scientists have discovered two huge stone domes under the floor of the Atlantic Ocean which oil company executives say may be filled with millions of barrels of crude oil. William Scafie, a geophysicist expert with Shell Oil Co., said Tuesday he would not be surprised if the larger dome holds as much oil as the East Texas Field, which has produced 4 billion barrels and still holds another 2 billion.

Jailer involved in sex before death: doctor

A pathologist testified Wednesday that 62-year-old jailer Clarence Allgood apparently was involved in sexual activity moments before Joan Little stabbed him to death in her jail cell. Miss Little is on trial for Allgood's murder and claims Allgood was trying to rape her.

Subatomic particle discovered

A conference of high-energy physicists was told Wednesday of the discovery of a subatomic particle, called "U" for unknown, that does not fit any existing theory of nature. The discovery follows that of the "psi" particles whose sudden emergence last November was described by physicists as the most startling development in the field in 25 years.

Wisconsin residents pay highest taxes

Wisconsin families are paying the highest state and local taxes in America. Louisianans pay the lowest. Illinois ranks 17th. In its August edition, Money magazine reported that Wisconsin residents pay an average of $3,119 a year in taxes, compared with the $682 paid by those in Louisiana. Next in line for the highest taxed states are Minnesota at $2,894, New York at $2,755 and Massachusetts at $2,637. After Louisiana, the lowest taxed states are Florida at $899, Wyoming at $903 and Nevada at $949. All others pay an average tax in excess of $1,000 a year, the magazine said. Illinoisans pay an average of $1,914. The findings were based on the average state and local taxes paid by a family of four with $25,000 adjusted gross income and a $45,000 house.

South Korea asks full UN membership

South Korea has applied for full membership in the United Nations, diplomatic sources said Wednesday. The application was expected to provoke a major controversy since North Korea has insisted that only a unified Korea should enter the world body.

Thousands flee Angolan fighting

Rival black nationalist forces battled in two strategic cities south of Luanda, Angola, Wednesday, shrinking the capital's defense perimeter and forcing thousands of Angolans and foreigners to flee. In Portugal, Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, returned from Cuba with a warning of "harsh repression" of opponents of the left-wing military regime and a threat to turn Lisbon's bulging into a concentration camp. And in Nigeria, Brig. Gen. Murtala Muhammed, who seized power in a bloodless coup that toppled President Yakubu Gowon, said the ousted leader would be allowed to return to Nigeria safely "as soon as conditions permit."

House OKs 8.6% pay increases

WASHINGTON — By a deceptive one-vote margin, House members Wednesday voted themselves and others, including former President Richard Nixon, a cost-of-living increase that could reach 8.6 per cent this year.

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, voted for the pay hike; Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, voted against it.

Although the measure was recorded as passing by a razor-thin 214-to-213 margin, congressional observers said the automatic voting board in the House showed a much larger margin initially.

The House acted less than 24 hours after the Senate, on a 58-to-29 vote, Tuesday, approved the plan.

The increase, if set at 8.6 per cent, would cost about $50 million. It also would go to federal judges, now paid $40,000 a year, and top-scale federal employees, who are prohibited by law from getting more than $38,000.

In other congressional action:

• The Senate Finance Committee approved a windfall profits tax to be considered by the Senate if the House rejects the Ford plan and price controls end abruptly.

Under terms of the bill, the decontrolled oil would be taxed at a 90 per cent rate. The base price exempt from the new tax would be allowed to rise gradually, by 1.5 per cent a month, and no taxpayer would be forced to pay the "windfall" tax on more than 75 per cent of his net income from that oil.

• The House approved a $31.1 billion weapons bill, $3.3 billion below Pentagon requests, but including authorization for the B1 bomber and the first nuclear strike cruiser in the U.S. Navy. The compromise measure, passed on a 348-to-60 vote and was sent to the Senate for final action.

• The Senate decided to give New Hampshire voters another chance to determine who their junior senator will be. By a 71-to-21 vote, the Senate ended a seven-month scrutiny of the dispute between Democrat John A. Durkin and Republican Louis C. Wyman and declared the New Hampshire seat vacant effective Aug. 8. The action paves the way for a new election within 45 days.

House rejects Ford's oil plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Wednesday night rejected President Ford's plan to lift price controls on U.S. oil gradually over the next three years, setting the stage for possible sudden decontrol and sharp consumer price increases Sept. 1.

House adoption 228 to 189 of a resolution disapproving Ford's plan was a challenge to Ford to agree to extend current controls, or to let them lapse Aug. 31 and take some of the blame for the price increases that would result.

Hours before the House vote, the Senate had blocked 50 to 44 a similar resolution of disapproval, leaving the final showdown to the House.

Ford offered his plan as the only compromise he could make, and administration officials have hinted strongly that its rejection would bring a veto that would mean full decontrol at the end of next month.

Ban cigarettes high in tar, nicotine: U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Wednesday that cigarettes represent a "serious health problem" to nonsmokers as well as smokers, and recommended banning cigarettes with high levels of tar and nicotine.

Also, the Environmental Protection Agency banned most uses of two common pesticides as imminent cancer threats, saying residues are showing up in unborn babies, mothers' milk and the body tissue of most Americans.

The pesticides, heptachlor and chlordane, are widely used in agriculture, especially for corn, and frequently around the yard for controlling such pests as the Japanese beetle.

There are safe alternatives available for all uses, the EPA said. It advised consumers worried about what to do with existing supplies to simply use them as directed on the package, and avoid dumping them in water supplies.

Casper Weinberger, outgoing Sec. of Health, Education and Welfare, sent Congress a report saying the effects of cigarette smoking on nonsmokers in smoke-filled atmospheres ranges from minor eye and throat irritations to incapacitating attacks of pain in some persons with heart disease.

Weinberger recommended legislation giving the government authority to ban manufacture or sale of cigarettes "exceeding what are considered excessively hazardous levels of tar, nicotine, carbon monoxide and other ingredients shown to be injurious to health."

Nixon invited to testify

CIA set up deal to kill Castro: Hughes aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the most explicit description of CIA-sponsored assassination plots to date, the former top aide to billionaire Howard Hughes said Wednesday the agency ordered him to contact gambling figures in a plan to poison Cuban leader Fidel Castro in 1960.

Robert Maheu outlined details of the incident after testifying before investigators of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Committee chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said meanwhile that Richard M. Nixon has been invited to testify on CIA activities while he was President, but no details have been worked out.

Maheu said he saw in a Miami hotel two poison capsules which were to have been smuggled into Havana to "eliminate" the Cuban leader.

"But the plan was always subject to a 'go' signal which never came," Maheu said. He said he knew of no plots other than the one in which he was involved.

Maheu, an ex-FBI agent, said he worked several years for the CIA on a retainer of $500 a month, beginning in 1954. In 1960, he said, a CIA agent named Edward O'Connell told him to contact two alleged underworld figures named Johnny Rosselli and Sam Giancana who had previous gambling interests in pre-Castro Cuba.

Rosselli already has testified before the Senate panel but Giancana was murdered in Chicago last month before he could be called as a witness.

Maheu said he and the two men participated in the anti-Castro plot out of "patriotism" because he said the United States planned a bombing attack on Cuba to be followed by an invasion and Castro was wanted "out of the way."

Giancana and Rosselli were to have used their Cuban contacts to smuggle two poison capsules into Castro's household and, when the word was given, they were to be used to kill him, he said.

ROBERT MAHEU

The poison plan was believed to be one of 24 plots cited by Castro in a statement sent to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and released by McGovern earlier in the day.

Castro had promised to send the material to McGovern during the senator's visit to Cuba last May. McGovern, who said if the allegations are true the CIA engaged in "shocking, murderous and un-American behavior," turned them over to the Senate committee.

Scott's daughter in drug bust

• Marian Concannon, daughter of Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, was one of 15 persons arrested Wednesday in a drug raid in Doylestown, Pa. She was accused of selling $100 worth of hashish to an undercover agent. "I'll stand behind my daughter," Scott said.

• Cincinnati police are investigating the burglary of a piggy bank. Robert Griffin said his piggy bank was three feet high and contained $1,000 in pennies.

• Actor Pat O'Brien has been transferred from Little Company of Mary Hospital to the University of Illinois Research Hospital for more tests on his heart ailment. Also, Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., is making a fast recovery from pneumonia, but will not return to the campaign trail until at least this weekend.

• The trial of James R. Agnew, son of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, on trespassing charges in an alleged peeping tom incident was postponed until Aug. 27.

• In the last two days, the porch and stairs outside Sarah Cohn Bailey's second-floor apartment in Dallas have been dismantled. The roof still leaks, too — which is why Mrs. Bailey refused to pay her rent. When she didn't pay, landlord Alfred Moore decided to deny her easy access to the apartment. The city building department has served Moore with a notice to repair the staircase.

• Representatives of three consumer groups dumped several hundred shirts near the reception area of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis' office Tuesday. "His plans would take the shirts off our back," Carolyn Bruneau said. Dukakis has proposed a $689.5 million tax increase.

• A 40-year-old former Vienna postal clerk who threw out mail containing pornography said she was overpowered by indignation. "Men begin by ordering things like that and end up by being unfaithful to their wives," said the woman, identified only as Edith G.

Troubled Detroit area sealed off; tense peace

DETROIT (UPI) — Police set up barricades around a predominantly black West Side neighborhood here Wednesday, closing streets in the tension-packed area to all but residents and local businessmen.

The 20-square block area was cordoned off as a precautionary measure, police said, to avoid a renewal of street clashes touched off Monday night when a black teenager was shot to death by a white bar owner.

Police demanded identification of all persons attempting to enter the area.

The lower middle class neighborhood was quiet Wednesday after a second night of sporadic rock-and-bottle attacks on police by roving groups of blacks.

Peace was restored to the area after police used tear gas to disperse the angry crowds who set fire to 13 business places and looted several markets and stores.

Police and clergymen circulated through the streets, mixing persuasion and police power in an operation called "Campaign Cool It," hoping to maintain the calm.

Police Chief Philip G. Tannian mobilized most of the city's 4,500-man force.

Police said 43 persons were arrested Tuesday night, bringing the total number of arrests over the two-night period to 106. Only one person was reported seriously hurt in the second night of disorders, a fireman cut by flying glass when a brick smashed the windshield of a fire truck.

At least 10 persons were injured late Monday and early Tuesday. The area is about seven miles from City Hall.

POLICE CORDONED off a West Side neighborhood of Detroit Wednesday after scattered outbreaks of shooting and looting the previous two nights. A tense peace had been restored Wednesday.

Name Robert Rohleder to park board

The Arlington Heights Park Board has appointed Robert P. Rohleder to fill a vacancy created last month by the resignation of Robert D. Smith.

Rohleder, 33, of 907 Cypress Dr., was among three candidates who challenged Smith in the April park board election for a four-year seat.

Rohleder will serve on the park board until the next regular park board election. Comr. Smith sat on the board for two months before he was forced to resign because of a job transfer.

Rohleder is a partner in the Chicago accounting firm of Touche, Ross and Co. which is preparing a preliminary feasibility report for Madison Square Garden Corp. on the proposed $29.7-million Chicago Bear's football stadium at Arlington Park Race Track.

THE PARK BOARD is attempting to force the disannexation of the track property from the Salt Creek Park

District and annexation into the village district to benefit from the potential increased assessed valuation of the development.

Rohleder said he does not believe his association with the park board and his work for Touche, Ross and Co. is a conflict of interest.

"It is a short term project that we are doing for the race track owners which should be completed by the time I begin sitting on the board in August. I don't believe there is any conflict of interest involved in my appointment at all," Rohleder said.

Rohleder said he "understands" the park board's desire to annex the race track to keep its boundaries continuous with those of the Village of Arlington Heights, and said he has not decided "if the way the board is going about it is a good idea."

His experience as a certified public accountant "will aid the park board in analysis of the district's fi-ancial situation," Rohleder said. He, his wife, Linda, and their two children have lived in the village for four years.

Kathryn Graham, vice president of the park board, said the board considered Rohleder and the two other candidates who ran for the four-year term in the April election, and appointed Rohleder with a unanimous board vote.

"We believed that his expertise in business and finance will benefit the park district greatly," Mrs. Graham said.

Arthur Goldberg, an incumbent in the April election, and Archibald Loch also ran for the four-year seat on the board.

Dist. 25 teachers reach agreement on contract

Negotiators for the Arlington Teachers Assn. and Arlington Heights Dist. 25 have reached an agreement in teacher salary talks for 1975-76 school year.

The agreement is subject to approval by the teachers and the district board of education.

Figures for the new teacher contract have not been released, pending presentation to the teachers. The salary package is scheduled to be presented to teachers Aug. 29, said James Modoc, president of the Arlington Teachers Assn.

Modoc said a teacher vote on the new contract would not come until Sept. 3, but that teachers will go back on the job when school starts Sept. 2.

"Considering the federal and state cuts in aid to education and the county cut in the tax multiplier, I think it is a fairly good settlement," said Modoc.

Modoc said he will recommend acceptance of the contract by teachers. While terms of the contract have not been revealed, several sources said earlier that teachers were being offered "less" than what they received in pay increases last year.

Last year, teachers got a 10 percent pay increase plus many added benefits.

Blood donations taken Aug. 8, 10

Arlington Heights' mobile blood unit has scheduled two blood donor dates in August.

They are: 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday, Aug. 8 at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd., and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 10 at the First Presbyterian Church, 302 N. Dunton Ave.

Persons may make an appointment to donate blood by calling the village health department at 253-2340. Arlington Heights' participation in a blood replacement program guarantees an unlimited supply of free blood to all village residents.

EPA decision on auto exhaust testing plan near

by LEA TONKIN
The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency may decide the fate of its proposed county auto exhaust emission testing program within the next two weeks.

Lance Vinson, chief attorney in the EPA's air enforcement branch, Chicago, said Wednesday the timing of the decision will depend on the availability of decision makers in the agency. The proposed auto pollution testing program is aimed at the reduction of carbon monoxide levels in the downtown Chicago area.

Several alternatives are being considered, Vinson said. The federal agency could issue an order that would require a testing program for all county autos, or it could decide not to issue an order, he said. A "middle ground" alternative is a testing program for county vehicles that enter the downtown Chicago area.

"We do think it's urgent," Vinson said. "The carbon monoxide levels in downtown Chicago continue to be seriously in excess of the standards designed to protect human health." The federal EPA originally called for establishment of regulations for a county auto emission testing program by June, 1974. The county was cited by EPA April 17 of this year for failure to comply. A July 15 deadline was set for added EPA recommendations, but the agency report will not be ready for at least two weeks. County and City of Chicago environmental administrators have criticized the proposed testing program as an ineffective plan.

Gypsy moths found in area

A small infestation of gypsy moths has been discovered in Palos Park, the Illinois Dept. of Agriculture has announced. Lonnie Matzenbacher, plant and pesticide supervisor, said department personnel caught 150 adult male gypsy moths in traps. No females have been observed. The adult moths are harmless. As caterpillars, however, they feed on the leaves of forest, shade and ornamental trees and shrubs. Defoliation by the gypsy moth has destroyed thousands of acres of trees in New England. The spread of the gypsy moth is attributed to "hitchhiking" on campers and mobile homes.

Aug. is clean water month

Clean Water month will be celebrated during August, said Nicholas

J. Melas, president of the Metropolitan Sanitary District. A series of events scheduled during August will call attention to the efforts of government agencies, private firms and individuals involved in fighting water pollution.

The annual Clean Water Month boat parade on the Chicago River will launch the celebration, Friday, Melas said. The 81st Army Band and a water salute by the Chicago Fire Dept. will be included in the noon event. Joining the parade down the Chicago River to Harrison St. and returning to Lake Shore Drive, Melas and other officials will be on the 48-foot power boat "Lady Lou" owned by Larry Terzo of Arlington Heights.

by NANCY COWGER

Suburbanites took a McDonald's break for Susan Lark Tuesday and added $1,117 to the benefit fund for the Arlington Heights cancer victim who also is receiving widespread moral support.

The cash equals half the proceeds of two hours' dinner trade Tuesday at two McDonald's restaurants in Arlington Heights. The amount exceeds the expectations of restaurant owner Bill Kimpel, who had predicted he could raise between $600 and $1,000 for the Susan Lark Fund.

Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Lark, 1415 Rose Hill Dr., underwent leg amputation surgery July 10 to save her life from bone marrow cancer.

THE FUND WAS established at the First National Bank of Dunree by family friends to help meet Susan's uninsured medical expenses. Donations may be mailed to the bank in care of Joyce Prola, 2015 Berkshire Circle, Carpentersville, 60110.

Kimpel's check raises the total of donations for Susan to more than $3,200.

"I hope that this will help them out in some way," Kimpel said. The volume of business during the 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday crusade was obviously a response to the Susan Lark pleas, said Kimpel. On an average Tuesday night, half the proceeds of the two restaurants would amount to $600, he said.

"A lot of people came in and spent from $3 to $8," some of them taking their food home to eat and others staying at the restaurants, he said. Few mentioned Susan's illness, but the number of big orders showed "they knew half the proceeds were going to help her," he said.

"I THINK IT'S wonderful, the way the public turned out," said Kimpel.

Susan's mother agrees 100 per cent, but she included Kimpel in her praise.

"This is so marvelous of him to do this," Mrs. Lark said. Susan sometimes is frustrated at the thought of a year's intense effort to regain the mobility that permits horseback riding, bowling and other activities that once came easily, Mrs. Lark said. But "she gets a big boost" from the mail she has received, and "she can't imagine" why so many people have taken an interest in her.

"It means so much, that they think and care so much," said Mrs. Lark.

Mrs. Lark still does not know what the total cost of Susan's medical care will be, although family friends have reported figures ranging between $30,000 and $40,000.

THE HOSPITAL bill was about $3,200, Mrs. Lark said, but she has not received invoices from Susan's anesthesiologist, surgeon, or the consulting specialists who helped make up Susan's team of doctors. Susan is taking medication and is to start chemotherapy soon. She may need a second hospital stay when she is fitted with her first artificial leg. Susan will need new prosthetic devices periodically to match her growth. Mrs. Lark said she hopes to gain a better concept of the total medical expense in a conference with Susan's doctor late this week.

Susan is still using crutches and has stayed close to home since she left the hospital July 24. But she is increasing her activity daily and, like Ted Kennedy Jr., "she's doing pretty well," Mrs. Lark said.

A very special surge of encouragement came in a letter this week from Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., whose son Ted Jr. was a victim of the same type cancer that struck Susan. Ted recently returned from a ski trip, and he's doing fine, the potential contender for President wrote.

Active defense attorneys, who argued nine or more cases that were included in the study of nearly 1,500 drunken driving cases from 1973 to 1975, are highly successful in winning either acquittals or reduced charges.

The totals indicate which attorneys lose few DWI cases (column one, Client Guilty of DWI), which attorneys plea bargain for reduced or other charges (columns two and three), and which attorneys win DWI acquittals (column four, Acquitted or DWI Dropped). Also shown are the average continuances per case and fines imposed after convictions.

Attorney DWI defense key

have, his expertise and his time."

MORE THAN 300 attorneys were listed in files of the Circuit Court Clerk's office as representing persons charged in 1973 with drunk driving. The Herald found. Most of the lawyers represented three or fewer clients facing area DWI charges.

Preparation time for defense attorneys also means continuances. Four of five continuances in area courts are requested by drunken driving defendants or their attorneys, The Herald found.

"I would say half the continuances are because the attorney hasn't been paid," attorney Kenneth Cohen said.

"Half? I'd say it's more like three out of four," an assistant state's attorney said.

"How can you tell someone you won't allow him a continuance when he's facing a charge that carries a possible jail term?" one Dist. 2 associate judge asked The Herald.

ALTHOUGH PRESIDING Judge Anton A. Smigiel of Dist. 3 calls continuances a "pet peeve," few guidelines control attorneys' requests for trial delays.

Nearly 45 per cent of drunken driving cases are delayed three to six months.

But, The Herald found more than 18 cases that languished in area courts for more than a year before disposition. Only three of the cases ended in convictions.

Witnesses disappear, police officers resign and memories become vague as cases are continued, most court officials admit. And, even the marking of a "final" date on a court sheet is not a guarantee of a hearing, The Herald found.

Cases which exceeded the "average" 3.5 continuance rate for area courts included:

- John W. Helser, 2885 Highland, Northbrook, who was convicted of drunken driving by Associate Judge Simon S. Porter Feb. 8, 1973. Attorney Franklin B. McCarty of Chicago won 10 continuances and a new trial after the conviction. On Jan. 17, 1974, charges against Helser were dropped by Des Plaines police during a rehearing before Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters.

- Phillip J. Starr, 800 Dempster St., Evanston, who first appeared in court April 6, 1972, was convicted of Elk Grove Village drunk driving charges Jan. 24, 1973 and won a new trial April 3, 1973. The DWI charge was dropped Nov. 23, 1973 after 20 court dates.

- Richard M. Miller of 777 N. Michigan, Chicago, who was arrested by Palatine police in December 1972 for drunken driving and improper lane usage. The case was decided May 8, 1974 after 14 continuances; nine were requested by Miller's attorney, Sheldon Sorosky of Chicago. Miller was found guilty of drunken driving and fined $100. The improper lane charge was dropped.

- Bruce Russell, of Whiting, Ind., who avoided drunken driving conviction when the court agreed Jan. 10, 1974 to a plea-bargained reduction to reckless driving more than a year after arrest by Rolling Meadows police. Sorosky, who also represented Russell, received six continuances in the case.

- Dennis Dyson, 9 Brookwood, Bensenville, who waited through 11 continuances from July 21, 1971 to Jan. 27, 1973 before winning acquittal on Hoffman Estates charges of drunken driving, speeding and improper passing. Eight continuances were requested by attorney Edward Krantz.

"There is no question that continuances are certainly a hindrance to the smooth operation of the court, but they are procedures with which the court must work," Smigiel told The Herald. "First of all, the DWI charge is one with a potential jail sentence. The judge has to consider if a lawyer will be appointed and allow time for a defendant to get a lawyer."

"The average police officer thinks a case should be decided the first time up, but we can't always do that," Smigiel said. Police chiefs criticize continuances because most police officers receive "court" pay and boost overtime police department costs.

"THE COURT TAKES criticism in the press because the criminal calls are piling up, but you're damned if you do and damned if you don't" grant continuances, Associate Judge John J. Limperis told an Arlington Heights courtroom Dec. 13, 1974. "If I don't allow a continuance, I'll be criticized for failure to protect the State of

Hurry and wait

Lawyer's day frustrating

EDITOR'S NOTE: Al Messerschmidt, metropolitan affairs editor, followed defense attorney Charles E. Whelan Jr. for a day as part of The Herald's examination of the Northwest suburban court system. Whelan was not included in Herald defense attorney statistics because he began private practice after the study began.

"We're only 35 minutes late," the attorney says. "We're doing great!"

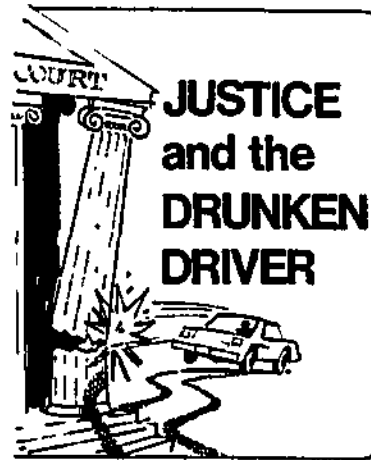

Chuck Whelan, a former assistant state's attorney, now a defense attorney, is hustling from Arlington Heights to Evanston traffic court.

Four different courtrooms. Four clients. All scheduled for hearings between 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. The Northwest suburban court system is a constant shuttle between distant municipalities like Winnetka and Hanover Park, Whelan says as the big, green Cadillac pushes through traffic toward Evanston "only" 35 minutes late.

Time is a fleeting fantasy in suburban courtrooms where 50 or 100 cases can be scheduled for a 90-minute session. Whelan's "time" is 9 a.m. when the first client of the day, who is charged with drunken driving, is to appear before Associate Judge Anthony J. Scottillo.

It's 8:45 a.m. In a small room behind the court bench in Arlington Heights Village Hall, Whelan, two court bailiffs, a police officer and Assistant State's Atty. Nick Pomaro share coffee and donuts. The discussion is light — free legal advice for a cousin of one bailiff, talk of a family illness — when Whelan turns to the day's business.

"LET'S HAVE a quick pre-trial (a conference where the prosecutor and defense attorney discuss the case before trial," Whelan says.

"I can't do anything without the officer present," Pomaro answers. Although pre-trial conferences were once used to arrange backroom "deals" that hinted short-circuited justice, preliminary discussions between attorneys have become respectable, and prosecutors are reluctant to meet when complaining witnesses like arresting police officers are not available.

"I can't do anything," Pomaro says again.

"Do you want me read the visuals?" Whelan asks. The visual tests are the arresting officer's observations of the drunken driver. Pomaro, one of the top prosecutors in suburban Dist. 2, is blind, and defense attorneys often read arrest reports for him.

"WALK UNSTEADY... staggering..." Whelan says as he reads the report aloud.

But the client is medically disabled, which could explain an unsure walk, Whelan says. Despite a denial during arrest, the client also was driving after taking medication, Whelan adds.

The hint is for reduction of the charges. Whelan has suggested the arrest evidence is weak.

"I can't do anything without the officer," Pomaro repeats.

"Let's take a by agreement," is Whelan's response. A "by agreement" would continue the case for a month without charging the continuance to either the prosecutor or defense.

AS POMARO nods, a bailiff in the courtroom bangs a gavel and Scottillo ascends the bench. Drivers who received "supervision" sentences come first for hearings in area courtrooms. Then, the continuance motions which become routine are heard by the traffic court judge.

After explaining to the client that the arresting police officer mistakenly wrote the wrong court date, that the officer will not be in court today and that a continuance is necessary, Whelan stands before Scottillo at 9:30 a.m. The explanation is quick. The continuance is granted.

"Call me tonight," Whelan says to the client in the municipal building parking lot.

"Thirty-five minutes for a continuance on a case that I was ready to argue today," Whelan says as he points for Evanston.

IN EVANSTON, a nervous client watches from the police station doorway as Whelan maneuvers for a scarce parking space.

"Sorry, we're late," he says. The client, a woman about 30 years old,

Ask Andy

The luck of the Irish—no snakes

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Nick Garcia Telles, age 10, of Gallup, N.M., for his question:

WHY ARE THERE NO SNAKES IN IRELAND?

No doubt you have heard the age-old story that the Irish hero, St. Patrick, banished all snakes from the Emerald Isle. This is indeed a noble tale, but scientists do not accept it. However, their explanation is far more fascinating than the grand old legend of St. Patrick.

It is true that there are no snakes in Ireland. What's more, no fossil remains of ancient snakes have been found there, which means that no snakes were present when St. Patrick arrived on the scene. Scientists blame this snakeless situation on the ice ages that crept over Europe during the past million years or so.

Before this Pleistocene Period of geological history, it seems that both Ireland and England were joined by dry land to the continent of Europe.

Then this region was buried alive under massive glaciers. The plants were frozen and crushed; the birds took flight, and the four-footed beasts ran as far south as they could. But snakes and other helpless creatures must have been trapped and crushed by the cruel ice.

Meantime, the enormous glaciers froze a lot of water that rightfully belonged in the oceans. The seas sank perhaps 200 or 300 feet below their present level. Finally, the global climate grew warmer and the last of the great glaciers began to melt. As they departed, many animals returned home from the south.

However, all that melting ice was pouring into the oceans—and the sea level began to rise. The rising waters flooded in to separate England and Ireland from the continent of Europe. Already a few snakes had crawled back to England. But they never had a chance to cross the water and travel to the Emerald Isle. Actually, the snakes were banned from Ireland by rising water from melting glaciers. This explanation is logical, and there is plenty of evidence to back it up. However, some people claim that when snakes are taken to Ireland they cannot survive in the wild. Even the scientists are not positive why this is so—which still leaves us with a small mystery.

Snakes cannot abide the cold, which is why none survives in polar regions. However, there are no native snakes in Bermuda, Hawaii or New Zealand, where the weather is nice and warm. Like Ireland, these islands are surrounded by stretches of salty sea water, which land snakes cannot cross.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Eldon Hemmlinger, age 11, of Winnipeg, Man., Canada, for his question:

WHAT ARE ROTIFERS?

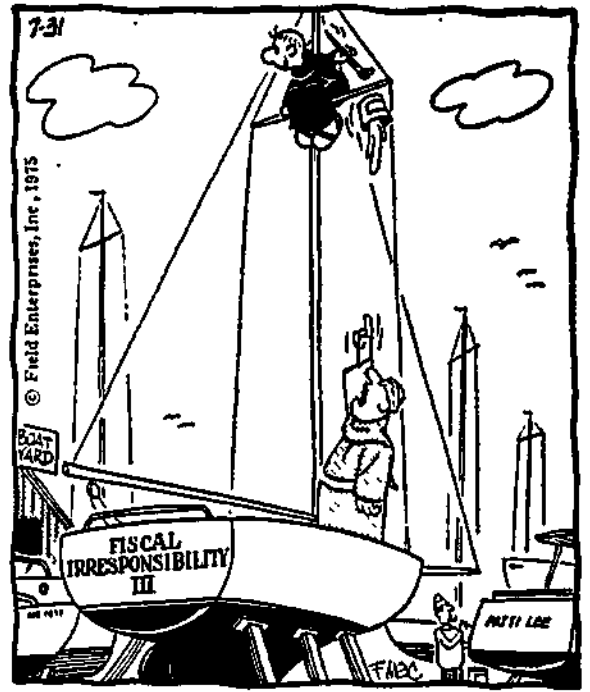

A pond of still water may look perfectly clean and clear, but chances are it is populated with a multitude of tiny creatures, too small to see. Some of them will be rotifers. Magnified under a microscope, they look like chubby little tree trunks, each crowned with a circle of whiskery branches. Actually the branches are busy little feelers called cilia, sweeping the water for mini-fragments of food.

The tiny mouth is in the center of the circle of cilia. From there the food goes down to be digested inside the trunk. A rotifer also uses his cilia to swim around. Male and female rotifers sometimes unite to produce offspring. However, the female rotifer can produce little ones all by herself.

When 4NT bid isn't a Blackwood method

When you play blackwood should you use all four-notrump bids as ace requests?

That is the simple way to play the convention. Later on you and your partners might want to play some four-notrump calls as strong bids in notrump. Before doing so, make sure that you are in complete agreement as to which bids aren't Blackwood. You can make this as complicated as you wish, but the best thing to do is to keep it simple.

Thus, as a starter agree that an immediate four notrump response to partner's opening bid of one, two or three notrump is a plain raise and does not ask for aces.

North's four notrump shows 15 tomons.

16 points. His plus was the three 10 spots. South jumps to six because he holds 17 points plus one 10 and two aces.

The slam makes easily when the jack of clubs drops on the second lead. If it failed to drop, South would have had to locate the queen of diamonds.

Herald opinion

Save suburbs from rubbish

Cleaning litter and other debris from our roadsides and vacant properties seems like an endless task, but local and state officials, as well as concerned citizens, are beginning to make headway.

They have started a war on persons dumping garbage along the roadside and at illegal dumping sites and have begun cracking down on the owners of those sites.

The problem, mostly occurring in unincorporated areas, is not the normal litter of paper cups and bottles along the road but rather old refrigerators, stoves, sinks and cars left to rust in the weeds. Also dumped on these sites are bags and boxes of garbage.

While it may seem harmless to the dumpers, the area soon becomes a playground for curious youngsters and a home for rodents and insects.

To end the rash of dumping, township officials, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott's investigators and the Cook County Sheriff's Police are working together. They are finding the people responsible for the dumping, prosecuting them and collecting the fines levied.

Officials also are working closely with township residents who spot the violators. Residents copy the dumpers' license plate numbers and report them to the sheriff who then orders arrests.

We commend these officials and citizens for again proving that if people want something better they have to work together to get it. But even with these efforts there are "sore spots" where officials and citizens cannot continually patrol.

The only people who can clean up these spots are those suburban residents who continue to dump garbage and other debris in open areas.

Have you thought of a garage sale? They're clamping down on dumping.

Cannibalism among Republicans

Though it received little attention outside his home district, the resignation of a state representative from Champaign last week pointed up a problem facing both the legislature and the Illinois Republican Party.

The problem is that of attracting and keeping good legislators and political candidates.

In the case of the legislature it is the inexorable growth of legislative sessions which draw the members away from their businesses and families for more and more weeks each year.

In the case of the Republican Party, it is a kind of cannibalism.

The legislator who announced his retirement from the House is John C. Hirschfeld, 39. In three terms in Springfield, he established a reputation as one of the most conservative, and one of the most competent members of the House.

Among the many honors he has been accorded were the titles of "Best Freshman Representative" in his first session; one of "50 outstanding Legislators in the United States" chosen by the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University.

In 1973, the Illinois College Republican Federation named him the outstanding member of the Illinois GOP.

Hirschfeld said he was resigning because the growth of legislative sessions to eight and nine months of the year, often with 16-hour days and Saturday and Sunday sessions are not compatible with his family duties.

With six young children, Hirschfeld hardly has to justify himself further.

However, there is another side to his decision. Hirschfeld has long told friends that his political career was going to be a case of "up or out."

The way the Republicans have behaved in recent years, there has been little chance for younger members of the party to move up.

Part of the reason is that the established "names" refuse to risk themselves in close contests against Democrats, thus foreclosing advancement for the Hirschfelds of the party.

In 1972, the first three choices of the party leaders for the U.S. Senate — Presidential assistant Donald Rumsfeld, Attorney General William J. Scott, and U.S. Rep. John Anderson of Rockford — all refused to carry the fight against Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson.

Hirschfeld offered himself for the race, but the party settled instead on George Burditt.

In 1975, U.S. Attorney James Thompson was considered the best bet against Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley. Thompson demurred, and the role of sacrificial lamb was assumed by Alderman John J. Hoellen.

It was Scott again whom the Republicans wanted as their best hope to defeat Gov. Daniel Walker. Scott, again, said no and Thompson stepped in.

Scott's refusal closed off the possibility of what Hirschfeld has long wanted — to run for attorney general. He even considered at one point announcing for governor himself, in the hope that the party might then pressure the better known Scott into the race.

With nothing to do but run in place, Hirschfeld decided that the rat race in Springfield was no longer worth the cost to his family life.

He did not, however, announce his retirement from politics and it is likely he will work vigorously for Thompson and Scott, with an eye on 1978 when the possibility exists of a Scott candidacy for governor, and a vacancy in the attorney general's office.

'Referendumitis' can be cured with facts

It seems these days that if it's not one referendum, it's another.

Take the resident of the Village of Palatine who must have referendumitis. Within the past several months he has been asked to create a library district and later to expand the library boundaries. He voted on a park district referendum to buy an indoor ice rink. Coming up is a fire district referendum and another one for increased services and facilities at Harper College. Too few residents take time to vote in these special referendum elections, in many cases because people never really understand enough about them.

Realizing this, Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has a good idea to educate residents on the Sept. 9 fire department referendum. He will appoint a nonpartisan citizens group to promote the referendum through public informational meetings.

"Getting all the facts to the people is necessary to secure an educated vote," Jones said recently. He is absolutely right.

Palatine Chamber salutes Jaycees

We of the business community would like to salute the dedicated young men of the Palatine Jaycees under the direction of Dennis Lundgren, president, for their continuing programs to benefit the community, not the least of which is the annual Fourth of July celebration young and old have been enjoying for many years.

This was a "Fantastic Fourth" — the best ever beginning with the parade in the morning under the chairmanship of Tom Tempelman of the First Bank & Trust Co. and ending with the spectacular display of fireworks. Despite many obstacles the celebration went on as scheduled. Participation in the arts and crafts fair sponsored by the Jaycee Wives was one of the largest and most versatile displays in the northwest we've seen and was most enjoyable.

The responsibility for the entire day (including the tremendous financial obligation) would be reason enough for men and women of less caliber to forsake the project.

Thanks Palatine Jaycees for your dedicated and ongoing civic spirit.

A kind police officer who aided

I wish to commend a police officer who handled an auto accident on July 23 at Dwyer and West Campbell.

There were no injuries but both drivers were in the wrong and both were ticketed. This officer, who arrived on a motorcycle, was so thorough in his examination, several times walking Campbell, checking the rubber streaks for speeding on the part of an adult male in a heavy, loaded station wagon. My neighbor and I were concerned with the second driver, a young man (David) who was in shock at what he had done to his parents' car. He had just passed driver training and received his license.

The officer, whom I cannot identify, was kind and concerned for the young driver.

I pray such a man would be on hand were I to have an accident. He is a credit to our fine police force.

We should judge the trustees

Recent efforts by Trustee Kerr to establish some criteria on when executive sessions should or should not be called, within Wheeling village government, are to be commended. Trustee Kerr has seen the need to define some of the basic operational policies within village government, which previously were carried out at the whim of whatever group of people who were in trustee positions.

The Village of Wheeling has grown considerably in the last 10 years; unfortunately formalizing policies regarding the accountability of village government to the taxpayers and to the general public has not. Verbal communication's time during regular Monday night village board meetings is far too formal and too intimidating for the general public (why should the public when it wants to address the board have to be seated at a level of four feet below the eye level of board members? It is the public which judges the trustees, not the other way around!)

This is the 200th anniversary of a nation that was established in the belief that government is by the people, for the people and of the people. Let us hope that the village government here in Wheeling affirms this belief, and moves to establish a procedure where accountability and public input are a natural part of this village's governmental operations.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN, July 31 — An American schooner seized two men who said under questioning that Gov. Guy Carleton in Canada would launch an attack in the future from St. John's, Que.

Old 'impoundment' cry haunting school funding

In the days before Richard Nixon was forced from office, even before impeachment seemed a possibility, a favorite word in Washington, D. C. was "impoundment."

And that is how Illinois schools, the State Board of Education and Gov. Daniel Walker got into the middle of a hassle last week about how the state should pay state school aid.

As you might guess, the line between those two things is not a straight one, but there is a connection and if you'll take a minute to reflect on an ironic story you'll see how life can take mysterious twists, even in government.

It was back in the days when Watergate was becoming a major concern and when cries were going up from Capitol Hill about Nixon's impoundment of funds that the story starts.

MICHAEL BAKALIS was serving as the state's last elected school superintendent and the Chicago Public Schools were, as always, running out of money. In a highly publicized move Bakalis announced one October that he was going to give the schools an extra state school aid payment that month, and temporarily relieve a cash shortage in Chicago.

Throughout the suburbs, school officials yawned. They knew that the "extra" state aid payment didn't matter much. They assumed that Bakalis would simply skip a payment at the end of the fiscal year to get everything back on schedule.

Unfortunately, officials of the Rockford public schools didn't figure this out. Since the state traditionally made two state aid payments in June as the fiscal year was ending, the Rockford officials decided they would get one payment a month except for two payments in October and two in June — a total of 13 payments.

When that didn't happen, Rockford school officials found their budget squeezed, howled "impoundment" — which was a fashionable word — and filed a lawsuit.

Education today

by Wandalyn Rice

That didn't get them far, but in 1974 a sympathetic legislature passed a law which said the state would, from then on, be required to make monthly state school aid payments in the amount of 1/12th of the amount of state aid for 10 months August through May and one-sixth (a double payment) in June. In short, Bakalis could never again make an early payment and take it back at the end of the year.

WE SKIP AHEAD to last week. Gov. Walker has cut the state school aid budget by five per cent and, for reasons of his own, wants to make sure the cut goes into effect with the first state school aid payment in August.

The state board of education (which has succeeded Bakalis) wants to take the entire $81 million cut out of the last payment to be made to school districts in June. That will lessen the impact and give the legislature time to override the governor's cut before it hits the schools.

Walker issues a press release saying the state board is legally required to make the cut immediately. If they don't, he says, they will be guilty of overspending and will force schools to close early in June.

That's where the earlier Rockford case is involved. The law Walker says requires an immediate cut is the 1974 measure which says state aid payments will be paid out one-twelfth at a time for 10 months and one-sixth in June. The payments must, Walker says, be one-twelfth of the amount appropriated for the state aid formula. The cut must take effect immediately.

No, say state education officials. The payments must be one-twelfth of the amount the schools would get if the state school aid formula had been fully funded. Besides, the state has never cut payments early in the year; it has always waited until June.

LAWYERS FOR both sides read the 1974 law. It could mean what Walker says it means or it could mean what the state education officials say it means. In legal terms, there is a genuine issue.

The one thing most school officials are sure of, however, is that without the 1974 law, which was passed because Rockford decided it was entitled to 13 state aid payments one year, the state board would have the right to pay state aid anyway it wants.

Some officials get testy when that is pointed out to them. Walker is just using the 1974 law as the "thread" on which to hang his case. Without that law, he would have found something else, they say.

That may be true. But the fact remains that an effort by Rockford to get more money one year (13 payments) just may end up meaning that everyone will take a cut sooner this year.

Maybe that's what the old saying about chickens coming home is all about.

$300 average increase seen on GM cars

DETROIT (UPI) — Industry pricing leader General Motors confirmed Monday that it may follow the highest-in-history 1975-model prices with an average $300-a-car increase on the 1976 models that debut this fall.

The announcement could spark a buying surge in August and September by Americans trying to beat the higher costs, one industry analyst said. That was the case last August when sales nearly equaled record 1973 levels before dropping disastrously when the '75s were introduced.

Detroit Dilemma
Auto Makers Agonize Over '76 Model Prices And the Effect on Sales

It isn't easy to determine what size price increase the consumer will tolerate. Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor, says he has seen one survey that indicates the public is resigned to rises of up to $100 a car. "But it didn't say that they'd buy," he adds.

the '76 price increase

DETROIT — Ford Motor Co. said it could raise prices up to 6%, or an average $335 on 1976 model cars and light trucks for fleet customers. The increase on heavy-truck orders by fleets could go as high as 7%, the auto maker added.

Ford's announcement to its dealers.

Due to the heavy over supply of new cars and trucks we are forced to literally give away 100 cars and trucks for a 1.00 profit (legal tender). You will never have an opportunity like this again, especially since the 1976 models are going up approx. 6% or 300.00 per car, as stated in the Wall Street Journal.

Schaumburg wins 9th Paddock Olympics

Wheeling couldn't do it and next year, when the Paddock Olympics convene for the 10th time, it will be Schaumburg that will be out to grab the brass ring for the second year in a row, something that hasn't been done since 1968.

Wheeling, the champions from 1974, gave a good accounting of themselves as they overcame a poor showing in the tennis and softball on Tuesday with a strong track and field effort on Wednesday.

But the effort wasn't enough to duplicate the feat last accomplished by the Palatine Park District in 1967 and 1968 and the Schaumburg Park District took the 9th Paddock Olympics championship by a solid 13.3 points. It marks the seventh different team to win the games, indicative of the balance of talent that resides in the area park districts.

in the point standings were Elk Grove (224.5), Arlington (200.3), Mount Prospect (194.5), Palatine (109.5), Hoffman Estates (42.5), Hanover Park (34) and unattached (15).

Schaumburg's winning total was 243.5.

Schaumburg piled up big points in four events. In the all-important Tug-O-War they knocked off Mount Prospect and Palatine for the title.

The champions also scored highly on the standing long jump, kickball and the softball throw.

Jean Meyer (12-year-old girls), Greg Charuat (9-boys) and Jeff Hamaker (13-boys) all won their respective divisions for Schaumburg in the standing long jump.

Wheeling's Nancy Jaszurski (9-girls) and Suzanne Brown (10-girls) won their divisions of the standing long jump while Val Nicholson and Donna Miloch pulled off a 1-2 finish for Wheeling in the 13-girls bracket.

Kickball was dominated by Arlington Heights and Schaumburg. Tom Riles (10-boys), Jim Callahan (8-boys), Bob Schanahan (12-boys) and Ann Duetz (8-girls) all won division titles for Arlington.

Taking age-group kickball titles for Schaumburg were Shari McArthur (9-girls) and Tami Kasting (12-girls).

Schaumburg completely controlled the softball throw, notching 63 points to top the second highest team, Elk Grove, by 18 points.

Shelly Simmerer (8-girls), Shari McArthur (9-girls), Tami Kasting (12-girls), Laurie Ostrom (13-girls) and Bob Smolka (11-boys) all won softball throwing age-group titles for Schaumburg.

Elk Grove got most of their points in the softball throwing event from four people, each winners of an age group title. They were Mike Banach (13-boys), Charlie Pritchett (12-boys), Rich Mele (9-boys) and Craig Wiestadt (8-boys).

Wheeling finished strong in the dashes, an area that they dominated last year in winning the team championship.

Their girl sprinters proved they were the fastest around in three age groups. Ann Farrara won the 11-girls, Nancy Jaszurski the 9-girls and Suzanne Brown the 10-girls 50-yard dash.

For Wheeling boys, Ian Brown (8-boys) won his age group in the 50-yard dash.

In the 100-yard dash Wheeling got titles from Jeff Wilson (10-boys), Jane Bredfield (8-girls), Nancy Jaszurski (9-girls) and Ann Ferrara (11-girls).

Mount Prospect did well in the 100-yard dash, also. Roger Nelson (8-boys) and Tom Alesia (9-boys) won titles for their team.

Mount Prospect also fared well in the jump rope as they got a title from Cathy Scopa (12-girls).

One of the few bright spots of the day for Hoffman Estates came in the jump rope as Debbie Moran won the 8-girls bracket.

In the team relay, the final event of the Olympics, Wheeling won with a total of nine points. Schaumburg was second with seven and Elk Grove and Arlington Heights tied for third with six apiece.

'Why?' ask Wheeling's players

Ken Margalski's summer routine was a strange one but now it's over.

Margalski worked the graveyard shift at United Parcel in Northbrook, then headed home for a full day of sleep before making it out to the baseball diamond and his position as right-fielder for the Wheeling American Legion team.

Today was the day Margalski and his teammates were to host the opening round of the Cook County Legion tournament at Wheeling High School. But a combination of Legion politics and official bungling led to a last-minute shift of tournament sites.

As the host team, Wheeling was entitled to a berth in the five-team, double-elimination meet. Now, that spot belongs to Northbrook's Legion team and Wheeling is out.

Margalski had been looking forward to the tourney.

"We had a tough season, I know," he said. "We lost six games by one run, but we didn't have a bad team. We had a good team. I was going in confident."

bash when they met for practice. Grybash had been informed of the change on Sunday.

"He told us he had gotten a call from the Cook County guy," explained catcher Sal Fioretti. "He told us we were left out of it. I was disappointed. I thought we could have beat Arlington Heights or Park Ridge. I was looking forward to it. Last year I had the best part of my season in the tournament."

Fioretti, who will be a sophomore at Western Illinois University in the fall, was looking ahead to the tourney experience.

"I didn't make my college team last year and this is my last year in Legion, so I thought if I did good in the tournament something might come of it. It meant pretty much to me."

The ones affected most are the players who put in the most time with Wheeling, veterans like Carl Pfister, Bob Burke, and Margalski. For them, the disappointment was a bitter pill to swallow.

"I'd like to call that guy and tell him off," said Margalski. "I'd like to tell him what he did to the kids."

CHAMPS ARE WE. Mert Taylor (right), the coordinator of the 9th Paddock Olympics, hoists the championship trophy with the history of the Olympics. Wheeling fashed second.

The Wheeling players and coach Gerry Grybash were fully aware of their privileged position in the county tournament. It may have even become an excuse for poor or lackadaisical play. At one point in the season, in fact, Grybash threatened to make the team play in the Ninth District tourney, forcing them to give up their bye.

"I know we were considered a goof-off team and everybody felt that way," said Al Newman, who, like Margalski, will be too old for Legion ball next year. "We joked about the tournament, like we really didn't belong in it with our record."

"But I wanted to play in it," Newman went on. "For the competition—that's the most important thing. And I think we could have done well. We have lots of good hitters and our pitchers were coming around."

"Now, it's kinda weird—I won't see any of the guys anymore. It's all over."

The Wheeling players learned of the bad news Monday evening from Gry-

Grybash had the unenviable task of informing the players of the Legion's eleventh-hour decision.

"The guys who really get hurt by this are guys like Burke, Sal, Pfister, Margalski, Newman—guys that really cared about the team," said Gerry. Bob Grybash, Gerry's brother and assistant coach, displayed the same regret.

"I feel bad for the kids and for Gerry too," he said. "We were looking ahead to the tourney and now it's gone."

Playing in the Cook County tournament meant a lot to the Wheeling kids—for varied reasons. For Newman, it meant a final chance to mold the team into a winning unit.

"We never really worked as a team," said Newman. "That was our one big problem. We needed something to pull us together."

Expos stop Cubs behind Rogers

Steve Rogers scattered eight hits and walked just two men Wednesday in pitching his seventh complete game of the season in hurling the Montreal Expos to a 6-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Rogers was supported by a 13-hit attack against four Cub pitchers, including loser Ray Burris, now 8-8.

A walk to Pete Mackanin and singles by Tim Lincecum, Rogers and Pepe Mangual gave Montreal a 2-0 lead in the second inning. The Expos picked up two more runs in the third off Burris as Gary Carter beat out an infield hit and scored all the way from first on throwing errors by Bill Madlock and Pete LaCock. Mike Jorgensen's ninth home run of the year followed.

Rick Monday's 13th homer led off the Cubs' fourth inning for their only run.

A double by Jim Dwyer and Larry Bittner's single gave the Expos another run in the fifth, and Montreal scored again in the eighth on a double by Foll and Dwyer's single off Milt Wilcox.

Madlock, the NL's leading hitter, had one hit in four at-bats to drop his average to .354.

CUBS' BILL MADLOCK goes high in the air but fails to come down with throw as Montreal's Gary Carter dives into third on his quick circuit of bases Wednesday. Carter scored on infield hit and two throwing errors.

Prospect's wrestling coach resigns to take head post in Oklahoma

Prospect High School is looking for a new head wrestling coach.

Bill Harlow, head man at the Dist. 214 school for the past four years, resigned this week to accept a similar position at the high school in Broken Arrow, Okla., a wrestling hotbed.

Harlow also was a frosh football coach at Prospect.

"Bill has family ties in Oklahoma and this was an excellent opportunity for him to go back near his wife's home and where he went to school," said Prospect Athletic Director George Gattas Wednesday in making the announcement.

Harlow currently is working on his Master's Degree at Winona (Minn.) State College, and he will complete work there in mid-August.

"Bill saw an opportunity to develop a feeder system through the elementary school district in Oklahoma, a unit system," said Gattas, "and he didn't feel he could pass up the chance at this stage in his coaching career."

Prospect is in the process now of accepting applications for the wrestling position, and coaches should contact the high school.

Rozelle Rule in jeopardy

The National Football League has no immediate plans to remove the controversial "Rozelle Rule" from its bylaws even through a U.S. District Judge believes the rule is a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Asked to comment on the decision of U.S. District Judge Warren J. Ferguson to issue a temporary restraining order in respect of running back Cullen Bryant's move from the Los Angeles Rams to the Detroit Lions, an NFL spokesman said:

"Today's action has no significance other than to preserve the status quo until the issue can be aired at a hearing."

"We will take every measure available to us within the framework of the law to defend the principle of competitive balance, a factor vital to the National Football League's success."

The spokesman declined further comment.

Bears pare down to 77

The Chicago Bears Wednesday reduced their roster to 77 with a series of player transactions. Defensive tackle Greg Wojcik was sent to St. Louis in exchange for Wesley Miller, 6-2, 255 pounds, a free agent center.

Waivers were recalled on kickers Mike Dean and Berl Simmons. Simmons was awarded to Detroit and Dean was traded to Buffalo for an undisclosed draft choice.

Safety Norm Hodgins, starting his second year with the Bears, was put on waivers and awarded to Green Bay, and veteran offensive tackle Steve Kinny, a third year pro, was cut from the squad.

And in other sports news...

Dave Kingman of the New York Mets and formerly of Prospect High School was named NL Player-of-the-Week on the strength of seven homers during a 12-game period... The U. S. Wheelchair Basketball team, led by Don Van Dello of Wheeling, scored two more victories in the Golden Cup Tournament in Bruges, Belgium.

Weekend competition at Meadowhill Park

by MIKE KLEIN

Mount Prospect brothers Bob and Rich Vehe plus Schaumburg's Laura Walter will pursue titles during this weekend's National Track Championships cycling finals at Meadowhill Park in Northbrook.

Bob Vehe, 1975 Illinois senior men's champion, will pursue his first national title. Vehe placed third in senior men's kilometer and fifth in match sprints last summer. Match sprints were also 1,000 meters.

Bob's younger brother Rich, former midget boys national titlist, has advanced to seek his first junior boys national honors.

Schaumburg's Walter, 1975 Illinois midget girls champion, will contend for her first national title.

The very scenic Meadowhill Park, also site of this weekend's American Legion Cook County Playoffs in baseball, is hosting its third consecutive cycling national finals and fifth overall.

held the national championships in 1957 and 1963.

And the hosting Northbrook Cycle Committee, Inc., has already been granted the 1976 finals. National cycling championships began in 1921 in Washington, D.C.

The country's greatest cyclists will compete here through Saturday evening's final session.

Top competition is assured among senior women where Sue Novarro and Sheila Young, both of Detroit, will continue their long-standing battle.

Young edged Novarro for the 1973 national title but they reversed positions last summer at Northbrook. Novarro highlighted her strong 1974 season with second in match sprints at the world Cycling Championships in Montreal.

Young has also been among the world's finest speed skaters. An Olympian in 1972, she previously held the 500-meter women's speed skating world record.

Roger Young, Sheila's brother, comes to Northbrook with one goal in mind, regaining the senior men's sprint title he captured in 1973 but lost here last summer.

Cycling will occur almost around-the-clock today, Friday and Saturday at Meadowhill Park. Preliminary heats began Wednesday and will continue each day at 8 a.m.

Thursday and Friday evening racing begins at 7 p.m. with Saturday's last session at 6 p.m.

Palatine grid signup scheduled on Aug. 9

The Palatine Amateur Football Association will hold its first meeting of the season Saturday, Aug. 9 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Palatine High School gymnasium. At that time, participants will be able to register for the fall grid program and pick up their equipment. It will be the final registration.

The program consists of two lightweight travel teams, two heavyweight travel teams, and several in-house teams. Total fee for the season is $40 per boy or $65 for multi-boy families. The program is open to boys in fifth through eighth grades.

Direct any questions to Gordon Long at 358-3911.

Events will have their finals each evening as listed:

Thursday: Midget girl one-mile, midget boy one-mile, intermediate girl two-mile, women pursuit, junior spring and senior pursuit.

Friday: Midget girl quarter-mile, midget boy quarter-mile, intermediate girl half-mile, intermediate boy half-mile and junior eight-mile point race.

Saturday: Senior team pursuit, women's sprints, senior men's sprints, midget girl half-mile, midget boy half-mile, intermediate girl one-mile, intermediate boy one-mile, junior one-mile and senior men's 10-mile.

Thursday evening adult admission will be $1.50 for general seating and $2.50 for reserved. The pricing becomes $2.50 and $3.50 respectively Friday and Saturday.

Children six-to-12 years old are 50 cents all three nights. Younger children are free.

Report tells RTA:

'Pay all suburban deficits'

A plan to fund 100 per cent of the deficits of most suburban bus operations was proposed Wednesday by consultants to the Regional Transportation Authority.

Suburban RTA board members last week argued for 100 per cent funding of the suburban bus systems but were overridden by Chicago board members, who approved 80 per cent grants to two carriers.

RTA Chairman Milton Pikarsky said the suburban bus systems might get 100 per cent funding after studies were completed, and consultants Wednesday were presenting part of those studies.

THE NEW INTERIM system would measure income against costs, and each system would get a percentage efficiency rating. Systems meeting a standard established by the RTA would get full funding of deficits, and systems below the standard would get only a percentage.

Suburban board members have said the suburban bus operations are entitled to 100 per cent deficit funding because the Chicago Transit Authority and the commuter railroads will recover 100 per cent of their losses.

Pikarsky and other board members say suburban bus systems differ so much that they cannot be easily compared. They note that some bus companies charge more than a dollar for rides, while Niles operates a free service for its residents.

The RTA board should approve an interim plan until a long-term program can be developed and adopted. The consultants said the long-term plan may take several months.

THE RTA is moving toward its promise to have some new suburban services in operation by fall, staff member Brian Cudahy said Wednesday. He said he is negotiating several experimental routes that could begin soon, and he's preparing a transfer system for the Chicago & North Western Ry. and the CTA.

Cudahy said he expects new buses purchased by the RTA or suburban transit districts to arrive soon, and plans are being developed to modify some CTA buses for suburban service. Some of the CTA buses will be cut in half and shortened to 28 feet, Cudahy said.

Consultants also gave the RTA board members a series of questions to help formulate grant policies, the first of which is whether the RTA should require local subsidy from communities served by RTA buses. Pikarsky has said before that he thinks local contributions will be necessary.

6 cities get advisories on ozone

Ozone advisories were issued Wednesday for Chicago, Joliet, Rockford, Peoria, Rock Island and East St. Louis. The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency also raised the Chicago ozone advisory to intermediate stage because ozone levels stayed above .07 parts per million for four hours and then rose to .170 — the highest Illinois ozone reading this summer.

4 die in plane crash

The four victims of a light plane crash near DuPage Airport Tuesday night were all Elgin residents, authorities said Wednesday. The rented single-engine plane crashed shortly after takeoff and killed Glenn R. Diller, 23, the pilot; Lawrence Richter, 24; William Richter, 23; and Daniel J. Honert, 21. The crash is being investigated by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Services expanded: Daley

Chicago city services will be expanded rather than cut in the 1976 budget, Mayor Richard J. Daley said Wednesday. "No services will be cut in Chicago," he said. "No, they'll be expanded. We should do more for the senior citizens and for the handicapped, and there are a lot of other people." He also said the rising cost of living will be kept in mind in considering possible pay increases for city employees.

Clerk to put $1 million in area savings, loans

About $1 million of Cook County funds will be invested in Chicago-area savings and loan associations, Circuit Court Clerk Morgan M. Finley said Wednesday.

The funds will receive 5.75 per cent interest and will be invested in 90-day certificates of deposit. The program, which includes 178 Chicago and suburban savings and loan associations, is the first which places county funds outside of banks.

Driving range opens on 1st

The Cook County Forest Preserve District will open a golf driving range Friday at the Highland Woods Golf Course, near Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

The lighted driving range, about a half mile south of Algonquin Road and east of Elm Road, will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

An 18-hole golf course is under construction at the site.

Mental health aid near?

Northwest suburban mental health agencies may receive advanced payments from the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health through legislation that was recently signed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Illinois briefs

Rap Army on river project

A conservation group charged Wednesday that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is covering up the extent of its navigation project on the upper Mississippi River so it can get congressional approval for the plan. John Martin, executive director of the Coalition of American Rivers, said there is evidence a dam near Alton is only part of a plan to increase the depth of the Mississippi channel to 12 feet, which would cause biological decay and further pollute the river. Railroads are also objecting to a deeper channel because it would allow more barge traffic, which competes with the railroads for business.

Percy asks probe

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the General Accounting Office will investigate whether federal money was used in Chicago and nine other large American cities to fund illegal police spying activities. The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress and will make the study at the request of the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. The GAO has already found that $339,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds had been paid to members of the Chicago Police Intelligence Division.

County briefs

The bill, which was sponsored by the late State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Rep. John E. Porter, R-Evanston, extends a trial program of advanced grants-in-aid that began last year.

Area agencies eligible to receive the funds include the Maine Township Mental Health Center, Orchard Center for Mental Health and Clearbrook Center for the Retarded.

'Get birth papers now'

Cook County birth certificates for children who will begin school in September should be obtained "now," County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper said Wednesday.

Parents of school children can avoid the back-to-school rush for birth certificates by mailing $2, payable to Kusper, to 130 N. Wells St., clerk's office of vital statistics, Chicago. Written requests should include the full name of the child, date and place of birth, father's name and mother's maiden name.

Navy base trial to start

The first of three guards facing a court martial involving the death of a young recruit at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center will go to trial Tuesday. Marine Cpl. William T. Mason, 22, of Massachusetts, will be the first to go before a court martial. Separate military trials are being arranged for Cpl. Nebojsa Popovich, 22, of Grayslake, and Sgt. Michael A. Williams, 23, of Minnesota. All are charged with assault and battery, maltreatment and violating correctional center regulations. The Marines are accused of beating Steven Stawnychy, 18, of Minnesota, while he was in the base correctional center. Stawnychy died June 3 when he stepped in front of a commuter train near the base shortly after he was released from the correctional center.

Kerner undergoes surgery

Former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner underwent surgery for a hernia Tuesday at Illinois Masonic Medical Center. A hospital spokesman said Kerner, 66, was resting in good condition following the operation.

Crash kills man in chase

One person was killed and another injured Wednesday when their car crashed following a high speed chase by police on the Calumet Expressway. Police said the passenger, Craig Padgett, 18, of Dolton, was killed after his body was thrown from the car. The driver, Gilbert Scotti, 19, of Lansing, was listed in good condition Wednesday at a Hammond Hospital. Police said they were pursuing the car after they received a report that someone was breaking a window at a Holiday Inn in Hammond. Several police departments were involved in the chase, which reached speeds up to 165 miles an hour. The car went out of control at an exit and crashed.

Crane on goals panel

U.S. Rep. Phillip M. Crane, R-12th, has been named to a panel directed to work for conservative goals in the Democrat and Republican parties. The panel "can provide a vehicle for conservatives active in either of the two major parties to influence the direction of events in each party toward conservative goals," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Committee on Conservative Alternatives, which set up the subcommittee.

Hartigan defends move

U.S. Gov. Neil Hartigan Wednesday defended his attempt to aid the people of tornado-stricken Canton, Ill. Hartigan said the mayor of Canton asked him for help after trying unsuccessfully to reach Gov. Daniel Walker, and Hartigan called the White House for assistance. William Goldberg, legal counsel to Walker, Tuesday charged that Hartigan's calls had interfered with the state's chain of command.

State fair fate at stake

The future of the Illinois State Fair could be at stake next month unless officials prevent a repeat of last year's experience. The administration of the 1974 fair was investigated by several state agencies and a Sangamon County grand jury, which described management's practices as "a disaster" and filled with "stupidity and ignorance." One official said the state apparently paid for some goods and services that were never received, and some of the cash collected at the fair was never deposited. The grand jury said it could not indict anyone because conditions were so chaotic that it could not fix responsibility on any one individual. Legislators have tried to change control of the fair, and some have asked to have it abolished.

The doctor says

Bulk improves the quality of diet

I owe you a note of thanks after reading your column on the use of bran for bulk in our diet. I cross my fingers, and it still works fine.

I'm 73 years old and have used a walker for more than 15 years because of a broken hip, and the bulk from bran has really improved my life.

Thank you. Doctors are human and like to hear when someone has benefited from one of their suggestions. I'm no exception.

Many people have been surprised at how much better their bowels function after including more bulk in the diet from bran, whole wheat products, whole wheat bread and bulky vegetables. It takes some people three weeks to get through the stage of adjustment from the change in the diet, but it helps most people who have been eating diets low in bulk.

And, I wanted to put your letter in the column also to remind my readers that senior citizens with longstanding problems such as yours can profit from improving their diet. There are very few instances in which bulk will not be tolerated. It is often necessary, though, to get over the idea that bulk is roughage-and realize that most of when malnourished by digestive action, is "softage" and is not rough or harmful.

Please tell me how a blood clot in the lungs affects a person. What causes it? Is it visible on an X ray? I would also like to know how it should be treated?

Most blood clots in the lungs come from clots that have formed in the legs or lower part of the body. They dislodge and pass through the right side of the heart into the lungs.

Such clots are always dangerous. A clot may be small and cause few symptoms, but larger ones usually cause chest pain, even shock and death. The attack resembles a heart attack and it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between the two.

Many of the clots that lodge in the lung can be seen in the lungs or the effect can be seen. Large clots, though, that nearly obstruct a main, large artery to the lungs sometimes need to be diagnosed by more accurate means, including injecting dye into the circulation and in this way seeing the obstruction.

Treatment depends on the individual case. Emergency treatment is sometimes needed as a life-saving measure. The source of the clots is usually important. Treatment attempts to prevent more clot formation or release of those already formed. This is why bedrest is often used when the leg is involved. The leg may be kept elevated and heat may be used.

Medicines to prevent clotting are usually indicated and in some instances it is important to surgically tie off the veins where the clots are formed.

Schaumburg wins 9th Paddock Olympics

Wheeling couldn't do it and next year, when the Paddock Olympics convene for the 10th time, it will be Schaumburg that will be out to grab the brass ring for the second year in a row, something that hasn't been done since 1968.

Wheeling, the champions from 1974, gave a good accounting of themselves as they overcame a poor showing in the tennis and softball on Tuesday with a strong track and field effort on Wednesday.

But the effort wasn't enough to duplicate the feat last accomplished by the Palatine Park District in 1967 and 1968 and the Schaumburg Park District took the 9th Paddock Olympics championship by a solid 13.3 points. It marks the seventh different team to win the games, indicative of the balance of talent that resides in the area park districts.

In the point standings were Elk Grove (224.5), Arlington (200.3), Mount Prospect (196.5), Palatine (198.5), Hoffman Estates (42.5), Hanover Park (34) and unattached (15).

Schaumburg's winning total was 243.5.

Schaumburg piled up big points in four events. In the all-important Tug-O-War they knocked off Mount Prospect and Palatine for the title.

The champions also scored highly on the standing long jump, kickball and the softball throw.

Jean Meyer (12-year-old girls), Greg Charvat (9-boys) and Jeff Hamaker (13-boys) all won their respective divisions for Schaumburg in the standing long jump.

Wheeling's Nancy Jaszurski (9-girls) and Suzanne Brown (10-girls) won their divisions of the standing long jump while Val Nicholson and Donna Miloch pulled off a 1-2 finish for Wheeling in the 13-girls bracket.

Kickball was dominated by Arlington Heights and Schaumburg. Tom Riles (10-boys), Jim Callahan (8-boys), Bob Schanahan (12-boys) and Ann Duetz (8-girls) all won division titles for Arlington.

Taking age-group kickball titles for Schaumburg were Shari McArthur (9-girls) and Tami Kasting (12-girls).

Schaumburg completely controlled the softball throw, notching 63 points to top the second highest team, Elk Grove, by 18 points.

Shelly Simmerer (8-girls), Shari McArthur (9-girls), Tami Kasting (12-girls), Laurie Ostrom (13-girls) and Bob Smolka (11-boys) all won softball throwing age-group titles for Schaumburg.

Elk Grove got most of their points in the softball throwing event from four people, each winners of an age group title. They were Mike Banach (13-boys), Charlie Pritchett (12-boys), Rich Mele (9-boys) and Craig Wichstadt (8-boys).

Wheeling finished strong in the dashes, an area that they dominated last year in winning the team championship.

Their girl sprinters proved they were the fastest around in three age groups. Ann Ferrara won the 11-girls, Nancy Jaszurski the 9-girls and Suzanne Brown the 10-girls 50-yard dash.

For Wheeling boys, Ian Brown (8-boys) won his age group in the 50-yard dash.

In the 100-yard dash Wheeling got titles from Jeff Wilson (10-boys), Jane Bredfield (8-girls), Nancy Jaszurski (9-girls) and Ann Ferrara (11-girls).

Mount Prospect did well in the 100-yard dash, also. Roger Nelson (8-boys) and Tom Alesia (9-boys) won titles for their team.

Mount Prospect also fared well in the jump rope as they got a title from Cathy Scopa (12-girls).

One of the few bright spots of the day for Hoffman Estates came in the jump rope as Debbie Moran won the 8-girls bracket.

In the team relay, the final event of the Olympics, Wheeling won with a total of nine points. Schaumburg was second with seven and Elk Grove and Arlington Heights tied for third with six apiece.

'Why?' ask Wheeling's players

Ken Margalski's summer routine was a strange one but now it's over.

Margalski worked the graveyard shift at United Parcel in Northbrook, then headed home for a full day of sleep before making it out to the baseball diamond and his position as right-fielder for the Wheeling American Legion team.

Today was the day Margalski and his teammates were to host the opening round of the Cook County Legion tournament at Wheeling High School. But a combination of Legion politics and official bungling led to a last-minute shift of tournament sites.

As the host team, Wheeling was entitled to a berth in the five-team, double-elimination meet. Now, that spot belongs to Northbrook's Legion team and Wheeling is out.

Margalski had been looking forward to the tourney.

"We had a tough season, I know," he said. "We lost six games by one run, but we didn't have a bad team. We had a good team. I was going in confident."

The Wheeling players and coach Gerry Grybash were fully aware of their privileged position in the county tournament. It may have even become an excuse for poor or lackadaisical play. At one point in the season, in fact, Grybash threatened to make the team play in the Ninth District tourney, forcing them to give up their bye.

"I know we were considered a goof-off team and everybody felt that way," said Al Newman, who, like Margalski, will be too old for Legion ball next year. "We joked about the tournament, like we really didn't belong in it with our record."

"But I wanted to play in it," Newman went on. "For the competition — that's the most important thing. And I think we could have done well. We have lots of good hitters and our pitchers were coming around."

"Now, it's kinda weird — I won't see any of the guys anymore. It's all over."

The Wheeling players learned of the bad news Monday evening from Gry-

bash when they met for practice. Grybash had been informed of the change on Sunday.

"He told us he had gotten a call from the Cook County guy," explained catcher Sal Fioretti. "He told us we were left out of it. I was disappointed. I thought we could have beat Arlington Heights or Park Ridge. I was looking forward to it. Last year I had the best part of my season in the tournament."

Fioretti, who will be a sophomore at Western Illinois University in the fall, was looking ahead to the tourney experience.

"I didn't make my college team last year and this is my last year in Legion, so I thought if I did good in the tournament something might come of it. It meant pretty much to me."

The ones affected most are the players who put in the most time with Wheeling, veterans like Carl Pfister, Bob Burke, and Margalski. For them, the disappointment was a bitter pill to swallow.

"I'd like to call that guy and tell him off," said Margalski. "I'd like to tell him what he did to the kids."

Grybash had the unenviable task of informing the players of the Legion's eleventh-hour decision.

"The guys who really get hurt by this are guys like Burke, Sal, Pfister, Margalski, Newman — guys that really cared about the team," said Gerry. Bob Grybash, Gerry's brother and assistant coach, displayed the same regret.

"I feel bad for the kids and for Gerry too," he said. "We were looking ahead to the tourney and now it's gone."

Playing in the Cook County tournament meant a lot to the Wheeling kids — for varied reasons. For Newman, it meant a final chance to mold the team into a winning unit.

"We never really worked as a team," said Newman. "That was our one big problem. We needed something to pull us together."

That last chance — the Cook County tournament — was taken away from the Wheeling players.

CHAMPS ARE WE. Mort Taylor (right), the coordinator of the 9th Paddock Olympics, hoists the championship trophy with the history of the Olympics. Wheeling finished second.

Expos stop Cubs behind Rogers

Steve Rogers scattered eight hits and walked just two men Wednesday in pitching his seventh complete game of the season in hurling the Montreal Expos to a 6-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Rogers was supported by a 13-hit attack against four Cub pitchers, including loser Ray Burris, now 8-8.

A walk to Pete Mackanin and singles by Tim Lincecum, Rogers and Pepe Mangual gave Montreal a 2-0 lead in the second inning. The Expos picked up two more runs in the third off Burris as Gary Carter beat out an infield hit and scored all the way from first on throwing errors by Bill Madlock and Pete LaCock. Mike Jorgensen's ninth home run of the year followed.

Rick Monday's 13th homer led off the Cubs' fourth inning for their only run.

A double by Jim Dwyer and Larry Bittner's single gave the Expos another run in the fifth, and Montreal scored again in the eighth on a double by Foli and Dwyer's single off Milt Wilcox.

Madlock, the NL's leading hitter, had one hit in four at-bats to drop his average to .354.

Rozelle Rule in jeopardy

The National Football League has no immediate plans to remove the controversial "Rozelle Rule" from its bylaws even through a U.S. District Judge believes the rule is a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Asked to comment on the decision of U.S. District Judge Warren J. Ferguson to issue a temporary restraining order in respect of running back Cullen Bryant's move from the Los Angeles Rams to the Detroit Lions, an NFL spokesman said:

"Today's action has no significance other than to preserve the status quo until the issue can be aired at a hearing."

"We will take every measure available to us within the framework of the law to defend the principle of competitive balance, a factor vital to the National Football League's success."

The spokesman declined further comment.

Bears pare down to 77

The Chicago Bears Wednesday reduced their roster to 77 with a series of player transactions. Defensive tackle Greg Wojcik was sent to St. Louis in exchange for Wesley Miller, 6-2, 255 pounds, a free agent center.

Waivers were recalled on kickers Mike Dean and Bert Simmons. Simmons was awarded to Detroit and Dean was traded to Buffalo for an undisclosed draft choice.

Safety Norm Hodgins, starting his second year with the Bears, was put on waivers and awarded to Green Bay, and veteran offensive tackle Steve Kinny, a third year pro, was cut from the squad.

CUBS' BILL MADLOCK goes high in the air but fails to come down with throw as Montreal's Gary Carter dives into third on his quick circuit of bases Wednesday. Carter scored on infield hit and two throwing errors.

And in other sports news...

Dave Kingman of the New York Mets and formerly of Prospect High School was named NL Player-of-the-Week on the strength of seven homers during a 12-game period. . . . The U. S. Wheelchair Basketball team, led by Don Van Dello of Wheeling, scored two more victories in the Golden Cup Tournament in Bruges, Belgium.

Prospect's wrestling coach resigns to take head post in Oklahoma

Prospect High School is looking for a new head wrestling coach.

Bill Harlow, head man at the Dist. 214 school for the past four years, resigned this week to accept a similar position at the high school in Broken Arrow, Okla., a wrestling hotbed.

Harlow also was a frosh football coach at Prospect.

"Bill has family ties in Oklahoma and this was an excellent opportunity for him to go back near his wife's home and where he went to school," said Prospect Athletic Director George Gattas Wednesday in making the announcement.

Harlow currently is working on his Master's Degree at Winona (Minn.) State College, and he will complete work there in mid-August.

"Bill saw an opportunity to develop a feeder system through the elementary school district in Oklahoma, a unit system," said Gattas, "and he didn't feel he could pass up the chance at this stage in his coaching career."

Prospect is in the process now of accepting applications for the wrestling position, and coaches should contact the high school.

Weekend competition at Meadowhill Park

by MIKE KLEIN

Mount Prospect brothers Bob and Rich Vehe plus Schaumburg's Laura Walter will pursue titles during this weekend's National Track Championships cycling finals at Meadowhill Park in Northbrook.

Bob Vehe, 1975 Illinois senior men's champion, will pursue his first national title. Vehe placed third in senior men's kilometer and fifth in match sprints last summer. Match sprints were also 1,000 meters.

Bob's younger brother Rich, former midget boys national titlist, has advanced to seek his first junior boys national honors.

Schaumburg's Walter, 1975 Illinois midget girls champion, will contend for her first national title.

The very scenic Meadowhill Park, also site of this weekend's American Legion Cook County Playoffs in baseball, is hosting its third consecutive cycling national finals and fifth overall.

held the national championships in 1957 and 1963.

And the hosting Northbrook Cycle Committee, Inc., has already been granted the 1976 finals. National cycling championships began in 1921 in Washington, D.C.

The country's greatest cyclists will compete here through Saturday evening's final session.

Top competition is assured among senior women where Sue Navarro and Shella Young, both of Detroit, will continue their long-standing battle.

Young edged Navarro for the 1973 national title but they reversed positions last summer at Northbrook. Navarro highlighted her strong 1974 season with second in match sprints at the world Cycling Championships in Montreal.

Young has also been among the world's finest speed skaters. An Olympian in 1972, she previously held the 500-meter women's speed skating world record.

Roger Young, Shella's brother, comes to Northbrook with one goal in mind, regaining the senior men's sprint title he captured in 1973 but lost here last summer.

Cycling will occur almost around-the-clock today, Friday and Saturday at Meadowhill Park. Preliminary heats began Wednesday and will continue each day at 8 a.m.

Thursday and Friday evening racing begins at 7 p.m. with Saturday's last session at 6 p.m.

Palatine grid signup scheduled on Aug. 9

The Palatine Amateur Football Association will hold its first meeting of the season Saturday, Aug. 9 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Palatine High School gymnasium. At that time, participants will be able to register for the fall grid program and pick up their equipment. It will be the final registration.

The program consists of two lightweight travel teams, two heavyweight travel teams, and several in-house teams. Total fee for the season is $40 per boy or $65 for multi-boy families. The program is open to boys in fifth through eighth grades.

Direct any questions to Gordon Long at 358-3911.

Events will have their finals each evening as listed:

Thursday: Midget girl one-mile, midget boy one-mile, intermediate girl two-mile, women pursuit, junior spring and senior pursuit.

Friday: Midget girl quarter-mile, midget boy quarter-mile, intermediate girl half-mile, intermediate boy half-mile and junior eight-mile point race.

Saturday: Senior team pursuit, women's sprints, senior men's sprints, midget girl half-mile, midget boy half-mile, intermediate girl one-mile, intermediate boy one-mile, junior one-mile and senior men's 10-mile.

Thursday evening adult admission will be $1.50 for general seating and $2.50 for reserved. The pricing becomes $2.50 and $3.50 respectively Friday and Saturday.

Children six-to-12 years old are 50 cents all three nights. Younger children are free.

ers and they'll show a film of this year's team.

"We expect the afternoon to be both entertaining and informative."

Tickets for the luncheon will be $7.50 and reservations can be made by sending a check to P.O. Box 6, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Letters to the Editor are a daily part of the HERALD's friendly concern with community affairs. Let's hear from you.

Report tells RTA: 'Pay all suburban deficits'

A plan to fund 100 per cent of the deficits of most suburban bus operations was proposed Wednesday by consultants to the Regional Transportation Authority.

Suburban RTA board members last week argued for 100 per cent funding of the suburban bus systems but were overridden by Chicago board members, who approved 80 per cent grants to two carriers.

RTA Chairman Milton Pikarsky said the suburban bus systems might get 100 per cent funding after studies were completed, and consultants Wednesday were presenting part of those studies.

THE NEW INTERIM system would measure income against costs, and each system would get a percentage efficiency rating. Systems meeting a standard established by the RTA would get full funding of deficits, and systems below the standard would get only a percentage.

Suburban board members have said the suburban bus operations are entitled to 100 per cent deficit funding because the Chicago Transit Authority and the commuter railroads will recover 100 per cent of their losses.

Pikarsky and other board members say suburban bus systems differ so much that they cannot be easily compared. They note that some bus companies charge more than a dollar for rides, while Niles operates a free service for its residents.

The RTA board should approve an interim plan until a long-term program can be developed and adopted. The consultants said the long-term plan may take several months.

THE RTA is moving toward its promise to have some new suburban services in operation by fall, staff member Brian Cudahy said Wednesday. He said he is negotiating several experimental routes that could begin soon, and he's preparing a transfer system for the Chicago & North Western Ry. and the CTA.

Cudahy said he expects new buses purchased by the RTA or suburban transit districts to arrive soon, and plans are being developed to modify some CTA buses for suburban service. Some of the CTA buses will be cut in half and shortened to 29 feet, Cudahy said.

Consultants also gave the RTA board members a series of questions to help formulate grant policies, the first of which is whether the RTA should require local subsidy from communities served by RTA buses. Pikarsky has said before that he thinks local contributions will be necessary.

6 cities get advisories on ozone

Ozone advisories were issued Wednesday for Chicago, Joliet, Rockford, Peoria, Rock Island and East St. Louis. The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency also raised the Chicago ozone advisory to intermediate stage because ozone levels stayed above .07 parts per million for four hours and then rose to .179 — the highest Illinois ozone reading this summer.

4 die in plane crash

The four victims of a light plane crash near DuPage Airport Tuesday night were all Elgin residents, authorities said Wednesday. The rented single-engine plane crashed shortly after takeoff and killed Glenn R. Diller, 23, the pilot; Lawrence Richter, 24; William Richter, 23, and Daniel J. Honert, 21. The crash is being investigated by the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board.

Services expanded: Daley

Chicago city services will be expanded rather than cut in the 1976 budget, Mayor Richard J. Daley said Wednesday. "No services will be cut in Chicago," he said. "No, they'll be expanded. We should do more for the senior citizens and for the handicapped, and there are a lot of other people." He also said the rising cost of living will be kept in mind in considering possible pay increases for city employees.

Clerk to put $1 million in area savings, loans

About $1 million of Cook County funds will be invested in Chicago-area savings and loan associations, Circuit Court Clerk Morgan M. Finley said Wednesday.

The funds will receive 5.75 per cent interest and will be invested in 90-day certificates of deposit. The program, which includes 178 Chicago and suburban savings and loan associations, is the first which places county funds outside of banks.

Driving range opens on 1st

The Cook County Forest Preserve District will open a golf driving range Friday at the Highland Woods Golf Course, near Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

The lighted driving range, about a half mile south of Algonquin Road and east of Elm Road, will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

An 18-hole golf course is under construction at the site.

Mental health aid near?

Northwest suburban mental health agencies may receive advanced payments from the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health through legislation that was recently signed by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Illinois briefs

Rap Army on river project

A conservation group charged Wednesday that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is covering up the extent of its navigation project on the upper Mississippi River so it can get congressional approval for the plan. John Marlin, executive director of the Coalition of American Rivers, said there is evidence a dam near Alton is only part of a plan to increase the depth of the Mississippi channel to 12 feet, which would cause biological decay and further pollute the river. Railroads are also objecting to a deeper channel because it would allow more barge traffic, which competes with the railroads for business.

Percy asks probe

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the General Accounting Office will investigate whether federal money was used in Chicago and nine other large American cities to fund illegal police spying activities. The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress and will make the study at the request of the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. The GAO has already found that $539,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds had been paid to members of the Chicago Police Intelligence Division.

County briefs

The bill, which was sponsored by the late State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Rep. John E. Porter, R-Evanston, extends a trial program of advanced grants-in-aid that began last year.

Area agencies eligible to receive the funds include the Maine Township Mental Health Center, Orchard Center for Mental Health and Clearbrook Center for the Retarded.

'Get birth papers now'

Cook County birth certificates for children who will begin school in September should be obtained "now," County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper said Wednesday.

Parents of school children can avoid the back-to-school rush for birth certificates by mailing $2, payable to Kusper, to 130 N. Wells St., clerk's office of vital statistics, Chicago. Written requests should include the full name of the child, date and place of birth, father's name and mother's maiden name.

Birth certificates also can be obtained at the clerk's office, Kusper said.

Navy base trial to start

The first of three guards facing a court martial involving the death of a young recruit at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center will go to trial Tuesday. Marine Cpl. William T. Mason, 22, of Massachusetts, will be the first to go before a court martial. Separate military trials are being arranged for Cpl. Nebojsa Popovich, 22, of Grayslake, and Sgt. Michael A. Williams, 23, of Minnesota. All are charged with assault and battery, maltreatment and violating correctional center regulations. The Marines are accused of beating Steven Stawnych, 18, of Minnesota, while he was in the base correctional center. Stawnych died June 3 when he stepped in front of a commuter train near the base shortly after he was released from the correctional center.

Kerner undergoes surgery

Former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner underwent surgery for a hernia Tuesday at Illinois Masonic Medical Center. A hospital spokesman said Kerner, 66, was resting in good condition following the operation.

Crash kills man in chase

One person was killed and another injured Wednesday when their car crashed following a high speed chase by police on the Calumet Expressway. Police said the passenger, Craig Padgett, 18, of Dolton, was killed after his body was thrown from the car. The driver, Gilbert Scotti, 19, of Lansing, was listed in good condition Wednesday at a Hammond Hospital. Police said they were pursuing the car after they received a report that someone was breaking a window at a Holiday Inn in Hammond. Several police departments were involved in the chase, which reached speeds up to 105 miles an hour. The car went out of control at an exit and crashed.

Crane on goals panel

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, has been named to a panel directed to work for conservative goals in the Democrat and Republican parties. The panel "can provide a vehicle for conservatives active in either of the two major parties to influence the direction of events in each party toward conservative goals," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Committee on Conservative Alternatives, which set up the subcommittee.

Hartigan defends move

LI Gov. Nell Hartigan Wednesday defended his attempt to aid the people of tornado-stricken Canton, Ill. Hartigan said the mayor of Canton asked him for help after trying unsuccessfully to reach Gov. Daniel Walker, and Hartigan called the White House for assistance. William Goldberg, legal counsel to Walker, Tuesday charged that Hartigan's calls had interfered with the state's chain of command.

State fair fate at stake

The future of the Illinois State Fair could be at stake next month unless officials prevent a repeat of last year's experience. The administration of the 1974 fair was investigated by several state agencies and a Sangamon County grand jury, which described management's practices as "a disaster" and filled with "stupidity and ignorance." One official said the state apparently paid for some goods and services that were never received, and some of the cash collected at the fair was never deposited. The grand jury said it could not indict anyone because conditions were so chaotic that it could not fix responsibility on any one individual. Legislators have tried to change control of the fair, and some have asked to have it abolished.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Bulk improves the quality of diet

I owe you a note of thanks after reading your column on the use of bran for bulk in our diet. I cross my fingers, and it still works fine.

I'm 73 years old and have used a walker for more than 15 years because of a broken hip, and the bulk from bran has really improved my life.

Thank you, Doctors are human and like to hear when someone has benefited from one of their suggestions. I'm no exception.

Many people have been surprised at how much better their bowels function after including more bulk in the diet from bran, whole wheat products, whole wheat bread and bulky vegetables. It takes some people three weeks to get through the stage of adjustment from the change in the diet, but it helps most people who have been eating diets low in bulk.

And, I wanted to put your letter in the column also to remind my readers that senior citizens with longstanding problems such as yours can profit from improving their diet. There are very few instances in which bulk will not be tolerated. It is often necessary, though, to get over the idea that bulk is roughage and realize that most of when moistened by digestive action, is "softage" and is not rough or harmful.

Please tell me how a blood clot in the lungs affects a person. What causes it? Is it visible on an X ray? I would also like to know how it should be treated?

Most blood clots in the lungs come from clots that have formed in the legs or lower part of the body. They dislodge and pass through the right side of the heart into the lungs.

Such clots are always dangerous. A clot may be small and cause few symptoms, but larger ones usually cause chest pain, even shock and death. The attack resembles a heart attack and it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between the two.

Many of the clots that lodge in the lung can be seen in the lungs or the effect can be seen. Large clots, though, that nearly obstruct a main, large artery to the lungs sometimes need to be diagnosed by more accurate means, including injecting dye into the circulation and in this way seeing the obstruction.

Treatment depends on the individual case. Emergency treatment is sometimes needed as a life-saving measure. The source of the clots is usually important. Treatment attempts to prevent more clot formation or release of those already formed. This is why bedrest is often used when the leg is involved. The leg may be kept elevated and heat may be used.

Medicines to prevent clotting are usually indicated and in some instances it is important to surgically tie off the veins where the clots are formed.

Developers, homeowners seek ways to save

Rising fuel costs burn the pocketbook

by LEA TONKIN

Individual homeowners, developers and large fuel-users are giving increased attention to energy conservation as the high cost of fuel hits where it hurts — right in the pocketbook. There is little evidence that area development is affected by the prospect of natural gas curtailment and rising cost, however.

Edward Zale of Zale Construction Co., Arlington Heights, said the prospect of possible natural gas price hikes ranging from 20 to 100 per cent for the next five years is forcing developers and homeowners to consider energy-saving plans. New federal standards may be developed to require a minimum amount of insulation and other features that will cut a homeowner's fuel bills, he said.

"There is no problem as far as cut-backs in new development due to potential energy shortages," he said. Zale, who serves as president of the Home Builders Assn. of Chicagoland, does not forecast a sharp increase in the number of all-electric homes, due to the higher cost of electricity for heating in comparison with natural gas rates.

ARTHUR PIPENHAGEN of Smith-Pipenhagen Inc., Realtors, Arlington Heights, said a small number of plants require the use of natural gas in their manufacturing processes. This is the only instance when industrial development is currently affected by natural gas supply limitations, he said. Large industrial users can turn to electric power, fuel oil and propane as alternative fuels.

Industrial and commercial developers are becoming more energy-conservation conscious as the price and availability of fuel changes, said Richard Batchen, of J. Emil Anderson & Son, Inc., Des Plaines. Batchen cited the planned Boise Cascade facility in Illinois as an example of the cost savings aspect of conservation. "We made the recommendation to spend $50,000 more to insulate the roof," the developer said. "With reduced expenditures for heating and cooling the building, the company expects a net savings of $10,000."

Batchen said his firm is convinced that all-electric commercial buildings can provide a cost savings to the owner and tenants. The use of proper insulation, drapes that control heat loss and the control of building illumination can save a building owner thousands of dollars, he said. Restaurants are among other types of new development that are being forced to conserve energy, he said. "Until gas becomes more available, people will be very design conscious," Batchen said.

ENERGY-CONSERVATION standards will eventually be demanded by the public, Batchen believes. He said this situation is preferable to government-enforced conservation methods. Among the J. Emil Anderson projects are Woodfield Park in Schaumburg and a library at Wheaton College in Wheaton.

Residential customers do not need to worry about the possible curtailments in natural gas supply in the foreseeable future, said George T. Jones, vice president of government relations for Northern Illinois Gas Co. Restrictions on the use of natural gas by commercial and industrial customers limit the field to "very small users," Jones said. "A McDonald's hamburger stand, for example, is

Federal energy panel to study gas shortage impact

The Federal Energy Administration (FEA) has been directed by the U.S. Energy Resources Council (ERC) to form a task force that will assess the potential impact of natural gas shortages. The panel will recommend action to deal with the shortage.

U.S. production of natural gas is declining. As a result, the FEA reports, the country experienced shortages in the range of 8 to 10 per cent last winter. Shortages in the coming winter are projected at 15 to 29 per cent.

Natural gas curtailment has affected industrial plants in several states. The increased demand for alternative fuels comes at a time when the U.S. is attempting to limit petroleum imports.

The FEA directed the Natural Gas Policy and Contingency Planning Task Force to report the side-effects of possible natural gas curtailments. The group is evaluating nearly 30 alternatives to natural gas. Final recommendations will be available in September.

larger than we can handle in terms of attachments of new load."

More than 2,000 industrial and commercial customers companies are on a waiting list for natural gas supply, Jones said. There are no residential users on waiting lists. The firm serves 1.3 million customers in northern Illinois.

THE IMPACT OF natural gas shortages is difficult to assess, Jones said. "Intensive users" such as firms that require the use of gas for manufacturing, may locate only in states that produce the fuel, such as Louisiana and Texas.

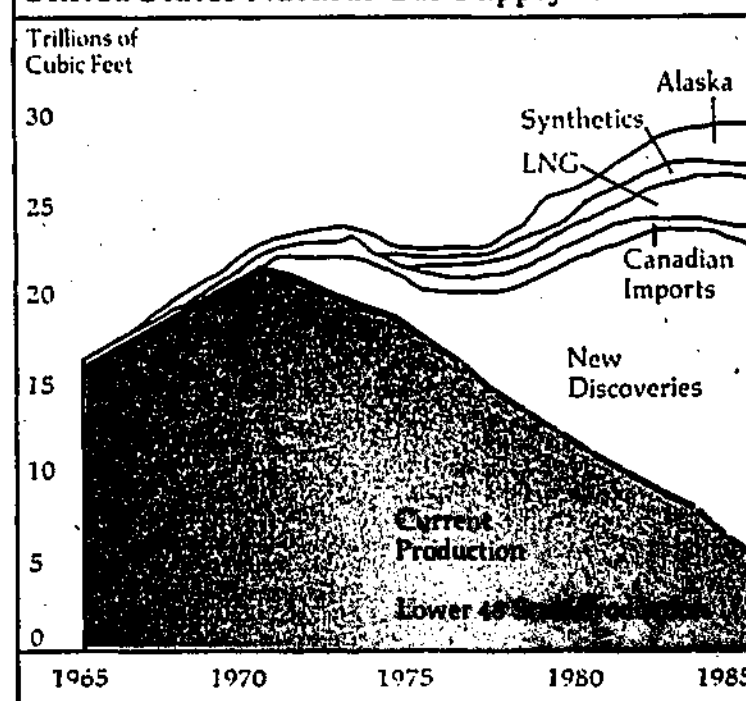

Jones said the predictions by White House energy advisers of possibly severe Midwest natural gas shortages in the coming winter do not apply to northern Illinois, however. NI-Gas stores the fuel in underground natural aquifers, or cavities that would normally fill with water. The gas is available during winter months when it is needed, Jones said. "On a cold day, about half the gas disbursed may come from underground storage," he said.

Jones said the rising cost of natural gas is not expected to cause a rapid increase in conversions to all-electric home heating. Despite an average 30 per cent increase in residential customer bills during the past year, the cost of natural gas is competitively priced, he said. Jones estimates the price of natural gas could increase 5 to 6 per cent a year if the federal controls on natural gas are lifted.

THOMAS FRANKLIN of Palatine, an area marketing representative for Commonwealth Edison Co., said the electric utility is experiencing an increase in the demand for all-electric commercial and industrial buildings and residential conversions from natural gas to electric heat. The trend is "just the tip of the iceberg," Franklin said.

The utility is working closely with Northwest suburban developers in the design and construction of buildings that will curb the waste of energy, Franklin said. Heating costs can be cut as much as 60 per cent through the use of added insulation in the "big barns" used as distribution warehouses, he said.

Franklin said Commonwealth Edison added 5,000 new residential unit customers and more than seven million square feet of commercial and industrial space for electric heat within the past two years.

There are no waiting lists for electric heat, Franklin said. Customers have experienced increases in the fuel price during the past year, however. An average residential customer who does not use electricity for heat experienced a 5.75 per cent hike in electric service costs from July 1974 to July, 1975. The residential customer who has electric heat experienced an average 15.64 per cent increase in fuel cost for the same period.

NATURAL AND man-made lakes complement the country setting at the Kemper Insurance Companies headquarters, Long Grove. The landscape design was recently cited by the American Assn. of Nurserymen.

Kemper wins landscape award for headquarters

The Kemper Insurance Companies, Long Grove, recently won the American Assn. of Nurserymen's 1975 Landscape Award for industrial beautification.

The award was presented to John Milne, Kemper real estate officer, at the association's centennial convention and trade show in Chicago.

Clauss Brothers Inc., of Roselle, provided site development and landscape design at the Kemper site on Ill. Rt. 22. Ian Stevenson said his firm worked closely with Kemper management and the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture staff in Lake Zurich to complete a landscape plan that complements natural features.

"We first saw the tract during the winter of 1968-69," Stevenson said. "It was good tillable land with a natural lake and a lot of swampy patches." The swamp lands were turned into additional lakes without disturbing natural water runoff.

Five man-made lakes extend a half mile in a V-shaped pattern around the Kemper building. The lakes are stocked for fishing, and employees are allowed to use small boats on two of the larger lakes.

A variety of trees, bushes, ground vegetation and flowers was chosen for the site. Plants were chosen to provide color from early spring through fall months.

Plantings of maple trees separate the parking lots. On the north side of the Kemper building, Clauss Brothers planted an herb garden where employes may spend lunch hours.

James S. Kemper Jr., president of Kemper Insurance and Financial Companies, said the landscape plan provides a fringe benefit for employees. "We think we've detected a real positive impact on employee morale, too, which is important in a service-oriented business like ours," he said.

You may qualify for 5% tax credit

Thousands more new homes and condominium units are now qualified for the five per cent tax credit under new federal legislation signed into law on June 30, 1975, noted Don L. Diso, president of Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago.

Under the new amendment to the tax credit provision, the builder must certify that the price of the home was the "lowest price" at which the home was offered for sale after Feb. 28, 1975. In the original tax credit provision, the builder had to sell the home at the lowest price the home was "ever offered for sale." This provision had eliminated from the tax credit benefits thousands of new homes that had been on the market for six months or more because builders couldn't roll back their prices that far without losing money, Diso said.

The new amendment is also retroactive. In other words, if a taxpayer bought a new home this spring but didn't qualify for the tax credit then because the builder had been forced to raise his sales price to meet continuing costs, the home would now be eligible for the tax credit if any price increase came before Feb. 28, 1975 and if the home met all other tax credit requirements.

The buyer, in this case, is advised to contact his builder or local Internal Revenue Service office if he believes his new home may qualify for the tax credit.

This one-shot tax credit up to a maximum $2,000 in effect means that many new home buyers may not have to pay any federal taxes for the year in which they claim the credit.

A tax credit should not be confused with a tax rebate or tax deduction. A tax credit means that a taxpayer subtracts the amount of his tax credit from the amount of his federal income tax liability. For example, if a taxpayer qualified for a $1,750 tax credit, and if tax liability was $1,750 or less, he would not pay any federal taxes. If $1,750 already had been deducted from his paychecks, he would receive a $1,750 tax refund.

Here are some basic guidelines for homebuyers on the five per cent tax credit:

The amount of the tax credit is determined by taking five per cent of the total cost of acquisition (including closing costs) of the new home, minus any profit the taxpayer might earn in selling his old home.

The tax credit claimed by the taxpayer cannot exceed his tax liability. For example, if a taxpayer qualified for a $2,000 tax credit but his tax liability was only $1,500, he could only claim a $1,500 tax credit, not $2,000. Any excess from the credit cannot be carried back or carried over to a subsequent year; it is only applicable in the year in which the credit was earned.

The maximum credit is $2,000. In the case of a married couple filing separate returns, the maximum credit is $1,000 for each taxpayer.

Practically any type of new home can qualify for the tax credit, including single-family homes, row-houses, townhouses, condominium or cooperative units and mobile homes. However, condominium conversions and rehabilitated and renovated units do not qualify.

Builders will be able to tell you if their new homes or condominium units qualify for the tax credit. In general, new homes that were either under construction or completed before March 26, 1975 qualify for the tax credit.

The home must be the buyer's principal residence. Vacation and second homes do not qualify.

Except in cases where you are building your own home, the important dates to remember are: a binding contract of sale must be signed prior to Jan. 1, 1976; and the settlement date must be between March 13, 1975 and Dec. 31, 1976.

If a buyer entered into a purchase contract on a new home prior to March 13, 1975, he is still eligible for the credit as long as he did not settle or close the deal until after March 12, 1975.

In cases where the taxpayer sells his old home at a profit and buys a new home which qualifies for the tax credit, the rules get a little more complicated because the credit is based on the adjusted basis of the new principal residence. For instance, if a taxpayer sold his home at a $10,000 profit and then purchased a new $40,000 home, the $10,000 profit from his old home would be subtracted from the purchase price of his new home for tax purposes. Instead of qualifying for a $2,000 tax credit on a $40,000 home, the taxpayer would only qualify for a $1,500 tax credit.

If a taxpayer is renting a new home and decides to buy it, he would be eligible for the tax credit if he was the first occupant and if a written option to purchase the home was contained in the original lease agreement.

Taxpayers claiming the credit should fill out the new IRS Form 5405 and mail it in with their 1975 or '76 federal tax returns. The tax credit must be claimed in the year in which the taxpayer closes the sale on his new home. The taxpayer must also attach a certificate signed by the builder, stating that the price of the home was the "lowest price" at which the home was offered for sale after Feb. 28, 1975, and that construction on the home had begun before March 26, 1975.

For further information concerning the tax credit, contact your local IRS office, or the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago.

Country Lane opens in Schaumburg

The formal opening of Country Lane, a 234-unit contemporary apartment complex at 1400 Fairlane Drive in Schaumburg, has been announced by Baird & Warner, Inc., management agent.

According to Sanford Ross, assistant vice president and property manager in Baird & Warner's Arlington Heights office, the first of two twin structures has been completed.

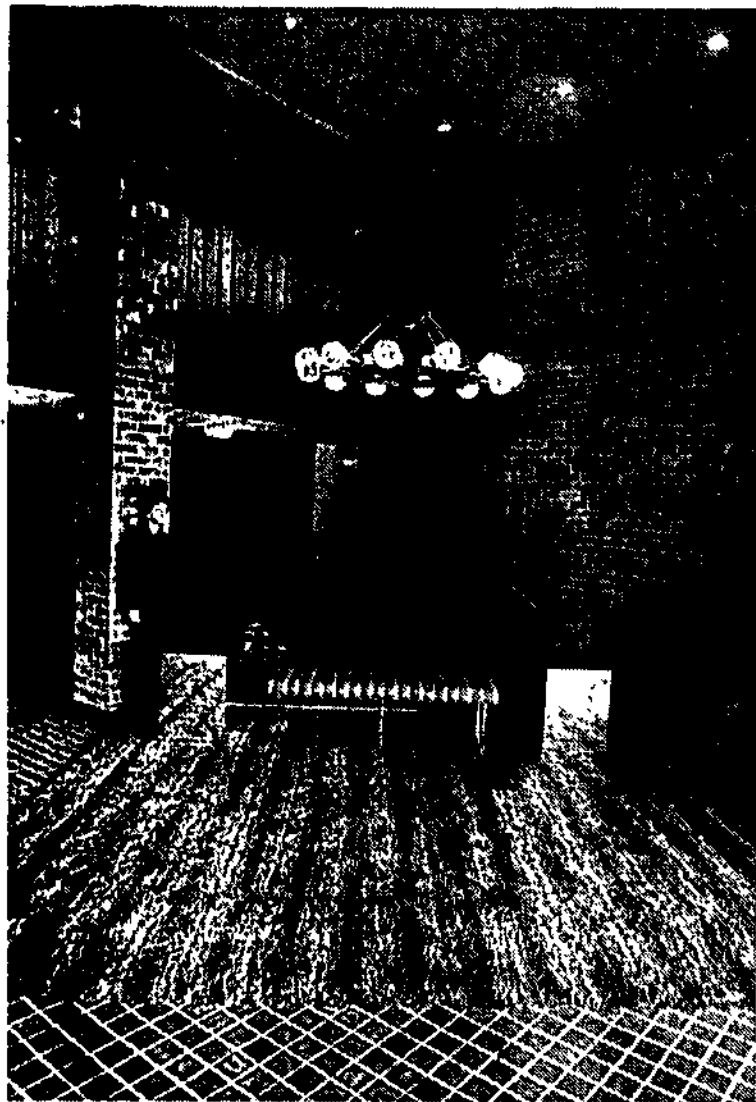

Each of the five-story elevator buildings has 87 two-bedroom apartments renting from $245 per month, 54 one-bedroom apartments from $215 and one studio at $190.

The main entrance leads to a two-story landscaped foyer which features all brick walls and pillars that rise to a railed balcony. An earth-brown ceramic tile floor complements landscaped areas along each wall and a large, area rug is "crowned" by a modern pendant light fixture.

Each first floor apartment has a private patio area while all units on the top four floors have large private balconies. Each apartment has wall-to-wall carpeting, separate central air-conditioning and heating, two-door refrigerator, dishwasher, disposer and a self-cleaning gas oven.

"One feature that many budget-conscious people have found to be particularly meaningful is that the cost of gas for heating and cooking, which is most economical to begin with, is included in the monthly rent. Most other apartments in the area are equipped with electric cooking which is a tenant-cost item," said Carol Kenny, manager of Country Lane.

Other areas and items of interest in the building are a party room furnished with game equipment, a kitchen and lounging areas for the enjoyment of all residents or for reservation for private parties; a central mail room with an outgoing mail chute; a laundry room with 14 large automatic washers, six small dryers

THE ENTRANCE Foyer to Country Lane features landscaped areas and brick walls which rise two-stories to a railed balcony. Almost obscured by one of the brick pillars is Carol Kenny of and four double dryers; and full-sized storage lockers on each floor in each wing for convenient resident access.

In addition, the building features the Illinois Bell security intercom between residences and the foyer and a positive air pressure system in all corridors. Smoke and heat detectors connected to a building alarm system and the Schaumburg fire department are installed in public areas, and there is a fire alarm annunciator in the main lobby.

Three furnished model apartments are on display daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., Sundays 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. To visit Country Lane, take Northwest Tollway (I-40) west to Barrington Road. Proceed south (left) four miles to Irving Park Road (Route 10). Go east (left) on Irving one mile to Fairlane Drive.

LET'S TALK IT OVER
JERRY BOUSCHARD

Do you know the difference between a mortgage and a deed? A mortgage is a written legal instrument which uses real property as security to insure the repayment of a note or bond. The note is given by the borrower to the lender when a loan is made for the purpose of purchasing real estate. The borrower is the mortgagor, the lender is the mortgagee.

A deed of trust is a security instrument used when a property buyer borrows money and transfers title to a trustee. The trustee holds the title in trust as security to insure performance . . . that is, repayment of the note held by the lender, called the beneficiary.

If you don't know all about such things, just depend on us . . . we've had lots of experience and we'll give you the benefit without obligation of any kind.

AN ART gallery? A bank lobby! Bank of Elk Grove employee Heather Gonzalez helps a customer select one of the many paintings and lithographs the bank currently is offering for sale at low cost to depositors. Through the end of July, customers who open a new checking or savings account with $100 or who add that amount to an existing savings account have the opportunity to buy art works from a special collection at prices under catalogue value.

Buying vs. renting — how does one compare with the other? A California condominium developer has introduced a computerized system for comparison.

Forms are completed by potential buyers and are fed into the computer terminal which is linked to portable terminals at each development's sales office.

The computer considers several variables for each prospect: price of home, size of home, income and combined federal and state income tax bracket. It calculates future rent and future home value based on projected rates of inflation.

The computer then produces a print-out profile showing the effective cost per year of home ownership and accumulated equity to accurately compare the financial differences between buying and renting. The print-out shows tax benefits which accrue to the homebuyer as a result of the deductibility of mortgage interest and property taxes, loan reduction and possible property appreciation.

The print-out also compares with renting the effective monthly income required to own a home, and gives actual investment over five years on an after-tax basis. And it projects results from ownership and compares it with the "equity" a renter might have achieved had he put an amount equal to a down payment in a savings account.

Whether or not you have access to a computer to make the comparison for you, it's virtually impossible today to make an intelligent decision in regard to housing — either renting or buying — without recognizing the importance of the effects of inflation and the impact of federal and state income taxes.

For those who don't have access to such a sophisticated method for comparison, it's possible, of course, to do your own dollars-and-cents analysis. Your Realtor or real estate broker can show you figures to prove that home ownership, for most families, offers much more in the way of tax benefits and investment protection than does renting.

Ease moving day with checklist

Moving time can be hectic. You have to worry about packing, loading and transporting your household goods, finding a new residence, disposing of your old home and getting your family from one place to the other.

With all this flurry of activity, it is easy to overlook some small things which, if forgotten, could lead to extra expense or inconvenience later.

For instance, you must notify utility services of your move: telephone company, water department, electric power and gas companies. You may be entitled to a deposit refund when you leave your old residence and you will want the utilities turned on as soon as you move into your new residence.

Other services you should notify include newspaper and milk delivery, laundry and dry cleaning service, diaper service, garbage collection and the fuel oil company. Don't forget to pick up layaway purchases at stores.

There are many records that you will need to transfer including your children's school records, family medical and dental records, legal records including wills and your church membership. You must arrange to have bank accounts, including checking and savings, transferred to a new bank. You might also ask your bank manager for a letter of recommendation for credit if you are moving to a new community.

If you are moving to a new state, you will have to register your automobile and apply for a new driver's license. If you are remaining in the same state, you will have to notify the department of motor vehicles of the change-of-address. Also check on new voter registration.

Many people will want to know about your change-of-address. Notify the local post office branch so they forward your mail. Also notify the local post office branch so they forward your mail. Also notify subscription magazines four to six weeks in advance, friends and relatives, insurance companies, creditors, attorneys and draft board.

You should keep careful record of the expenses that you incur in moving. If your move is job-related and meets certain other requirements, all or part of your expenses may be deductible from your income tax. Call your local Internal Revenue Service office and ask for Publication 521, "Tax Information on Moving Expenses," before moving.

Consider condominium maintenance

When an owners' association takes over the running of a condominium — and this includes condominium buildings, townhouses and cluster homes — one of the major challenges faced by the board of directors is maintenance of the landscaping.

Well-maintained grounds can contribute to enjoyment of condominium living and can also help preserve property values. But if the grounds are allowed to become run down, it can be a sign of trouble ahead for the association.

"The grounds are the first thing residents and visitors see and therefore they are the most important factor in setting the tone or atmosphere of a condominium," states Dick Brickman, president of Theodore Brickman Co., Long Grove, Ill., landscape architects and contractors.

While the developer of the condominium is in charge of things, he probably spends quite a bit on landscape maintenance. He still has homes to sell and he wants the place to look right. But once the developer is out of the picture, then the owners become responsible. They may discover some things about landscape maintenance they hadn't realized before.

"The first thing they discover is what it costs to maintain the landscaping the developer has put in," Brickman said. "To create an instant environment rather than have the new owners wait 10 or 15 years, the developer will plant hundreds or even thousands of plants, many of them mature specimens. The first couple of years are critical in getting these plants established, and this costs money."

"The alternative is to neglect the landscaping, have it become ragged-looking, have some large specimens die, and then pay for removal and replacement. It makes more sense to keep the environment looking good in the first place."

The second thing the owners may discover is that the developer may have done some things that are not to their liking. For instance, to create a natural effect, the developer may have installed wood-chip or gravel pathways. These require constant replenishment because the wood chips are easily blown or shoveled or kicked away.

Or the developer may have had sod installed right up to the foundations of a building. The owners may now have to pay for the cost of hand-trimming.

"Although mowing strips can be installed at an average cost of $30 per home, an alternative is to apply a soil sterilant along the wall or else use a new machine which uses nylon cord to cut the grass in these inaccessible places," Brickman said.

Owners may find that there are no curbs and gutters along the streets, often this is the result of a design decision to reduce the city look for a more informal country appearance. Unfortunately, the sod along the street edges is torn up by snowplows or cars running off the pavement in wet weather. Annual repair of this damage is not nearly as expensive as one may think and may justify the design concept.

"It costs about 25 cents a lineal foot to replace this sod, compared with around $5 or $6 a foot to install curbs," Brickman said. "At that rate, it would take 20 to 24 years to balance out the cost of curbs against the cost of sod replacement, which hardly is worth it to the owner's association.

There are other examples of where a developer's landscape strategy (or lack of strategy) can cause problems for the owners when they take over. Here is a partial list:

Trees such as willows, with shallow root systems planted too close to drainage pipes and pavements. The roots of these trees can clog drains and cause pavement to heave.

Large numbers of fast-growing specimens that need constant trimming. Privet hedges, for example, need clipping every two weeks in the growing season.

Nuisance specimens such as trees that drop fruit, attract birds, or have large leaves. They should be kept away from walks and other places where people gather, to avoid nuisances that require constant cleanings.

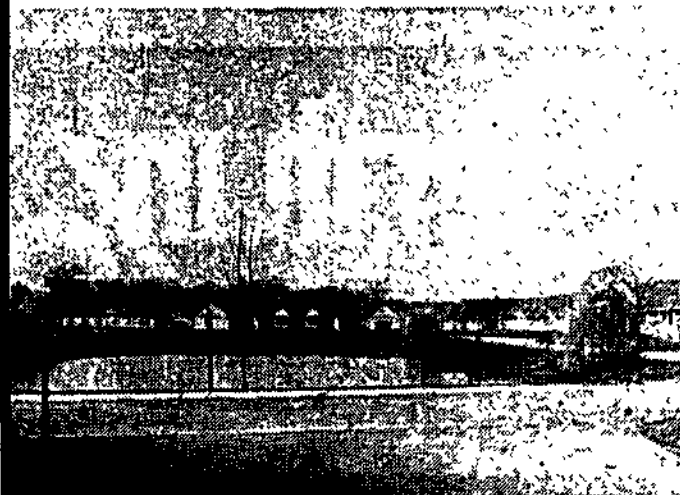

Beds of gravel and stone that can be tempting ammunition if children are about. Loose gravel is also a hazard near walkways where small stones can cause people to slip.

Shrubs planted where they can be easily damaged. This includes shrubs planted too close to parking lot borders, where they are hit by cars. It also includes overgreens planted where dogs are likely to be walked; never-ending replacement of burned-out evergreens is the inevitable result.

Poor traffic patterns. Pathways worn into lawns by people taking short cuts are good evidence of this.

"If the developer hasn't thought of the long-range effects of his landscape plan on the owners, then the condominium association might want to consider re-doing all or parts of the plan over a period of years to bring down the costs of maintenance," Brickman said.

A second group of problems has to do with who pays for what. This may be unclear in the condominium declaration or by-laws.

"For instance, if you have one large condominium building and you hook up to the sidewalks to water the lawn, there's no question about who provides the water and who pays for it; it comes out of the common costs of the building," Brickman said.

"But what do you do if you have a dozen townhouses around a common area with no common area water connection? Do you take the water from one property owner and try to divide the costs up with the others? This is hard to do."

Another question comes up in connection with plants that people put in themselves. Most maintenance agreements provide for care of plant materials originally included with the home. But supposing the by-laws permit an owner to plant additional materials? Is he responsible for proper care, or are the added materials covered by the maintenance agreement?

Then what happens if a large mature tree on someone's lot dies and becomes a threat to two or three adjacent homes? Who pays for taking it down, or who pays for the damage if a limb breaks off and falls on a house?

There is a third area of concern to the owners' association, and that is, who's going to do the maintenance. The association may have inherited a landscape maintenance agreement from the developer. Or the custodial staff of the condominium may be doing the work.

In most cases, the owners' association is better off retaining a professional landscape maintenance organization. Such an organization has the full-time skills, supervision, manpower, and equipment to do the job.

"Because the professional organization is constantly in touch with horticultural developments, it can anticipate problems such as diseases and insect pests, and deal with them promptly," Brickman said. "The idea of using the custodial staff to do the work sounds tempting because it may be cheaper, but the results will probably not be as good."

Brickman has three recommendations to make owner's associations regarding working with a professional landscape maintenance organization:

Make that organization responsible for 100 per cent of the job. That way, there's no questions of who's responsible if things aren't done right. If you attempt to save money by having the condominium custodial staff do part of the job and an outside organization the rest, you'll discover areas where you can't pin down responsibility.

If the owners' association is satisfied with the overall landscape architecture and installation, then consider having the same company handle the maintenance. Not all landscape architects and contractors will provide a maintenance service, but those that do have a continuing interest in seeing that their work continues to look good over the years.

Have the landscape maintenance company report to a professional property manager, not to any member of the association. The professional property manager is in the best position to judge performance. Also, this avoids charges of favoritism by owners who claim that "the landscapers do a better job for the landscaping committee chairman than they do for me."

In selecting a landscape maintenance company, Brickman suggests you see what kind of job they are doing for others and then have them give you a proposal. Don't let cost alone make your decision. Consider quality, reliability and skill, all of which can be important in preserving your condominium property investment.

Frequent harvests key to bonus yield for wise gardener

A bonus awaits the home gardener who is wise in the ways of plant growth.

The dividend comes in the form of increased production brought about by frequent harvesting of ripe vegetables, says James E. Schuster, extension adviser at the DuPage County Cooperative Extension Service.

"By harvesting vegetables as they mature, the plant will continue to produce instead of making seed to perpetuate itself," he explains.

For example, a cucumber plant will produce only 10 to 12 cucumbers if the cucumbers are allowed to remain in the garden after maturing. But, if they are harvested as they ripen, the plant will produce 40 to 50 cucumbers.

Gardeners should be careful during harvest to preserve a healthy plant. Schuster recommends holding a portion of the plant with one hand and snipping, pinching, or cutting the fresh produce off the other.

Removing vegetables from a plant with a quick, jerky motion may result in damage to the plant, says Schuster.

This can range from ripping the stalk to uprooting the entire plant.

Vegetable plants needing special care in harvesting include tomatoes, peppers, okra, cucumbers, eggplants, squash, cantaloupes, melons, beans, peas, and corn.

Jacobsen passes one million in sales

one million dollars for the first six months of this year. This is the third consecutive year that Jacobsen has accomplished this.

Jacobsen has managed the Palatine office since April, 1973. He is a member of the M.A.P. Million Dollar Sales Club, Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors and the Kiwanis Club of Palatine. He is a Viet Nam Veteran and holds a B.S. in Education from Illinois State University.

Jacobsen, his wife Susan, and their family live in the Pepper Tree subdivision in Palatine.

Home Town Real Estate is a member of M.A.P. MLS and the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

Winners selected

Grand prize winners Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bergeron, Schaumburg were the third week's recipients of the $125 Woodfield Racquet Club family membership, offered at the weekly drawings being held at First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Schaumburg, 800 E. Higgins Rd.

John V. Prah, First Federal's president, and Frank Randazzo, president of the Woodfield Racquet Club, awarded the couple the grand prize.

Transaction is completed

Hawthorn Realty Group has announced the firm has completed a $4,900,000 transaction on the 125,000 square foot building located at 2567 Greenleaf Ave. in the Center Industrial Park, Elk Grove Village.

The complex transaction involved the purchase of two existing leaseholds; the purchase of the building by private investors; and a long-term lease to a new tenant.

The facility is located on a 6 1/2-acre site and contains approximately 10,000 square feet of office space. The leaseholds were purchased from the H. K. Porter Co. and the Seeburg Corp., and the building was purchased from a land trust at the First Bank of Oak Park. The long-term lease was entered into by Metropolitan Warehouse & Development Company, which will utilize the space to meet the expanded needs of public warehousing clients.

Central Federal completes expansion

Central Federal Savings has recently completed a major expansion of its facilities at 300 W. Golf Rd. in Mount Prospect.

Increasing the Association's floor space by fifty per cent, the new offices meet a need for additional space in the Association's Home Loan Department, caused by a heavy volume of requests for home financing in the fast-growing northwest suburbs, explained Frank J. Kryda, president. To meet this strong loan demand, Central Federal Savings' mortgage staff has been increased as well.

Central Federal opened its Mount Prospect offices in December 1973.

"The response to our services from our neighbors in the Mount Prospect area has more than met our expectations," Kryda commented. "The growth we have experienced during the past year and a half has helped push our assets over the $100 million mark and has led to a need for greater facilities and the flexibility that they would allow. Of course, it is our customers' support that has given us the ability to provide those facilities."

Realtors dedicate building

The Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors recently held dedication ceremonies and an open house for its new headquarters building at 1655 S. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights.

The Board, founded in 1944 by 25 Realtors in the northwest suburbs, now has a total membership of almost 1800. The first headquarters office of the Board was a small office in Des Plaines set up by the Board's current Executive Vice President, Doris Kendzie, when the membership of the Board was at 200. Two subsequent moves to larger quarters indicated a need for a facility that would house the Board offices for years to come. In 1972, under the presidency of Arthur W. Pipenhagen, a Board Building Committee was appointed with Ralph H. Martin as chairman.

Virgil E. Grand, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, told fellow members and guests at the dedication, "This building is the manifestation of our faith in the future of the land."

The new two story, approximately 10,000 square foot structure houses the offices of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors on the first floor with space for lease on the second floor. The location is in the center of the Board jurisdictional territory which encompasses the communities of Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Long Grove, Mt. Prospect, Niles, Palatine, Park Ridge, Prospect Heights, Rolling Meadows, Rosemont, Schaumburg and Wheeling.

Architect was Paul W. Swanson of Arthur Swanson & Associates, Rosemont and general contractor was George Knight Construction Co. of Des Plaines. Leasing agent for the approximately 4,500 square foot upper level is Brian Properties, Inc., 1650 N. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights.

Wheeling site sold

Canal-Randolph Corporation (New York Stock Exchange) has sold the Wheeling Industrial Center in Wheeling to a private Chicago investor for $4,575,000.

According to Canal-Randolph President Raymond French, the transaction included seven individual single-story buildings located on 26 acres.

Canal-Randolph acquired the partially developed industrial park located at Wheeling and Hintz Roads in 1965. Operating revenues for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1974, were approximately $500,000, French said.

Canal-Randolph is a nationwide owner, developer and manager of income-producing real estate properties and central public stockyards. It currently owns and manages 10 office buildings, a 1,118-unit apartment house complex in New York, a hotel, another industrial park and about 3,200 acres of undeveloped land.

James S. Stokes of Nicholson, Porter & List in Chicago acted as broker for the transaction.

Consumer information about a Home Owners Warranty (HOW) policy is available from the HOW Corp. of Greater Chicago.

The 10-year protection plan was licensed March 10 in Illinois. For information write: HOW Corp. of Greater Chicago, 930 N. York Rd., Suite 201, Hinsdale, Ill. 60521.

J. Emil Anderson & Son, Inc., of Des Plaines is constructing a new 310,000 square foot division headquarters and Chicago distribution center building for Boise Cascade Office Products Division in Itasca, Ill.

The new building will replace three present facilities located in downtown Chicago. Preliminary excavation work is underway and completion is scheduled for Spring of 1976.

Space leased in Elk Grove

Chicago-based Arthur Rubloff & Co., represented by Vice President John Garfield, has completed negotiations on behalf of Whitaker-Carpenter Paper Co. for relocating their offices and distribution facilities from the present location at 14 N. Peoria Street, on Chicago's near west side, to a newly completed one-story building at 2651 Carl Boulevard, Elk Grove Village.

Whitaker-Carpenter is a major distributor of fine papers. Their new 80,000 square foot quarters will include 10,000 square feet of office space and serve as their executive offices and distribution center for the Midwest.

Brickman awarded landscape contract

Theodore Brickman Co., Long Grove, landscape architect and contractor, has been awarded a contract for the landscaping of the Dunbar Lakes condominium development in Schaumburg.

Brickman, which has won several national awards for their work, will landscape the entrance and borders of the community; the recreational facility consisting of clubhouse, tennis courts and swimming pool; and the townhouses and quadminiums.

According to Dick Brickman, president, numerous evergreens, flowering shrubs, ornamentals, and eight to 10-inch diameter shade trees will be planted to give the community a more mature look. Portions of the land will be contoured, while buildings will be professionally finished with foundation plantings and sodded lawns.

Dunbar Lakes is on a 100-acre site on Plum Grove Rd. between Higgins and Schaumburg Roads. Of the 1,716 units planned for the development, 424 are either completed or under construction. Current prices range from $31,490 to $46,000. Dunbar Corporation is the developer.

Real estate facts

by Virgil E. Grand

President, Northwest Suburban Board of REALTORS®

Number, location and size of bedrooms is a major concern to home buyers. After all, most of us spend one-third of our lives sleeping, so the room in which we spend this time is of great importance. And today we're concerned, too with the way in which bedrooms can be used during the two-thirds of our lives when we're awake.

Here, then, are a few tips about bedrooms for home buyers from the National Association of Realtors and the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

The number of people in a family usually determines the number of bedrooms in the house they buy. Residential real estate experts suggest that no more than two persons occupy each bedroom. Other consideration in determining the number of bedrooms your home should have are the number of adults and children in the family, functions the bedrooms will serve and home-buying budget.

Location of bedrooms shares almost equal importance with number. Bedrooms should be reached directly from a hallway, isolated from the living room and kitchen areas and directly accessible to the bathroom.

Less basic considerations include locating the bedroom in the most quiet part of the house, away from street noises. And some home buyers seek a house whose adult bedroom/bath area is segregated from children's areas.

Size of bedrooms has diminished with rising construction costs. So in newer homes, the major concern regarding bedroom size is the bedroom's main function: to accommodate beds for sleeping. Although square footage probably varies for each room, all bedrooms at least should provide space for adequate movement and circulation. Here are a few additional features to look for: Bedroom doors should be placed so that they open back against the wall. They should never interfere with other doors or with beds and other furniture.

Windows should be located so that they take advantage of good, natural light and afford cross-ventilation. In addition, windows should be located in a way that free wall space for furniture and doors.

Lighting is another important consideration, since bedroom decor should be conducive to rest and relaxation. There are three general sources of artificial illumination in a bedroom: the ceiling light, which should be low intensity; brighter intensity fixtures for the dressing table or dresser mirror; and a table lamp accessory for the night table. There should be a switch control at the room entrance which operates one of these sources.

In some higher-priced houses, structural illumination is used for both decorative and functional reasons. Lighting controlled by dimmers, diffused lighting and luminous ceiling panels are some of the varieties of structural lighting.

And last — but not the least important consideration — is closets. Bedroom closets serve primarily as containers for clothing, but they also may be used to store a variety of other articles. First, determine your storage needs, then make sure bedroom closets will accommodate them. Children's bedrooms should have closet with movable hooks and shelves, a rod which can be elevated as children grow and storage for toys, games and other children's treasures.

Real estate is good investment

As the current economic recovery continues, real estate will again emerge as an excellent buy for most investors, says Richard Caruso, president of Rich Port, Realtor.

Caruso holds that "because of its unique ability to deliver almost any combination of cash flow, growth and tax shelters, the economic events of recent months and years are again showing how remarkably stable, flexible and productive, real estate investments are in both good times and bad."

Caruso compares the long-term appreciation of real estate to the "up and down" characteristics of the stock market, and notes that in most recent years, the yields from stocks have been only slightly better than the same amount of money placed in savings accounts.

"Although," Caruso continues, "there have been considerable losses on the stock market and a steady erosion of the purchasing power of funds in savings accounts, bonds, mortgage and cash value of life insurance policies, those who invested some years ago in well-located, non-speculative real estate, have seen a gratifying growth in their equity, which in most cases, far outstrips the ravages of inflation and increased taxation."

Caruso, who is a nationally known real estate lecturer, observed that a recent issue of U.S. News and World Report carried the lament of an 80 year old retired business man in Arizona who pointed out the money he placed in life insurance in the 1920's and 1930's is now worth only twenty cents on the dollar compared to what the dollar was worth when he sent them ahead to be waiting for him in his old age. Notes Caruso: "If this gentleman had begun a systematic program of building a real estate investment portfolio for the past half century, he would not only have kept pace with inflation, but would undoubtedly have provided a retirement far more comfortable than the meager living he is able to maintain on his twenty cent dollars."

A Governor and Vice President of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, Caruso is also a member of its teaching faculty.

In the Tudor Tradition...

Almost exactly a century ago, Mark Twain's house in Hartford, Connecticut, was completed. The planning of the house required nearly a year, and the result has been referred to as "part steamboat, part medieval stronghold, and part cuckoo clock."

The house pictured above does not reflect Mark Twain's time—the age of the steamboat. Rather, it bespeaks the prosperity of the Tudors, at which time the fortified medieval house had lost much of its importance. All of the twelve rooms, in addition to the reception hall with a cathedral ceiling and the Great Hall with the minstrel's gallery, are of generous dimensions. Furthermore, you will find the detail work, Tudor fireplaces and traffic patterns of considerable interest.

We will build this house for you on your land, or suggest appropriate sites, for a guaranteed price of $138,000. This low price will be in effect for only a limited time, but this residence would also prove to be an excellent investment at a much higher figure.

If you are interested in building this house or would prefer some other exceptional residence of Tudor, French or Georgian origin in the price range of $125,000 and upwards and would like to make the building process a pleasant experience, we invite you to call us for an appointment.

Good lawn helps stop pollution

Lawngrasses are effective "filters" for trapping a variety of substances that might otherwise wash into the soil and contaminate drainage water. A Kentucky bluegrass lawn has hundreds of leaf-bearing shoots to each square foot, sufficient to strain out dust and grime at the same time that they freshen the air by exchanging oxygen for carbon dioxide. And, as leaves having lived their life cycle crumble into humus, the colloids trap many free chemicals. Underground roots and rhizomes are active, too, picking up solubles such as nitrate.

A study at Ohio State University points up grass's beneficial influence. Water running out of drains underlying test fields covered by bluegrass showed only three-tenths of a pound of nitrogen to leach into the subsoil annually on each acre. Twenty times as much was recorded for fields planted to a cultivated crop, such as corn. Even as the bluegrass sod was heavily fertilized, no more than six-tenths of a pound got into the underground water, again less than one-twentieth the amount for similarly fertilized corn.

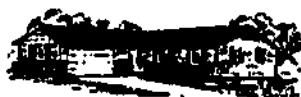

The amount of nitrogen in groundwater that has filtered through bluegrass sod is far less than that occurring in natural rainfall. Rainwater tation because you fertilize your lawn! Rather, vigorous grass helps diminish pollution!

measured 16 pounds of nitrogen for each acre annually. Yet the surface runoff from land covered with sod or woodland usually contains less than a pound of nitrogen. Most of the nitrogen in rainwater is picked up by grasses and the rich soil they help create. No need to fear water pollu-

Uncle Sam and MONY have a great idea for people with no pension plan.

Recently enacted U.S. Government legislation has made possible generous tax benefits for people with no pension plan.

Under the Pension Reform Act, you can contribute annually up to 15% of your earnings—not to exceed $1500—to a pension plan. You can deduct the entire amount from your taxable income for the year and pay no current income taxes on it whatsoever. In fact, you pay no taxes on it until retirement when, most likely, you will be earning less and in a far lower tax bracket. What's more, the money contributed draws interest and increases rapidly in your retirement fund. And you pay no taxes on the interest, either, until retirement.

Through MONY, I have long specialized in pension plans. If you are not participating in a pension plan, I can show you how to get one of your own quickly and easily—while you save on taxes. Just fill in the coupon below.

POLITICAL refugee Magdalina Szokolai escaped from Hungary in 1956 during the revolution. An American citizen since 1964, she constantly savors the sweet taste of freedom and prizes the high living standards which most American women take for granted.

Life in America

Hungarian refugee loves it

by ELEANOR RIVES

"I thought nobody cared about Hungary anymore," said Magdalina Szokolai softly. A flicker of pain crossed her face, but only for an instant.

Mrs. Szokolai, a political refugee, came to America in 1958, became an American citizen in 1964. For the past year and a half, she has worked as manager of Kenessey Gourmets Internationale in Countryside Court, Mount Prospect. Her non-working hours are spent mainly with her two high school-age daughters in their Arlington Heights apartment.

As we sat at the gaily colored umbrella tables outside Kenessey's, Magda reviewed some of the dark events that led to her flight from her homeland. She described Hungary following the Russian occupation in 1943, the frustration and poverty of the people after their homes were converted to multi-family dwellings, their possessions and businesses seized.

"I WAS A child, but I knew what was going on," she said.

Years of suppression and unrest erupted in 1956 in the Hungarian Revolution; twice the Hungarian people almost succeeded in breaking the grip of communism. Magda was in high school. Her older brother was a college student. Together they reasoned that they might have a chance for a better life and decided to flee the country.

After five days of walking and hiding, of dodging curfew restrictions and enlisting help wherever they could find it, Magda and her brother safely crossed the Austrian border.

Life unfolded swiftly in the next few years. Magda moved to Switzerland, married a Hungarian jockey, lived a year in Turkey and two years in Greece where her first daughter was born.

"ABOUT THE time I had learned the Greek language and became accustomed to the people and their customs, we decided to follow my brother, who had gone from Austria to the United States and now lived in Seattle," she said. "He helped us out; he sponsored us."

The Szokolais were not just poor, they had absolutely nothing. But Magda was happy, excited. It was May; Seattle was clean and beautiful. She was determined to learn the language so she could do things for herself. It wasn't easy after just having mastered Greek.

"I'm sure I would have enjoyed life much more those first three years if I had been able to speak English," she said.

MAGDA'S SECOND daughter was born in Joliet in 1961 while they were living with her husband's relatives. Later they lived in Chicago, in Rolling Meadows, Oak Park — in locations convenient to various racetracks. After her divorce in 1969, Magda and her two girls settled in Arlington Heights.

Ever aware of the plight of Hungary, Magda belongs to the Freedom Fighters Society — people like herself who fled communism in 1956 and now raise money to help other refugees.

She has twice taken her daughter to visit her native country, the first time in 1965. "We had to live like the Hungarians," she said. "Crowded, with low living standards and few modern conveniences."

WHEN THEY returned to Hungary in 1972, things were only slightly better. "The Hungarian woman should have her life a little easier by now, shouldn't she?" she asked. "But no," she answered herself. "The top 10,000 in the country have it good. For the rest, it is very difficult. I could never live there again. I could not adjust."

As for America, she loves the northwest suburbs — so tranquil, so convenient with the city nearby. "No one has the right to deny you the freedom to live like this," she said. "I want my children to enjoy life too. I hope to send my girls to college."

Although she is a working woman, Magda is not in sympathy with the Women's Lib movement. "I'm a working woman because of necessity," she said. "I'm not trying to prove anything. It's not easy to be the main support of the family and still be a woman. In the communist countries, everyone works — no one stays home."

THE AMERICAN woman has always been envied by the European woman, according to Mrs. Szokolai. She has time for herself and all the material things a woman needs.

"But no, the American woman is not spoiled," she said. "The way I see American families living; that is the way I think people should live. They deserve it."

"Life for the American woman is super-fantastic!"

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Now let me tell you about MY aching back!

Among those of the biped species, it is a favorite subject for millions. And it is particularly pertinent with me because a few months ago I endured a laminectomy. In my case, they tell me, because I was under the influence of sodium pentathol, it took more than five hours to excise most of a disc pushing against and pinching the nerves of my spinal cord.

In other words, I had back surgery for a slipped disc.

Not long ago, Morley Safer sonorously proclaimed on a segment of 60 Minutes to millions of CBS televisioners: "For millions of Americans, 'Oh, my aching back' is more than a

AS ANY DARWINIAN scholar can tell you, man was not designed to be a two-footed creature. But since we've got grasping hands, we reached out with them and the resultant stress generally centers on the lower back.

I had known for 25 years, through periodic episodes, that the disc (pulpy matter akin to a rubber washer) between my fourth and fifth lumbar vertebrae was degenerating.

"What you've got," the late Dr. Harrison McLaughlin once told me at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, "is a gate with a rusty hinge."

This past winter the hinge creaked and cracked. I even missed my first Super Bowl. I couldn't play tennis or ski either. My progression (or regression) to those millions who've had back aches is familiar enough.

FIRST, THERE was physical therapy — ultrasound heat and massage to loosen the tight back muscles. I was still tight. Then the doctor suggested traction for a week.

Traction is an amazingly archaic process in which sand bags are suspended from a frame at the end of the bed, the bags connected by straps to a truss around your lower body, the idea being to lie prone for days while the gradual pull of the weights straightens out your back and relieves the muscle spasms. At $121 a day for a private room, those are luxurious sand bags.

After a week of sand bags, I could hardly hobble to the john.

So back I went for serious testing, a myelogram, with spinal fluid drawn and dye substituted, after which you're tilted on a see-sawing table while X rays show where the dye is being blocked. Don't ask if it hurts. They showed that my disc was ruptured, all right.

"WE'VE GOT YOU down" for surgery on Friday," said the doctor.

Wait a minute. I didn't recall being cut up since I was eight days old. And I didn't relish the idea now. So I went home to remain prone for a week, waiting for that little disc to recede into its natural habitat. It didn't. I decided that surgery was inevitable and the hell with Super Bowl IX.

All herniated (or ruptured, or slipped) discs aren't immediate candidates for surgery. It has been discovered fairly recently and with validity, that injecting an extract of the papaya plant has an atrophying effect on a protruding disc. Bill Melton, who makes his living twisting his torso to hit a baseball, has had this treatment and he's back playing third base for the Chicago White Sox, bending to pick up ground balls.

BUT THE PROCESS is still largely experimental and its best practitioner is in Elgin, Illinois, while I was still having trouble traveling as far as the bath room.

I went through surgery — technically, a bilateral laminotomy.

Eighteen days later, I escorted my daughter down the aisle to be married. I listed strongly to starboard, looking like a cross between Quasimodo clambering around the gargoyles of Notre Dame and Frankenstein's monster taking his first tentative steps. I told everyone I was leaning over to support my daughter.

My neurosurgeon, Dr. Barton Brown, couldn't believe it.

A few days later, spasmodic shocks hit me with the slightest misstep and psyched me out for more than a week. Hey, doc, I clamored, you got to do something.

SOAK IN A hot tub (twice a day for 30 to 40 minute sessions, he advised).

Good idea, I drew a hot tub, stepped in, bent at the knees. And that's as far as I got. There was no way I was going to be able to stretch out. I called Dr. Brown to explain my predicament.

"That gimpy, eh?"

Yep.

4-H quilt will help pay their way to state fair

A completely hand-sewn quilt featuring a Dresden plate center design will help defray state fair expenses for area 4-Hers. The quilt will be sold at the North Cook County Fair this weekend.

Arlington Heights leaders, 4-Hers and their mothers contributed cotton prints and gingham and appliqued and quilted individual squares which have been assembled and sewn together with bias strips and tied to a backing fabric.

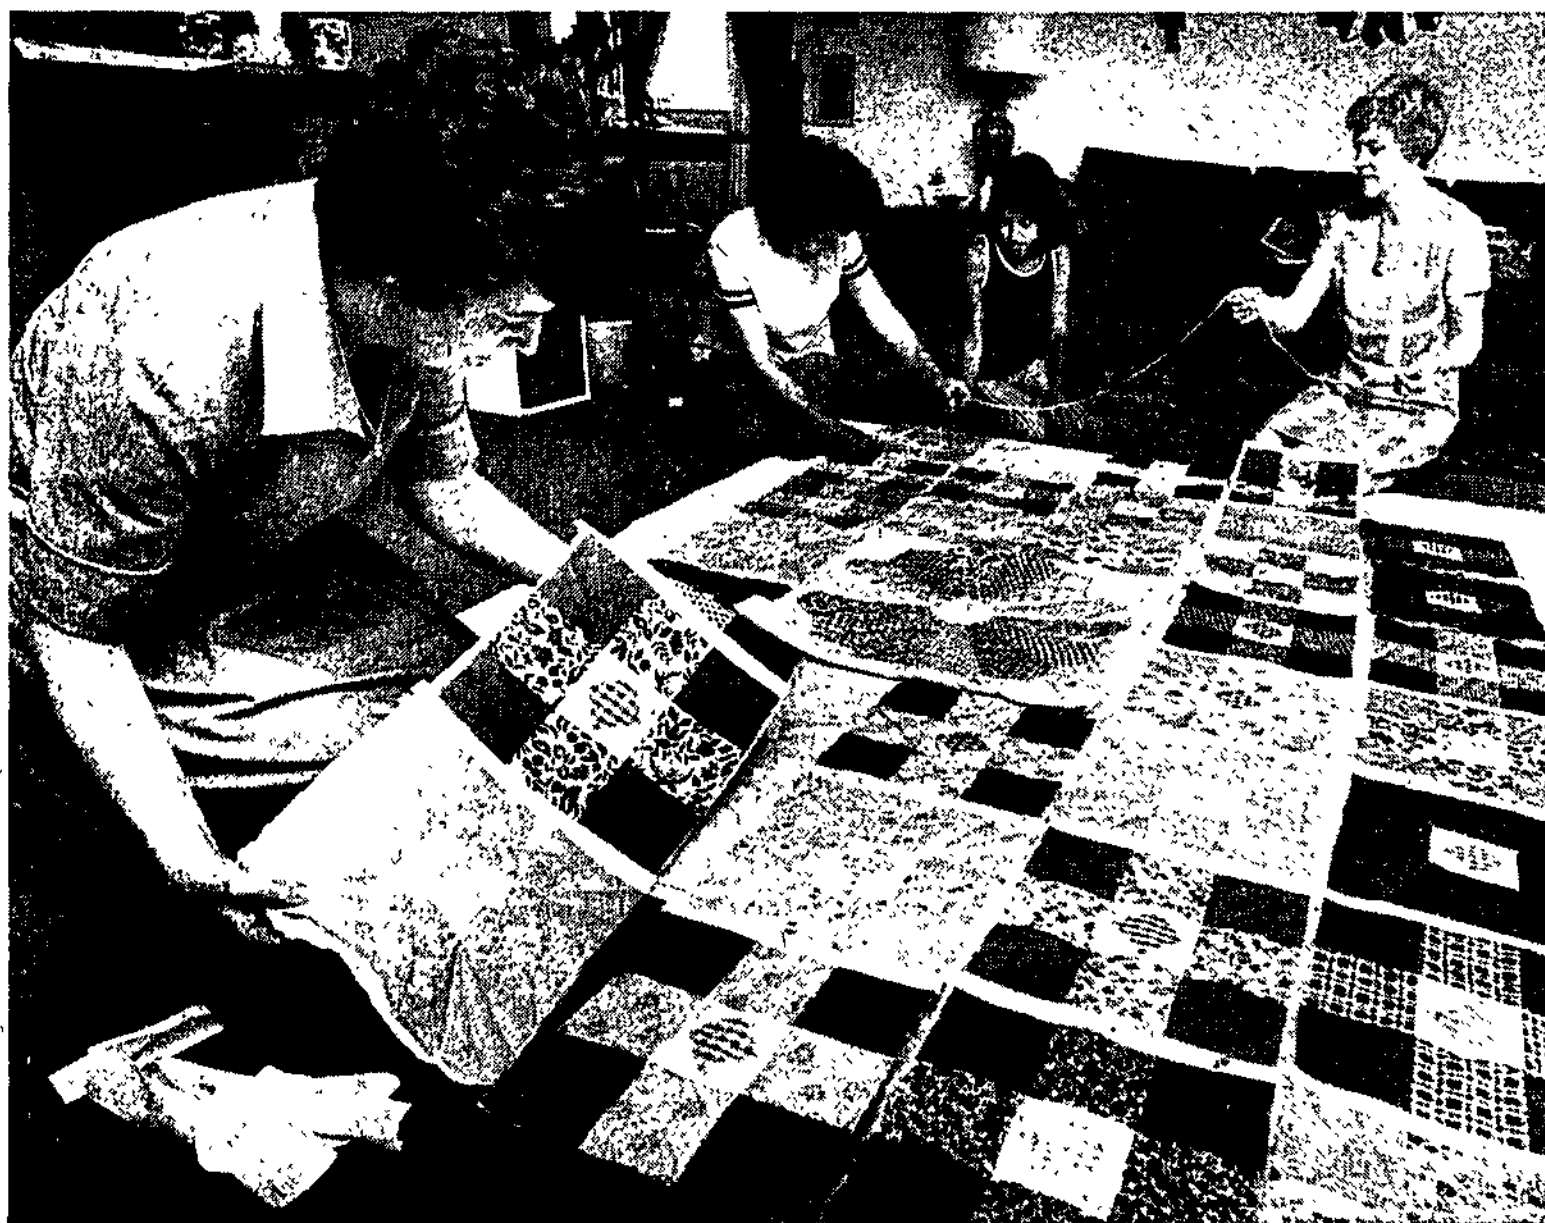

Leaders will also be demonstrating quilt finishing techniques at the North Cook Fair to be held on the Knights of Columbus grounds in Barrington this Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

AMONG PROJECTS to be displayed at the North Cook Fair will be the 150 garments sewn by 4-Hers and modeled and judged last week during a show in the Randhurst Mall.

Selected to enter sewing competition at the state fair dress revue, to be held in Springfield Aug. 8-17, were: Susan Urso, Elk Grove Village; Elaine Moy, Donna Foy, Betsy Nikolai and Holly Vogt, Palatine; Barbara Austin and Mary Ann Scholl, Barrington; Joanne Stecker and Carol Haberkamp, Mount Prospect.

Carol is entered in the buying clothing project; Holly and Joanne in construction competition; the others in overall appearance.

THIS QUILT OF original design, a joint effort of Arlington Heights 4-Hers, their mothers and leaders, will be displayed this weekend at the North Cook County Fair. Assembling the individual squares are Dorothy Jacobs, Josephine and Pauline Perez and Mary Larson. The fair opens Friday with judging of exhibits, trophy presentations, a king and queen coronation and square dancing. Games and fun contests are open to all. Hot air balloon rides, horse, cat and fish shows are Saturday and Sunday features.

Parent group has 'Better Concept'

A group of parents who would like to restore the role of the parent to the authority and responsibility of previous generations have banded together and are inviting other parents who share their concern to join them in exploring "A Better Concept."

Mrs. June Orlovski, Wheeling, one of the organizers, explained that the group believes there are reciprocal rights between parent and child, not only of love, care and guidance, but to freedom and security from outside interference. They want to reclaim these rights and to restore parental control.

Any parents interested may learn more by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to "A Better Concept," Box 405, Prospect Heights, Ill. 60077.

Salvage store report challenged

A recent government report on stores that sell food salvaged from fires and other disasters raises some serious questions concerning the safety of some of these products.

But the manager of a local salvage store sharply criticized the report for "lumping all salvage stores together."

The General Accounting Office reported it found unlabeled canned food for sale, as well as leaky and swollen cans. However, the agency visited only 30 stores out of an estimated 1,000 nationwide.

The GAO report accompanied a recommendation that the federal government institute tighter inspection procedures to ensure that no harmful food products are sold in salvage stores.

THE REPORT said that consumers currently have no assurance that a product has not been subjected to adverse amounts of heat or water or air, that it is not outdated, or just what its actual condition is.

But, according to Tom Hennig, manager of The Village Store, 1434 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village, the merchandise he sells is subject to strict internal quality control as well as regulation and inspection by the state health department.

Hennig said state health inspectors check both the food and drug stocks, and that he and his employees also double-check all merchandise before putting it on the shelves.

"Anything that is badly rusted, smoked, dented — we throw it out. If a customer brings something to us and it doesn't look good, we check the rest of the stock. We absolutely do not sell unlabeled goods. We know where everything came from and what the situation was. I would not knowingly put anything in my store that I could be criticized for."

THE VILLAGE Store is operated by Underwriters' Salvage Co. to dispose of usable merchandise that has "survived" a fire or flood or other catastrophe in a store or warehouse, and thus recoup some of the loss.

The Village Store handles clothing, furniture, appliances, cosmetics, drugs and other items in addition to food.

Meanwhile, there seems to be another kind of safety problem in some supermarket chains. The Consumer Product Safety Commission has received a petition from Oregon's public health officer asking that safety requirements for grocery carts be written.

The Oregon health officer, Dr. Edward Press, said the CPSC itself has received a petition from Oregon's public health officer asking that safety requirements for grocery carts be written.

DR. PRESS suggested that carts should be designed with a wider base and lower center of gravity so they would not tip so easily.

I recently observed one of these modern top-heavy carts tipped over by a youngster. Incredibly, a tiny baby in a plastic carrier had been left in the toddler seat of the cart and went crashing to the floor.

Apparently, the purpose of this design is to save customers the necessity of unloading the cart onto the checkout counter.

But considering how long one waits in the average supermarket line, the old routine of unloading the cart at least gives one something to do!

Good herbicide should kill poison ivy

Dear Dorothy: We were just catching our breath after moving into our new place when the kids found poison ivy in the empty lot next to us. It was all over them and life was a misery for all of us. That part is over, but we have to get the ivy out of there. We've tried pulling it up, but it won't come. What do I use? — Marti Hunter

Go to the garden supply store and get either amitrole, silvex, ammonium sulfate or 2, 4-D and start spraying. My experience has been that the only time one can successfully pull poison ivy out of the ground is after good, soaking rains in the spring or fall. But a good herbicide applied often enough kills the weed. However, even after it looks dead, don't take chances. Wear rubber gloves and cover clothing when you go to clean up the area.

Dear Dorothy: I need help again. Burned some stew in the wonderful heavy aluminum pot I've used for 40 years. The burned stuff simply won't budge and I don't think leaving it in the sun will help. This pot would be so expensive to replace I wonder if you have any other suggestions. — Mae M. Knight

Try soaking it with a solution of water and a tablespoon of dishwasher machine detergent or a solution of one of the enzyme presoaks. Let it soak for a day or so and most of the gunk ought to come off. No. 3 steel wool with the pumice soap ought to take off the last bits of the burned matter.

TIP TO NEW homemakers: A small package of activated charcoal granules will absorb refrigerator odors. After several weeks, they may pick up a slight odor. All you have to do to renew freshness is to put the container out in the sun for a day or so.

Millions share back pain

"Well, it's probably a good thing you didn't stretch out," he said. "We would have had to call the fire department to get you out with a derrick."

I settled for hot showers. Gradually my mobility began to improve. I emphasize gradually because recovery from back surgery can be painstakingly slow. You learn to re-structure your habits. Roll onto a side, prop up on an elbow, get your legs over — that's how you get out of bed. I couldn't sneeze. A sensation would come into the nose, followed by a little jolt in the lower back. But I could get into a tub.

WAKING OUT during a short respite in Hawaii, I made a major breakthrough. I tied my own shoelaces for the first time.

Back sufferers should not compare symptoms or recovery rates. Severity of operations vary. In a laminectomy, scar tissue replaces the removed part of the disc. My friend, Dr. Nicholas Zervas of the Harvard Medical School, told me one of his patients actually went out and played tennis eight days after disc surgery (I couldn't get my socks on at that stage). A completely degenerated disc may require a fusion, with vertebrae mechanically welded together. My friend, Sheldon Milenbach, couldn't get out of bed for six weeks, at all.

The key word, because a delicate part of your anatomy has been altered, is patience. It's frustrating. It can be painful, too.

But none of my tennis partners can ever again accuse me of gamesmanship when I complain, "Oh, my aching back."

Now's time to eat fruit

The Creative Plant Conference for the nation's garden writers met last week at Michigan State University in Lansing, and it was "the berries."

One highlight of the conference was a wine judging session. We "worked like mad" to discern which wines were superior, taste-testing Michigan's best.

Michigan isn't a state particularly known for its wines, but they're trying. Michigan's wine industry has only developed in the last six years; before that the vino tasted like vinegar. But they've hybridized new French-American wine grapes now, and the picture is getting rosy. The garden writers were getting a little rosy too, especially after the pleasant Bronte (brut) champagne, Michigan's riesling, sauternes, chablis and two dry red wines all but forgotten under the haze of "hard work." (Students at Michigan State receive three credit hours for taking the course in wine-tasting.)

ON THE WAY home from the conference, I ate my way across the fruit belt, munching on sweet Bing cherries, plums, peaches, apricots at fruit stands dotting the highway along Lake Michigan's east coast.

One development which has really improved the small fruit production outlook is the use of a chemical applied to cherry trees to facilitate harvesting. As cherries begin to ripen tarps are laid under the trees and the chemical is applied which causes the fruit to fall to the ground. The harvest can then be effected by picking up the cherry-filled tarps. Perhaps this product will be on the open markets at some time soon, for the benefit of homeowners with their own trees who wish to harvest their cherries the easy way.

BACK AT home, the blueberry crop was ready, and raspberries ripe for picking. One lady I chanced to meet said she was never going to go into the brush again to pick Wisconsin wild berries because she contracted poison ivy last summer in the Northwoods and "it isn't worth the chance." (The incident reminded me of the magnificent specimen of poison ivy five feet high and three feet wide, labeled and resplendent in all its foreboding glory I had seen just the previous day at the Beal Botanical Gardens on the Michigan State campus.)

At home, I passed a place that sold fresh raspberries fertilized with milk manure and irrigated by a trout stream, so naturally I stopped and bought a few quarts $$$$.

THIS WEEKEND we plan an outing to Madison, Wisconsin (about a two-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs), where every weekend in summer, fruit vendors, vegetable, flower and herb growers — many of them small farmers or homeowners with big gardens — converge on the court

by Mary B. Good of the State Capitol Building to sell their wares. Having visited there before, I can assure other tourists of the colorful, garden-y and especially tasty flavor of this open air market.

AFTER THIS, I look forward to the next big fruit binge — and the last of the summer — when I'll be off to the American Horticultural Congress in Hawaii in September. I've signed up for a pomology tour, of course, in the expectation that papaya, guava, pineapple or some other sweets might possibly come my way.

If you're a fruit fanatic as I am, summer is your time to take in all the juicy naturalness that this country has to offer.

SUMMER'S PRODUCE BONANZA

It has been said that variety is the spice of life, so use these ideas as the starting point for summer menu variety. Fresh fruits will come alive with any of these colorful dressings. Fresh vegetables will take on new dimensions with the many variations of Herbed Lemon Butter. So take a walk through the produce department or your backyard garden and begin a new summer eating experience.

REMEMBER! Most vegetables — peas, squash, carrots, green beans, broccoli — should be cooked in very little water — usually just enough to keep the vegetable from burning. Do not overcook. Vegetables should retain their bright color and be cooked until fork tender but still crisp. Here's an "Herbed Lemon Butter" that has endless possibilities with your perfectly cooked vegetables.

BASIC HERBED LEMON BUTTER

1/2 cup butter	1/2 teaspoon of one or more of the following: Parsley, marjoram, oregano, minced onion, tarragon, paprika OR, 1 teaspoon dill weed or basil
1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon fresh squeezed lemon juice

Melt butter; add lemon peel and juice, blending well. Add any one of the seasonings or a combination, if desired. Keep warm while preparing vegetables. Makes 1/2 cup.

LEMON BUTTER PATTIES

Use Basic Herbed Lemon Butter ingredients, creaming butter, then adding lemon peel and juice. Stir in parsley and add any other desired seasoning. Shape into 1 x 5-inch roll. Place in refrigerator to harden. Slice roll into 8 butter pats and serve on vegetables.

LEMON BROILED TOMATOES

Basic Herbed Lemon Butter	3 large tomatoes, cut in half
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs

Use Basic Herbed Lemon Butter ingredients, creaming butter, then adding lemon peel and juice. Stir in desired seasoning and bread crumbs. Spread mixture on tomato halves and broil until lightly browned.

LEMON STUFFED MUSHROOMS

Basic Herbed Lemon Butter	20 large mushroom caps, rinsed, drained
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs	1/2 cup hot water

Use Basic Herbed Lemon Butter ingredients, creaming butter, then adding lemon peel and juice. Stir in desired seasoning and bread crumbs. Spoon mixture into mushroom caps. Place in shallow baking pan, filling-side up. Pour in water and bake for 15 minutes at 375 degrees.

Herbed Orange Butter: Substitute same amounts orange peel and juice for lemon peel and juice. Add desired seasoning. Excellent on carrots. To make Orange Butter Patties: Follow directions for Lemon Butter Patties.

A beautiful summer fruit compote can double as a fruit salad or dessert. The choice of fruits is limited only by your imagination. Serve in a compote dish, pretty crystal bowl, or a hollowed-out watermelon boat if you've got a big crowd coming. Topped with one of these delicious dressings, it's sure to please. Keep a basket of your favorite summer fruits on hand all the time for refreshing warm-weather desserts and snacks.

POPPY SEED DRESSING

1/2 cup sugar	1/2 cup fresh squeezed lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon salt	1 cup salad oil
1 teaspoon dry mustard	Few drops red food coloring
1 teaspoon finely minced onion	1 tablespoon poppy seeds
1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon peel

Combine all ingredients, except food coloring and poppy seeds, in blender. Blend until well combined. Add coloring, blend again; stir in seeds. Chill before serving. Store in covered jar. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

GINGERED LEMON SOUR CREAM DRESSING

Salads and vegetables are the specialty of Laura Hartman of Arlington Heights. Her favorite recipes can be used year 'round with appealing results.

Baked broccoli makes an excellent accompaniment for anything, from grilled meats to a holiday turkey. Fresh or frozen broccoli is baked with water chestnuts and pimientos. In cream of celery soup topped with buttered bread crumbs. Colorful in appearance, it goes well with beef, fowl, fish or ham.

Popular with guests is Laura's Sesame Seed Tossed Salad. This is made with romaine or bibb lettuce, toasted sesame seeds, crumbled bacon and bleu cheese tossed with a sweet-sour oil and vinegar dressing. The sesame seeds give it a unique flavor, and the salad is delicious with chicken dishes, roast beef, steak and Italian food.

IT MAKES A big hit with her husband, Bob, while her children, Phyllis, Mark and Barbara and a married daughter, Kathy (Mrs. Tim) Coniglio of Palatine, like her vegetable soup best of all. However, Laura has no recipe for her soup, but just cleans out the refrigerator adding bits of this and that to make it tasty and nourishing.

A Seafoam Salad is refreshing for the summer months, while its decorative appearance also makes it appropriate for the holidays. It consists of cream cheese, lime gelatin, mashed pears and whipped cream. Laura makes the salad in a star mold, decorating each point with maraschino cherries. Rich and elegant, it will hold its shape well and is ideal for buffets.

Tips On Storing Meat And Poultry

As soon as you get the meat home, take off the store wrapping and rewrap it loosely in wax paper so that air can get to it. Sometimes it's more convenient to put it in an open dish and cover it loosely with waxed paper. Put in refrigerator.

If you're freezing the meat, however, it should be wrapped airtight.

If possible, take the meat out of the refrigerator before cooking and let it stand until it is at room temperature. About an hour for small cuts, two or even more for large cuts.

SEAFOAM SALAD

Brown sesame seeds in a dry pan over low heat on stove, stirring constantly.

Put lettuce into a bowl; sprinkle with bacon, bleu cheese and sesame seeds. Just before serving, shake dressing, pour over salad and toss. Serve immediately. Serves 8.

1 No. 2½ size canned pears
1 small package lime gelatin
8 ounces cream cheese
2 tablespoons cream
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

Drain juice from pears. Heat 1 cup juice to boiling and pour over gelatin, stirring until dissolved.

Mix cheese and cream until smooth. Add gelatin mixture and stir until well-blended. Chill until partially thickened. Fold in well-drained mashed pears and whipped cream.

Pour into a 1½ quart mold or ester mold and chill for several hours. For the holidays, decorate each point of the star with maraschino cherry halves. Serves 8 to 12.

That's right. They're happy because they've had a great year. And we'd like to tell you about it. They're the Dave Modene Agency of Mt. Prospect. For some time now, they've been serving Lutherans in your area with good insurance coverage from Aid Association for Lutherans. And they've been doing a good job.

But 1974 was a special year. Dave and his people worked harder than ever. They grew in size, so there are a few new faces in the picture. They served more Lutherans than before with AAL coverage. They became even more involved in fraternal and benevolence activities. And they helped AAL members find new ways to share God's gifts with those in need.

You can see why we're really proud of Dave and his entire agency. So proud, in fact, that we recognized their efforts with a special Agency Builders Award. And we only gave two of those awards in the entire country.

To Dave and his people, the award means more than one thousand AAL representatives and one million AAL members all over America are saying "nice going." To Lutherans in your area, it means having very good people working with you. They're helpful, concerned—and happy.

Area store sells foods from Mexico

by BARBARA LADD

(This is another in a series of articles about food specialty shops to be found in the Northwest suburbs.)

Paper pinatas hang from the ceiling and Mexican foods line the walls of the LaTejanita Grocery in Arlington Heights. The store, located at 202 N. Dunton, reopened two months ago under the management of Julia Marroquin.

The store is exceptionally clean and neat. But because of its recent opening, business is "so-so," said Mrs. Marroquin. "But it picks up day by day."

She said her best selling items are the corn tortillas and a Mexican sausage made from beef, pork and a variety of seasonings like chili powder and garlic.

THE CANNED section has hot green chili relish, many hot sauces, Mexican and enchilada sauce. There are also mole, refried beans and a variety of other pickled, canned and spiced Mexican foods.

The quantity of fresh fruits and vegetables is not large, but it is different. Included are tomatillo (green tomatoes), mangos, stuffing peppers and green bananas for frying.

From Chicago stores, Mrs. Marroquin gets sweet rolls, flour tortillas and large fried pork rinds. There also are large bags of corn husks (for tamales) and dried whole peppers.

BESIDES FOOD, the store has a limited number of Spanish and Mexican magazines, shirts, radios, hair oils, etc.

So if Mexican style cooking is your specialty, LaTejanita Grocery might be the place to find those spicy ingredients or side dishes to set off your meal.

The meaning behind the label

July was the deadline for nutritional labeling to be on all fortified and fabricated foods and foods that boast nutritional benefits in their advertising. Many food manufacturers have voluntarily responded to nutritional labeling even though they don't necessarily produce foods which fall into the mandatory category.

However, it is up to the consumer to read and understand the labels if any value is to be obtained from the ruling.

As compiled from U.S. Department of Agriculture bulletins, definitions for a potato flakes label are explained here. All other nutritional labels follow the same pattern.

NUTRITION INFORMATION. Information must be given for a specified serving of the product as found in the container. This label shows information for a serving of potato flakes. Additional information may be listed for the product in combination with other ingredients — flakes prepared with butter, milk, salt, and water, for example.

SERVING SIZE. This is the amount of food for which nutrition information is given. It might not be the same as the amount you eat.

SERVINGS PER CONTAINER. This is the number of servings of the size shown that are in the container. This number may help you visualize the size of the serving. For example, if there are four servings in the container, you know that one serving is equal to one-fourth of the amount in the container.

To find the cost of a serving, divide the price for the container by the number of servings per container.

CALORIES. A calorie is a unit of measurement that tells you how much energy you get from food. The body needs energy for activity and rest. Eating foods day after day that have fewer total calories than you use up will help you lose weight. If you eat foods that have more total calories than you need, the extra energy is stored as fat and you can gain weight. All foods provide calories.

On labels, the calorie content is shown to the nearest two calories (2, 4, 6, etc.) up to 20 calories; to the nearest five calories (20, 25, 30 etc.) up to 50 calories; and to the nearest 10 calories (50, 60, 70, etc.) above 50 calories.

PROTEIN. Protein is the basic part of every cell in your body.

CARBOHYDRATE. Foods contain three types of carbohydrate — starch, sugar and cellulose. Starch and sugar give energy. Cellulose is important for bulk or roughage in the diet.

FAT IS A concentrated source of energy. (A gram of fat provides roughly twice as much energy as a gram of protein or carbohydrate.) Fat in food digests slowly and helps keep you from feeling hungry. Fat carries the fat soluble vitamins — A, D, E, and K.

GRAMS. Grams are units of weight. They are used on the label to express amounts of protein, fat and carbohydrate. A gram is a much smaller unit of weight than an ounce (one ounce equals 28 grams). A paper clip weighs about one gram.

PERCENTAGE. The amounts of protein, vitamins and minerals in a serving are shown on the nutrition information panel as percentages of the U.S. Recommended Dietary Allowances (U.S. RDA's).

Percentages of the U.S. RDA are given in increments of two per cent up to 10 per cent; of five per cent up to 50 per cent; and of 10 per cent above 50 per cent.

U.S. RECOMMENDED DAILY ALLOWANCES. The RDA's are the amounts of protein, vitamins and minerals used as standards in nutrition tain the skin and the inner linings of the body.

VITAMIN C. Vitamin C, or ascorbic acid, helps to keep blood vessels strong and to develop connective tissues. It has a number of other roles, from tooth and bone formation to wound healing.

CALCIUM. Calcium is the most abundant mineral element in the body. Teamed up with phosphorus, it is largely responsible for the hardness of bones and teeth.

IRON. The body requires iron for making hemoglobin, the red part of blood that carries oxygen to the cells and carbon dioxide away from them. Iron also helps the cells get energy from food.

THIAMIN, RIBOFLAVIN, NIACIN. These B vitamins play a central role in the release of energy from food. They also help with proper functioning of nerves, normal appetite, good digestion, and healthy skin.

The Department of Agriculture has recently published two aids to help people use nutrition information on food labels in checking and improving their diets.

The first is a bulletin, "Nutrition Labeling — Tools for Its Use," which describes and supplements the nutrition information on food labels. The second is the "Nutrimer," a device to help total calories and nutrients supplied by food for a day.

Both can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The Bulletin is $1.15. The "Nutrimer" is 70 cents.

A crockery cook's book

"Crockery Cookery"
by Mable Hoffman
Bantam, $1.85

A cookbook is now on the market aimed primarily at crockery cooks. It includes 262 pre-tested recipes and instructional illustrations, as well as a highly praised consumer section on brand name crockery pots and their characteristics.

The original edition appeared last February, published by H. P. Books, and became No. 1 on most trade paperback bestseller lists. The Bantam publishing in July hopefully will help meet consumer demand.

It's no wonder the book has been successful. Ten million crockery pots were sold during 1974 and that number is expected to double this year. When the book first came out, Marshall Field's Book Department in Chicago reported that 53 copies were sold in less than eight hours.

"CROCKERY COOKERY" is the first full-size cookbook specifically developed and pre-tested for the new slow-cooking electric crockery pots.

Mable Hoffman, the author, is a professional home economist and food stylist. Her recipes range from appetizers to desserts.

Included are stuffed flank steak, Chinese beef and pea pods, fondue Italiano, fruited pork chops, ham and chicken pie, corn pudding, hot buttered punch, bouillabaisse, chili dogs, moist cornbread and banana nut cake.

The instructions are complete and efficiently presented — a good feature for the time-wise cook. And, although some of the recipes are quite complicated for daily use, there is something for everyone and every occasion.

Corn, the pioneer cooks mainstay

To the earliest American settlers corn was life. Frugal pioneer cooks, who depended on this nutritious grain as a mainstay throughout the year, learned early that it stored well in the dried form and could be stone ground to make the meal for the corn bread that was served three times a day.

They learned to cook the fresh corn in many different ways, too. Besides roasting the ears in the husks over the glowing coals as they had been taught to do by the Indians or cooking the fresh ears in iron kettles that hung over the hearth, early American cooks created such dishes as Corn Pudding and Corn Chowder.

Recipes for these dishes are found in many of the old records that cooks are busily scanning now that we are celebrating our Bicentennial. Here are modern-day versions of the same foods.

FRESH CORN PUDDING

4 ears fresh corn (about)
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup margarine, melted
Grease 1 1/2-quart shallow baking dish. Scrape corn kernels and liquid from cobs. (There should be about 2 cups.) Stir together corn, milk, cornstarch, eggs, sugar, salt and margarine until well mixed. Pour into prepared baking dish. Place in baking pan; fill pan with hot water to depth of 1 inch. Bake in 350-degree oven 1 hour or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Makes 6 servings.

NEW ENGLAND CORN CHOWDER

4 ears fresh corn (about)
1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1/2 cup finely chopped green pepper
2 quarts milk
1/3 cup cornstarch
4 strips bacon, cooked and crumbled
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Scrape corn kernels and liquid from cobs. There should be 2 cups. In skillet melt margarine; saute onion over medium heat until transparent. Add green pepper, saute until tender. In 3 quart saucepan stir together 1 1/2 quarts of the milk and the corn. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes. Stir together until smooth, cornstarch and remaining 2 cups milk. Add to corn mixture. Stir in bacon, salt, sugar, pepper, and sauteed onion and green pepper. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

COUNTRY CORN CASSEROLE
4 ears fresh corn
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 package (10 oz.) frozen lima beans, thawed

1 package (16 oz.) sausage links, cooked and sliced
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 recipe Corn Meal Topping (recipe follows)

Scrape corn kernels and liquid from cobs. (There should be about 2 cups.) In saucepan stir together corn and milk. Bring to boil over medium heat. Reduce heat; simmer ten minutes or until corn is tender. Cool to room temperature. In skillet melt margarine. Add onion. Saute over medium heat 5 minutes or until translucent. Remove from heat. Stir in cornstarch until smooth. Stir in milk, corn, lima beans, sausage, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Pour into 1 1/2 quart casserole. Spoon on topping. Bake in 450 degree oven 15 minutes or until topping is golden. Makes 6 servings.

Corn Meal Topping: Mix together 1/2 cup unsifted flour, 1/2 cup yellow corn meal, 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Stir together 1 well beaten egg, 1/2 cup milk and 2 tablespoons corn oil. Add egg mixture to dry ingredients, stirring until moistened. (Batter will be lumpy.)

Correction

Instructions for Upside-down Pineapple Ice Cream Cake are being rerun because of errors in the recipe appearing in July 24 Sugar 'n Spice.

Turn undrained pineapple into saucpan. Sprinkle gelatin and salt over it. Let stand 5 minutes. Add eggs and cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves and mixture thickens slightly. Remove from heat. Stir in sugar and lime or lemon juice; cool. Stir in rum. Turn into deep 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Freeze firm, about 2 hours. Break up into chunks and turn into large chilled bowl. Beat smooth. Whip cream to soft peaks, and fold it in. Return to freezer until firm. Makes about 1 1/2 quarts.

To make upside-down ice cream cake: Arrange 8 drained canned pineapple slices (2-3/4 ounce cans) in bottom of a 9 by 2-inch upside-down cake pan, round or square layer cake pan or fancy mold of similar size. Pack ice cream over slices. Return to freezer 45 minutes to 1 hour to firm-up. Unmold on chilled serving plate. Decorate with strawberries and mint sprigs. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Calorie clues

Dietetic ice cream may have as many calories per serving as regular ice cream. Even though it uses an artificial sweetener, its other ingredients, such as fats, raise the calorie level.

Some brands of dietetic cookies are high in calories because they are especially made for low-salt rather than low-calorie diets. (UPI)

Use special recipes

Combination foods such as soups and stews need to be processed for canning with recipes especially designed for them. The correct time and temperature should be determined scientifically. experiments by home-makers can lead to spoilage and deadly botulism poisoning.

How-to methods for chard

Back in the days of war gardens, we grew a lot of Swiss chard which is one of the most versatile of greens, but not a common visitor to the American table.

It's available all year, not expensive as greens go, and should be employed to give variety to your menus. When Swiss chard can't be obtained, try Chinese chard (Bok Choy) which may be prepared in the same manner.

Chard is best steamed since this preserves both the flavor and vitamin content. Wash leaves very thoroughly to remove all sand and cut in large pieces. Put in a saucepan with a small amount of boiling, salted water. Cover and steam 10 to 12 minutes (avoid overcooking). Remove from heat, season to taste with salt and pepper and add a little fresh lemon juice.

A baked dish is this chard fromage. Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine and blend with 3 tablespoons flour. Add 1 cup milk, stirring constantly until mixture is thickened and smooth. Add 1 teaspoon salt. Remove from heat and blend in 1/2 pound grated Cheddar cheese.

ADD 1 1/2 CUPS chopped chard (cooked as above), 1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs and 3 well beaten eggs. Pour into a well-greased ring mold or

by Charles Flynn

shallow baking dish. Bake in a 325-degree oven for 1 hour or until firm. Serves 6.

Mrs. Irene Dowson, Champaign, Ill., recommended this Swiss chard and ham casserole. Mix together 3 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon butter salt, 1/4 teaspoon celery salt, 1 cup milk and 2 well beaten eggs. Cook 5 minutes, stirring constantly until thick and smooth.

Combine 4 cups cooked and diced swiss chard and 2 cups diced cooked ham. Put these into a buttered casserole and pour over the sauce. Top with 1/2 cup grated cheddar cheese and dot top with 3 tablespoons butter. Bake in 350-degree oven for 30 minutes.

This makes a large casserole dish and will serve 8.

Hospital plans 3-year expansion

by KAREN BLECHA

Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, will spend an estimated $25 million over the next three years to add five floors to the hospital and remodel existing facilities.

Construction, starting with a new 1,000-car parking lot north of Dempster Street, will begin in August or September. Hospital officials already have received approval required for the expansion from the Illinois State Health Facilities Planning Board.

The addition will not increase the 685 patient beds now at the hospital, said T. L. Jacobsen, executive vice president. The five new floors will be used mostly for the education of medical students, he said; there also will be space for a cafeteria, student quarters and library.

FUNDS FOR the project will come from gifts, fund-raising drives, grants and cash on hand. The State of Illinois has given the hospital $2 million to assist with construction of the medical education floors. Jacobsen said the hospital has $7.5 million on hand, raised in part by patient charges. He said included in all current charges is money to cover depreciation and expansion.

"Spacewise, this is not our largest addition," Jacobsen said. "But dollar-wise it is. We've been open 15 years, and there have been 15 years of inflation."

Architects for the project are Burnham and Hammond, a Chicago firm. After the parking lot, construction will begin on the five floors to be added to the west wing of the hospital. The main hospital building will be 10 stories high.

The hospital is affiliated with the Abraham Lincoln School of Medicine at the University of Illinois and teaches undergraduate medical students. The hospital also has 43 residents, or post-graduate medical students, on staff.

Jacobsen said the addition replaces plans by the hospital to build its own medical school. The hospital chose to become affiliated with the University of Illinois instead, he said, because it required less capital and the hospital could be involved in medical education sooner.

WITH THE FIVE new floors, hospital officials will have facilities by 1980 to teach 100 medical students and 55 residents. Besides current resident programs in family practice, podiatrics, pathology, radiology and surgery, hospital officials hope to add programs in internal medicine, psy-

Unit shuns food price restrictions

Computer-code pricing systems in supermarkets will not be restricted in Des Plaines if the city council adopts the recommendation of its committee studying the issue.

The city code and judiciary committee Wednesday night decided to hold off on an ordinance which would force food stores to stamp prices on groceries while using a new computer pricing system.

Two of the three committee members voted to wait until the pricing systems are installed in local stores before recommending an ordinance to regulate them.

The committee has been investigating controls on the controversial pricing system since April. Ald. Arthur Erblich, 5th, expressed concern that use of the pricing methods would mean prices no longer would be stamped on items.

A PUBLIC HEARING was held in June when representatives of Jewel Tea Co. and the Illinois Retail Merchants Assn. asked the city not to place restrictions on the pricing method. Several residents testified against the system.

The computer pricing system involves the use of an electronic eye at the checkout counter that "reads" prices stamped in a code on the merchandise. Many manufacturers use the code. No local food stores use the system but several chains have adopted electronic cash registers that can be converted to read the code.

Wednesday night, Donald Brennan of the Illinois Retail Clerks' Union said his organization is "100 per cent behind the system" but feels strongly that price stamps also should be on grocery items. Brennan said the system was installed on the East Coast and consumers were assured prices would be marked on the items. He said in several instances stores gradually phased out price markings and only the computer system remained.

Brennan said the city should go ahead on an ordinance now because Jewel Tea Co. is "ready to go with the system."

Brennan said the drawbacks of the system are that consumers cannot compare prices easily, they don't know the cost of the item once it is off the shelf and items are often marked incorrectly. He said one national study showed that 20 per cent of the shelf items were marked incorrectly, 1 to 2 cents higher than they should have been.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

- Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

- Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

- Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

- Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but 66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

- John Tatroles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatroles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatroles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

- Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

- Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Skitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced, or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the state's attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said. "A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said. "It depends on what attorney you

City bus routes OKd; runs grow

by DOROTHY OLIVER

The Des Plaines City Council has approved local bus routes that will bring public transportation to within six blocks of nearly every home in the city.

City officials will present the routes to the North Suburban Mass Transit District and the Regional Transportation Authority today for final approval.

The routes were originally proposed by NORTAN, which operates the bus line. Recommendations for changes in the routes were made by the Des Plaines League of Women Voters, the Chicago Transit Authority, the RTA and the Des Plaines Mass Transit Authority.

DURING A SPECIAL meeting of the council Monday, aldermen approved four local routes that will connect with mass transportation provided by the RTA.

The local bus routes are looped around the city and are similar to Coach in the 1960s.

All routes originate and return to the bus depot at the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in downtown Des Plaines.

The South loop connects with the RTA route that runs from Jefferson Station to O'Hare Airport. Aldermen Monday proposed that the South loop be extended from its present south border at Touhy Avenue to Pratt Avenue. Ald. Robert Kraves said people on the far south side would be better served if the loop came south on Maple Street to Pratt Avenue, east on Pratt to Scott Street and north on Scott, across Touhy to Cedar Street.

THE SOUTHWEST loop will connect with the Jefferson Station-O'Hare run as well as an RTA route from O'Hare Airport to the Old Orchard Shopping Center in Skokie.

Aldermen also suggested a revision to the Southwest loop that would have it traveling from Algonquin Road west to Wolf Road, west on Oakton Street, south on Mount Prospect Road, east on Touhy Avenue, north on Lee Street, west on Howard, north on Wolf to Oakton, then east on Oakton to Lee when it returns to the downtown station.

The change was proposed to accommodate persons who want to go to the new post office building under construction near Oakton and Lee streets and Oakton street shopping centers east of Wolf Road.

The West loop will connect with the O'Hare-Old Orchard bus and will come within three blocks of the RTA route which runs from Mount Prospect to Hinsdale down Ill. Rte. 83.

THE NORTH loop will connect with an RTA route which runs from Old Orchard to Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg. Minor revisions have been suggested by aldermen for the North loop that would bring the route further south, making it more accessible to residents living near Wolf Road and Prairie Street.

City officials have not been told how often buses would run, when routes will begin or how much bus fare will be.

The RTA is expected to approve the routes at today's special meeting with city officials. City officials last week learned that the RTA will provide 100 per cent funding for the system and the city will not have to subsidize the line.

Schools may monitor energy with computer

High School Dist. 214 officials are investigating the possible installation of a district-wide energy monitoring system that may save the district up to $100,000 per year or 10 per cent in energy costs.

The board of education has given officials approval to seek bids for such a system, which uses a computer to monitor gas, oil and electrical using systems. Cost for such a system is estimated at $100,000, said Thomas Cosgrove, director of physical plants for the district.

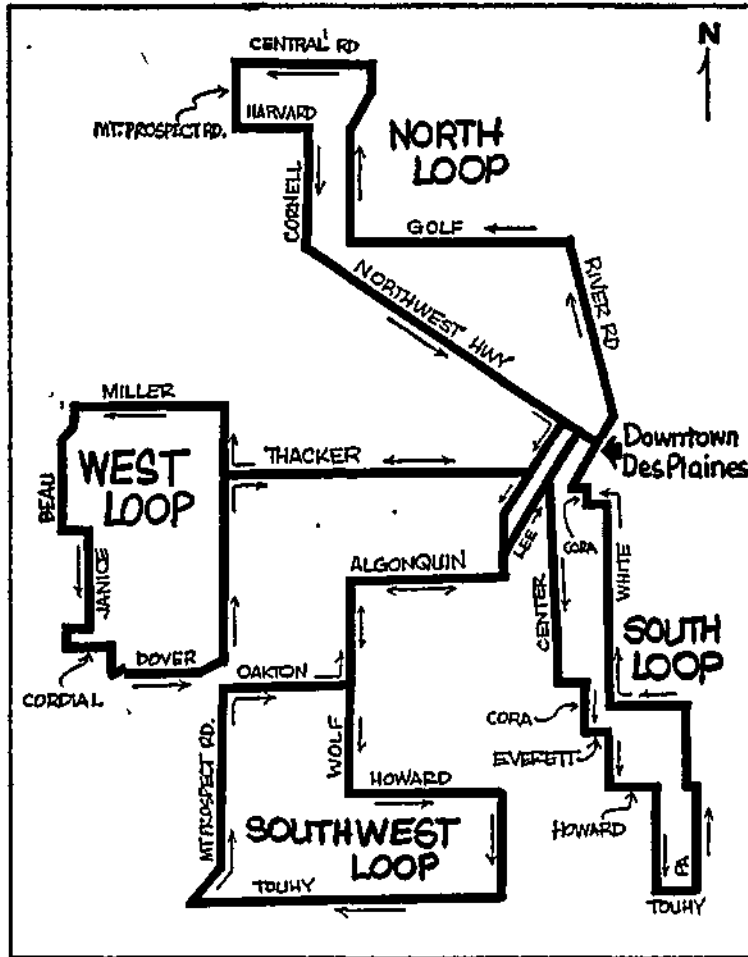

The system, at first, will control and monitor heat and electrical system usage at Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Rolling Meadows high schools, Cosgrove said. Other district schools, Arlington, Forest View, Elk Grove, Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Cosgrove said the three schools were singled out for both monitoring and control because of their high electrical use. All three use more energy because they are air-conditioned.

The system would be similar to one already in operation at several High School Dist. 211 schools in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg.

The system in its first year of operation at Schaumburg High School cut gas usage 65 per cent while electricity usage went down 8 per cent.

The system would differ from that of Dist. 211 in that Dist. 214 will own its own control computer. Dist. 211 is tied by telephone line to a control computer in Lincolnwood.

FOUR LOCAL bus routes have been proposed for Des Plaines and are expected to be approved today by the Regional Transportation Authority. Minor revisions have been proposed including extending the south loop to Pratt Avenue, reversing the direction of the southwest loop and routing the north loop further south.

School seat deadline set

River Trails Dist. 26 board members have set Monday as the deadline for applications to fill the board seat held by Michael Sheyker, who will resign Aug. 15.

"It's been at least two weeks since Mr. Sheyker's resignation was announced, and it's the feeling of the majority of the board that those really interested in the vacancy would come forward quickly," said Leora Rosen, board secretary. "We'd like to fill the vacancy as soon as possible."

Thus far, Peggy Golden and Richard Foster have applied and been interviewed for the board seat. Both were defeated in their bids for the board in April, Mrs. Golden losing by only two votes to Edward Pugliese.

Persons interested in applying for the board seat must be 21 years old, a resident of the district for a year, and not a school trustee or treasurer.

Anyone interested and fitting the qualifications may call Supt. John Fridlund at the district's central offices for an interview with the board.

Thanks to residents she has a 'place to call home'

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Unemployment and recession may be hitting pocketbooks, but the economic crunch hasn't hit the hearts of more than 100 Des Plaines residents.

Community response has been "completely overwhelming" to the plight of a 77-year-old resident who needed an apartment-full of furnishings before she could move into the city's new senior citizens' apartment building, City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach said.

"It's unbelievably gratifying to have the heart of the community respond like this — it's just tremendous," Mrs. Rohrbach, coordinator of the effort, said.

The woman, a 25-year resident of Des Plaines, was living in a motel for more than a year before her Wednesday move to Henrich House, Lee and Ashland streets. She had nothing but clothing a week ago, but as the result of community donations she now has "a place she can really call home," Mrs. Rohrbach said.

"WE'VE HAD CALLS from women who would like to become friends with her, offers to move the furniture in free of charge, and donations of many lovely things for her apartment," said Mrs. Rohrbach. "And the donations aren't discarded — many of the items have never even been used before."

One family donated an entire bedroom set that had never been used; a man stocked the cupboards with groceries; and a woman delivered a laundry basket full of washing products.

"The only thing we still need is some type of rug or carpeting," Mrs. Rohrbach said. "We have had several offers of money, but we've used it to buy household items."

"The lady wants to stay anonymous because she has such real pride — she's had a very tough life," she added. "But she's really overwhelmed by it all. It's a nice thing for the community to do."

Fracas results in battery charge

Des Plaines police charged a Mount Prospect man with battery Wednesday following a fracas in a city tavern apparently related to the current Central Telephone Co. strike.

Arrested was Robert J. Smey, 34, of 752 Dempster St. Police said he and another man pushed John Knowles, 21, of Des Plaines, through a door of the Beacon Tap, 1374 Lee St. Knowles was taken to Holy Family Hospital but was released after treatment.

Police said Knowles and two companions, all working Central Telephone employees, entered the tavern shortly before 10 p.m. and were confronted by a group of striking workers. Knowles told police he was pushed through the door when he attempted to leave and notify police.

Smey, who police said is a union steward for the striking workers, was released on $1,000 bond pending an Aug. 21 appearance in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

$25 million expansion at hospital

The third phase of the expansion calls for remodeling of outpatient clinics, examination rooms, and offices; expansion of the radiology department; blood bank and rehabilitation unit; and modernization of hospital laboratories.

The radiology department will be expanded to hold new equipment, including a computerized device that can reveal tiny brain lesions. Jacobsen said the hospital will be one of the few in the Chicago area to have this equipment.

Plans also call for building a special treatment unit for stomach and intestinal disorders.

EIGHT SURGICAL rooms, of which two will be especially designed for open heart and orthopedic surgery, will be built in the last phase of the project.

The hospital decided to build new surgical rooms, instead of remodeling existing quarters, because the cost would be the same, Jacobsen said. As a result, the hospital's hyperbaric oxygen chamber, which can save the lives of smoke-inhalation and drowning victims, will remain.

Firemen throughout the Northwest suburbs had protested the possible removal of the equipment which they considered vital for themselves and fire and smoke victims. The chamber, resembling a boiler, forces oxygen into a patient's bloodstream faster than an oxygen mask or tent. It is also used to treat patients who have inhaled noxious gases.

15 in library show

Members of the Des Plaines Public Library's summer reading club presented a talent show recently. Fifteen youngsters performed for an audience of about 100 friends.

Jennifer Adams, Ted MacLean and Shahid Hameed played the viola, Kristi Swier and Betty Galamas, performed baton twirling routines; David Roberts and Bryan Rolapase performed magic acts; Peter Galamas, singer; Kathleen McAlvey performed acrobats; Malha Hannaks played the flute; Calla Ramenylk, fencer; and a barbershop quartet performance by John and Jeff Katzbeck and Gregg and Todd Stahl.

Gemini students combine cartoons, science for films

by JUDY JOBBITT

Walt Disney of the future are taking shape this summer at Gemini Junior High School in East Maine Dist. 63.

Students are learning the tricks of the cartooning trade while producing science films for the school.

The course combines two interests of the instructor, Lauretta Sohn. The originally studied to be an art teacher but in mid-stream she switched to science which she teaches in the district. Her interest in art brought about the course where science and art are joined together.

THE CLASS learned how to put together a story board which details the story and main scenes for the film. After completing the story board, the students started drawing the individual frames.

Some of the cartoons require more than 200 frames which must be drawn individually. Because of the number of frames, several students are working on each of the nine films in progress.

Science fiction films are the most popular type with "The Radioactive Thing," "The Case of Germitious" and "KJT Space Productions" showing the vivid imaginations of the youngsters. Others chose documentary topics explaining mammals, plants, bees and the weather.

One group decided the number of drawings needed to explain a volcano would never get done so they built a volcano out of cement at home and rigged it to produce lava, smoke and earth tremors. The volcano movie is an outgrowth of the weather film which details a weather report with special emphasis on how the weather changes.

"KJT Space Productions" is the joint effort of Keith More, Joel Grauer, and Todd Singer. The plot centers around astronauts combatting a monster on another planet.

"WE WANTED to do this because we thought it'd be fun. It's hard to draw all these pictures though," said Joel as he started frame 88.

Todd said he is always drawing and might be a cartoonist someday.

Another group of girls producing a film on mammals decided to use cutouts to give a three dimensional effect to the film and to keep figures uniform throughout the film. They also had to research each animal used in the film and will be writing a dialog to be read with the film.

Valerie Chase is working alone on her film that shows the growth of a plant. She had to work backwards from the end of the film where the plant is grown to the beginning when it is a seed to keep the plant's size accurate.

Many of the youngsters said they used to get in trouble for "doodling" in class. Now their sketches are becoming an asset to the school and will be viewed by many students in future science classes.

THE ANATOMY OF Super Spider is identified as students at Gemini Junior High School in East part of the film "The adventures of Super Spider" Maine Dist. 63. one of nine science cartoons being produced by SUPER SPIDER isn't just any old bug. He comes to save the day for harmless bugs in danger like the one in the spider's web about to be eaten. Super Spider is the hero in Jeff Bratek's science fiction film.

Land owners query town center plans

Property owners of an 80-acre site in Buffalo Grove Wednesday night voiced two major concerns on the proposed town center:

- When will the area be developed?
- How profitable will it be?

About half of the property owners of the site appeared at the workshop session hosted by the village plan commission and board of trustees.

Property owners said they were in "limbo" because they were forced to wait on developing their parcels because of the town center. The site is north of Lake-Cook Road between Ill. Rte. 83 and Buffalo Grove Road.

One property owner, Al Knuth, who owns 7.5 acres, said he was asked by the village to wait more than 2 years to develop his property. He suggested that individual property owners be allowed to proceed with their plans if they are compatible with the town center.

About 10 property owners and village officials attended the meeting.

THE PLANNED Lake-Cook Road improvement project has also prevented development, said Sal Santoro. He added that he was willing to cooperate with neighboring property owners, but not with a developer.

Santoro also said that some parcels are more valuable than others.

The area has been described by economic analysts and village officials as unique because of a potential market brought by three major roadways—Ill. Rte. 83, Buffalo Grove and Lake-Cook roads.

Most property owners said they like the planning of the area by Economics Research Associates, the firm hired by the village to conduct feasibility studies of the town center project.

Property owners, however, objected to waiting for approval to develop their land and said they were concerned about what land use will be allowed in the area.

"Property owners would like the freedom to have what they would like on their property," Edward Gerschevsky said.

ECONOMICS RESEARCH Associates earlier presented three plans for development of the 80-acre site. Each plan includes a mix of retail, office, public housing, recreation and open space uses.

The study will cost about $24,000 but village officials have not determined if the village or the property owners will pay the bill.

Knuth said that because the town center would be beneficial to the entire community, funds should be from the village and not the property owners.

If the property owners are to pay for the study, the rate of $250 per acre has been determined.

Village orders fences down; cite bike safety

Buffalo Grove officials have asked three property owners to remove illegally installed fences which have imposed safety hazards for bike riders who use an adjacent pathway.

William A. Dettmer, chief building inspector, said certified letters were sent Tuesday to property owners who have put up fences backing Arlington Heights Road, immediately south of Beechwood Road.

Property owners were asked to move their fences from public property to their property lines, Dettmer said.

THIS IS THE third attempt to get the property owners to move their fences, he said. The first was in 1973, but village officials at that time declined the fences could stand until a construction project to widen Arlington Heights Road is started.

The Environmental Control Commission, however, asked the board in early July to examine the sidewalk and fence situation near Buffalo Grove High School because of numerous accident reports.

Dettmer said the village received complaints that children riding on bicycles got their handlebars caught on the fences. The environmental control commission also said the sidewalks were too narrow for safe passage.

The village July 9 asked the residents to move their fences back to their property line and away from the pathway, Dettmer said, but the village did not receive replies.

THE LATEST letter asked residents to call the village by Aug. 4 if they intend to remove the fences. The letter also states that if the village does not hear from the residents, a public works crew will remove the fences on Aug. 11, Dettmer said, adding that the village will not assume damages to fences or property.

"We want them removed because of the hazards for the kids," he said. "By September it will be a heavy time with kids going back to school."

Both the village and residents were aware of the violations, but village officials decided to enforce the fencing ordinance when reconstruction of Arlington Heights Road begins. Village officials also decided not to renovate the sidewalks because they eventually would have been torn up in a road project.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI—one in four—during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers—who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation—attorneys' fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knecht of Arlington Heights. Knecht, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knecht were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Buffalo Grove. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatroles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatroles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatroles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfeind, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Slitt, Moore,

Estates and Schaumburg.

The system in its first year of operation at Schaumburg High School cut gas usage 6.5 per cent while electricity usage went down 8 per cent.

The system would differ from that of Dist. 211 in that Dist. 214 will own its own control computer. Dist. 211 is tied by telephone line to a control computer in Lincolnwood.

"The system would be similar to one already in operation at several High School Dist. 211 schools in Hoffman

Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Cosgrove said the three schools were singled out for both monitoring and control because of their high electrical use. All three use more energy because they are air-conditioned.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Propose energy monitoring system

High School Dist. 214 officials are investigating the possible installation of a district-wide energy monitoring system that may save the district up to $100,000 per year or 10 per cent in energy costs.

The board of education has given officials approval to seek bids for such a system, which uses a computer to monitor gas, oil and electrical using systems. Cost for such a system is estimated at $100,000, said Thomas Cosgrove, director of physical plants for the district.

The system, at first, will control and monitor heat and electrical system usage at Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Rolling Meadows high schools, Cosgrove said. Other district schools, Arlington, Forest View, Elk Grove, Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Cosgrove said the three schools were singled out for both monitoring and control because of their high electrical use. All three use more energy because they are air-conditioned.

"The system would be similar to one already in operation at several High School Dist. 211 schools in Hoffman

Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Palwaukee Airport hit for poor security system

by TOM VON MALDER

A national aviation safety group has criticized security measures at Palwaukee Airport for allowing potentially dangerous intrusions by unauthorized personnel onto aircraft movement areas.

The Aviation Safety Institute (ASI), of Worthington, Ohio, said it has more than 50 documented cases of unauthorized persons and vehicles on the airport's runways, taxiways and ramps. Many of the incidents at the airport, which is south of Wheeling, could have led to a serious accident, the ASI said.

"Palwaukee has very poor airport security procedures," the ASI said in its Monitor publication for pilots. "Aircraft have had close calls on numerous occasions."

The institute, an independent safety research organization, cited examples of trucks, motorcycles, cars and small children crossing the airplane movement areas at Palwaukee. One example cited a small girl caught walking across an active runway with a bicycle which had a flat tire, because "it was the shortest way home."

CHARLES PRIESTER, airport manager agreed the intrusions are a problem, but said the institute gave a distorted picture. "The safety institute is not aware of Palwaukee and the problems here," he said, referring to the institute's Ohio location. "They make it appear like nothing is being done."

Priester said the airport has put in guard fence, which keep out vehicles but not pedestrians, at the northwest corner of the airport and along the west side. More of the guard fences are planned for the east side next month.

As for keeping all unauthorized persons off the airport grounds, Priester said, "There's nothing you can do. That's the problem." He said it was "ridiculous" to try to patrol 300 acres and he said regular fencing around the airport had a "prohibitive" cost of about $115,000 to $120,000.

The airport cannot obtain federal funds for fencing or security because it is privately owned, although used by the public, and Priester said the airport itself cannot afford such improvements. He added that attempts have been made to have the U.S. Congress change the eligibility situation for federal funds, but none have been successful yet.

"We're doing the best we can," he said. In addition to the guard fences, any unauthorized person found walking where airplanes move are arrested for trespassing, if they have no right being at the airport, or first warned and then told to keep their airplane somewhere else, if they use the airport, he said.

PRIESTER SAID there have been cases of motorcycles and cars being driven down runways at night and even a snowmobile being used on the runways last winter.

Education vets try new career...an old dream!

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Gerald and Kathryn McElroy have left their separate duties as area school administrators to do what seems natural for two veteran teachers — open a bookstore.

The small, colonial-style shop called "The Quail's Tale" is in keeping with the quaint, old-fashioned character of the Long Grove community where it is located.

The McElroys view their new venture in two ways: it's a long-time dream coming true but a business enterprise that has to be profitable.

"WE HAVE often talked about opening this kind of a business. It seems like a natural thing for us to be doing with the backgrounds we have," said McElroy who resigned five years ago as superintendent of Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15.

He helped establish many school district libraries and has worked during the past three years on the construction of a new public library in Palatine. He is president of the Palatine Library Board.

"Our whole lives have been about working with children and people in education. We feel we can bring all of our experiences to a shop like this to help the public enjoy books and what they have to offer," Mrs. McElroy said.

Mrs. McElroy recently resigned as principal after 14 years at Kensington Elementary School, Arlington Heights. She started 20 years ago as a teacher of kindergarten and primary-aged children.

"THIS IS by no means what some would call a retirement. We have just decided to get into a different kind of business that revolves around all the things we have come to love and appreciate most," she said.

The book store, which will open this week, is furnished with tokens of Colonial American history and book collecting interests the Palatine couple has shared for the past 15 years.

An early American rocker rests by a sun-filled window; children have their corner where an antique school desk and miniature book shelves display colorful, cartoon-covered readers.

The flower studded curtains, and the casual arrangement of hardbound books on the shelves, create a homey atmosphere.

"IT'S AMAZING, the interest that has been growing in antique books and in all kinds of antiques. That's why we decided to open a store in Long Grove. This place has a special kind of appeal to it," Mrs. McElroy said.

The shop may eventually offer weaving and spinning demonstrations "to accent the Bicentennial celebration and our own focus on colonial history," she said.

"There was a reason for naming the shop as we have. We had a few names we were thinking about. But, the quail was once a common game bird here in the prairie states and is extinct now," McElroy said.

"The quail has a short, small tail and so, we thought because we have a small shop here, we'd name it after the bird," Mrs. McElroy added.

Tentative schools budget 13.7% more than 1975-76

A tentative $44-million 1975-76 budget, that calls for a 13.7 per cent increase in spending over last year has been approved by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Despite the increase in spending, the district tax rate is estimated to go down .15 cents per $100 assessed valuation from $2.45 to $2.30.

The district has been required to gradually decrease its local tax rate because of the state's three-year-old "resource equalizer" state school and formula. The formula requires districts with high property tax rates to lower those rates as they receive additional state money.

The budget includes increases for every district academic department to cover teacher pay increases. More than $1-million has been budgeted for athletics, 12.4 per cent or $55,000 more than last year.

SOME $187,000 has been allocated for deaf education, compared to $74,000 in 1974-75, while $570,000 has been budgeted for special education in the district for this year compared to $462,000 last year, a 23 per cent increase.

More than $1-million has been allocated for transportation costs, up $191,000 from 1974-75, a 23 per cent increase.

The budget presently calls for a surplus "contingency fund" of about $430,000.

The tentative budget is subject to further review and change before final passage, scheduled for Sept. 22. The budget will go on public display Aug. 18 at the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington, Mount Prospect.

A public hearing on the budget has been set for Sept. 8 at the district administration center.

74 pints given in first blood drive of year

Workers for the Buffalo Grove blood drive program collected 74 pints of blood in the first drive of the year Saturday at Buffalo Grove High School.

Sylvia Bogart, of the village blood drive commission, said the amount fell short of the 100-point goal, but added there will be three more blood drives to meet the 720-point goal for the year.

Drives will be conducted again in October, January and April.

Residents can donate blood any time at any area hospital or at the North Suburban Blood Center, 1500 Sherman Rd., Northbrook. Residents should designate their donation to the Village of Buffalo Grove.

If the village meets its annual goal, all residents and their families, including children and grandparents, will be covered in a blood emergency.

If the village does not meet the goal, only families who have donated will be covered.

For more information, call members of the commission: Sylvia Bogart at 541-1820; Carol Lauter at 541-4640; Phyllis Wolter at 537-2758; George or Louise Milley at 541-1128 and Barbara Urban at 537-8308.

Horcher swiftly moves in as chief

by LUISA GINETTI

The changes came swiftly Wednesday in the Wheeling Police Dept. as the switch in command from Peter Guttilla to M. O. Horcher began.

Guttilla's nameplate on the police chief's office door was gone and the chief's secretary was answering the telephone with the response "Chief Horcher's office."

Inside the office the man who was named Tuesday night to head the department began taking up where he had left off three years ago when a stroke forced him out of his job and onto the disability rolls.

"To say this has been a busy day would be an understatement," Horcher said. "People have been fantastic and if I can live up to 80 per cent of their expectations I'll be happy."

Horcher said he did not call a staff meeting Wednesday but he did take a tour of the department and made sure each patrolman and officer had a copy of the uniform law enforcement code of ethics, which Horcher said will be the standards for the department.

THE CHIEF, WHO was reinstated to his post by the police and fire commission after a doctor certified him fit to resume his normal duties, said he is satisfied that the department can be a top-notch agency with current personnel.

"If there are problems within the department they will be coped with, but we want to get things back to a setup where the public concern and interest becomes our top priority," Horcher said.

He said if a change in the command lineup is needed to rectify departmental problems, it will be done. Horcher said he also will reconsider recent appointments to the detective division

Command shift boosts morale

by DAVE GALANTI

The reinstatement of M. O. Horcher as Wheeling police chief has increased department morale, according to several department employees.

"Already I can perceive a definite change in attitude to one of optimism," said Patrolman Bill Sharpe. "Morale seems to be up already."

Sharpe, president of the local chapter of the Combined Counties Police Assn., said department employees he talked to welcomed the return of Horcher, who applied for his former position last week after the police pension board removed him from the disability list. Horcher resumed his position Wednesday.

PATROLMAN Burt Kaminsky also which have been criticized by patrolmen.

Nineteen patrolmen, including several who applied for the two openings in the detective branch, have filed a grievance challenging the selection process.

HORCHER SAID HE has not seen the grievance petition but he plans to review the detective appointments whether or not the grievance comes to him.

The chief said he spoke Wednesday to former chief Guttilla, who was on vacation when the command change-over was ordered. Guttilla told Horcher he planned to come to the village said he noted a change in atmosphere Wednesday. Kaminsky added he was glad the change had taken place.

"At this point in time Horcher is the only man to try to bring the police department back to an even keel," he said. "He can be strict but he is fair."

Kaminsky said he hoped favoritism and cliques within the department would be eliminated under the new leadership. He said police officers should expect "reasonable backing" in doing their job if they did it correctly and well.

Patrolman Lawrence Parks said Horcher had "the respect of most of the men on the department" and of "everyone who has worked under (Continued on Page 5)

Wednesday to turn over the chief's official car to Horcher and to clear out his desk.

Guttilla's status has not been officially determined since the commission did not deal with the issue. Guttilla was not appointed by the commission.

Village Mgr. George Passolt, who appointed Guttilla a captain in the department in 1972, said he would meet with Guttilla before making a decision on his status.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

Dist. 23 pact talks at impasse

by MARILYN McDONALD

Teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 may not have a satisfactory contract when they return to school next month, now that contract talks with board members are at a standstill.

Board negotiators declared an impasse after the third round of contract talks July 17. At that meeting board members increased offers on extra duty pay, summer school pay and merit pay, but teachers made no concessions in return.

"My interpretation of negotiation is give and take. Both have to give a little and get a little. We received basically nothing," said Alan Krinsky, board member and chairman of the board negotiating team.

KENNETH BATES, spokesman for the teachers' union negotiating team, said he was "surprised" by the declaration of impasse.

"Indications seem to be that we'll go into school this year without a contract," he said.

The teachers technically will have a contract in August because they signed a two-year document last year with the provision that salary items could be reopened this year. Bates said he thought the number of salary demands made by teachers this year angered the board.

"Coupled with Gov. (Daniel) Walker (his 4.9 per cent state education budget cut) and tight times, they seemed really angry at our having 27 items," Bates said.

But Bates defended the teachers' requests. "Last year, they offered us $45,000 (for merit increases) as a starting package. They tell us that their operating expenses are higher. Their bills are larger than mine, but mine have gone up too," he said.

AMONG THEIR salary requests teachers have asked for $60,000 for merit and across-the-board raises. In its latest proposal, board members offered $40,000 for merit and across-the-board raises. Teachers wanted a 15 per cent increase in extra duty pay, and the board last offered a 10 per cent increase. Teachers also asked for a 15 per cent hike in summer school pay, but board members last offered a 10 per cent hike.

Negotiations in the district have been rocky before. Impasses have been declared at some point in the last three contract negotiations. In 1972, the contract was settled with mediation. In 1973, the two sides settled in the last meeting they were to hold before a mediator was brought in. Last year, a mediator settled the final contract.

According to impasse procedure in the teacher contract, teacher negotiators will meet with the entire Dist. 23 board Aug. 13. Board negotiators will meet with the full teaching staff Aug. 14. Then both negotiating teams will meet again Aug. 21. Should this meeting fail to clear the impasse, a professional mediator will be brought in.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals. The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury, drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights, Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blaso, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatroles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatroles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatroles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests. "I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the states attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said. "A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said. "It depends on what attorney you (Continued on Page 10) former chief will not be given a job in the police department and that his ties with the village will be severed. Sources also say charges being prepared against Gutilla for alleged incidents of official misconduct will not be dropped. Horcher's salary as police chief must be determined after consultation with the village board, Passolt said. The police chief's current salary is $23,000.

Passolt said Horcher's former post of administrative assistant to the village manager will be filled. Horcher's duties as administrative assistant included handling personnel matters, the village bus program and serving as purchasing agent. Horcher's salary as administrative assistant was $10,700.

PASSOLT SAID he has the authority to appoint a replacement for Horcher and he expects to do so soon.

He said he was surprised at the commission's swift action in reinstating Horcher as chief. "I'm looking forward to a good working relationship with the new chief," Passolt said.

Command shift boosts morale him." He said members of the midnight shift remained at the station to welcome Horcher when he arrived for work Wednesday morning. "He's a stickler on everybody because he is looking for perfection," Parks said. "He's concerned about his village." RECORDS CLERK Marguerite Allison said although she "felt very badly" that former chief Peter Gutilla was leaving the position she had "great admiration" for Horcher. "He was the police department for many years," she said. "I have great respect for him." One department member, who did not wish to be identified, said he foresaw an "immediate change" in the morale of the patrolmen.

"The change can be beneficial because the men are going to look up to this man more and have more trust in him. It's to the benefit of the police department," he said.

Lt. Thomas Conte said the leadership switch probably would not bring major changes in the near future in most areas of the department.

"Although I anticipate some changes in policy, I don't think they are going to be radical," he said. "He (Horcher) has to set the tempo, but once he sees some of the things we have been doing I don't think he is going to knock them out."

CONTE ADDED he "could work with anybody" and said he did not see any difficulties in adapting to the new leadership.

One department member, who also did not wish to be named, said he did not notice a change in morale when he arrived for work Wednesday. He said as far as he was concerned there was little difference in the station atmosphere from the day before.

Many of the department employees said they were surprised the decision to reinstate Horcher was made so quickly.

Patrolman Sharpe said he was "taken aback quite a bit" by the speed of the decision. He said he expected the police and fire commission to take the full two month limit to decide the issue.

Clothing worth $77 stolen from home

Burglars broke into the home of Donald Zack, 675 Hickory Dr., and stole some $77 worth of clothing, said Buffalo Grove Police Wednesday.

Mrs. Donald Zack told police numerous articles of clothing were stolen, mostly dresses and skirts. Also about $100 damage to window moldings where the burglars broke into the house. Police said the burglary probably occurred over the weekend while the Zacks were out of town.

Unauthorized intrusions

by TOM VON MALDER.
A national aviation safety group has criticized security measures at Palwaukee Airport for allowing potentially dangerous intrusions by unauthorized personnel onto aircraft movement areas.

The Aviation Safety Institute (ASI), of Worthington, Ohio, said it has more than 50 documented cases of unauthorized persons and vehicles on the airport's runways, taxiways and ramps. Many of the incidents at the airport, which is south of Wheeling, could have led to a serious accident, the ASI said.

"Palwaukee has very poor airport security procedures," the ASI said in its Monitor publication for pilots. "Aircraft have had close calls on numerous occasions."

The institute, an independent safety research organization, cited examples of trucks, motorcycles, cars and small children crossing the airplane movement areas at Palwaukee. One example cited a small girl caught walking across an active runway with a bicycle which had a flat tire, because "It was the shortest way home."

CHARLES PRIESTER, airport manager agreed the intrusions are a problem, but said the institute gave a distorted picture. "The safety institute is not aware of Palwaukee and the problems here," he said, referring to the institute's Ohio location. "They make it appear like nothing is being done."

Priester said the airport has put in guard fence, which keep out vehicles but not pedestrians, at the northwest corner of the airport and along the west side. More of the guard fences are planned for the east side next month.

As for keeping all unauthorized persons off the airport grounds, Priester said, "There's nothing you can do. That's the problem." He said it was "ridiculous" to try to patrol 300 acres and he said regular fencing around the airport had a "prohibitive" cost of about $115,000 to $120,000.

The airport cannot obtain federal funds for fencing or security because it is privately owned, although used by the public, and Priester said the airport itself cannot afford such improvements. He added that attempts have been made to have the U.S. Congress change the eligibility situation for federal funds, but none have been successful yet.

"We're doing the best we can," he said. In addition to the guard fences, any unauthorized person found walking where airplanes move are arrested for trespassing, if they have no right being at the airport, or first warned and then told to keep their airplane somewhere else, if they use the airport, he said.

PRIESTER SAID there have been cases of motorcycles and cars being driven down runways at night and even a snowmobile being used on the runways last winter.

"There have been no accidents caused by this problem," Priester stressed. His statement was supported by Leo Ullsperger, Federal Aviation Administration chief of air traffic control at Palwaukee. "We've had no accidents, near accidents or injuries because of it," Ullsperger said.

Both Priester and John B. Galipault, ASI president, agreed that public education of the potential dangers is needed. Galipault said, "The events represent a very serious threat to the lives of the transgressors and the people in business and pleasure aircraft."

The ASI is a registered non-profit institution which has started a nationwide safety data system on airports, worked on new safety standards and studied risk rating procedures for insurance companies.

Youth charged with having pot

A 17-year-old youth has been charged with possession of marijuana and having fraudulent identification following his arrest early Wednesday by Wheeling police.

The youth, John Smith, previously of 1425 Kostner Ave., Chicago, was arrested in the parking lot of Denny's restaurant, 733 Dundee Rd., about 2 a.m.

Police said they were suspicious of the youth as a curfew violator and when questioned said Smith produced false identification. An undetermined quantity of marijuana was found on Smith during a search, said police.

He was released on $1,000 bond pending a court hearing.

MUTUAL TRUST is the biggest part of the relationship between a blind person and his guide dog, says Susan Rothweiler. Mrs. Rothweiler has been blind since birth, but she put off getting a guide dog until three months ago because "I thought it was a big sign of dependency." Now, however, she says she has more freedom of movement than she ever thought possible.

Blind woman and her dog challenge life—and win

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Susan Rothweiler knows all about tin cups, sunglasses and faithful German shepherds.

She's been blind since birth, and she's well aware of the "blind man" stereotypes. But Mrs. Rothweiler only fits the third category — and her guide dog, Dyke, is a golden retriever, rather than a shepherd, because, "They're just as smart but a lot more easy going."

Mrs. Rothweiler, 23, put off getting a guide dog until three months ago because "I wanted to hide the fact that I was blind. I thought a guide dog was a sure sign of 'I can't make it alone,' and I didn't want any sympathy."

"I'm sorry I waited until now," she adds with a smile. "Guide dogs are much faster and more efficient than canes — you're not always bumping into someone's ankles. But the speed is the best part. You can really fly."

ONCE SHE GOT over her misgivings about depending on an animal for sight, Mrs. Rothweiler attended a three-week training session at the Guiding Eyes for the Blind school in Yorktown Heights, N.Y. She described her experience as being "almost unbelievably hard," but added, "It had to be that way or we'd fall apart when we got into the real world."

"They really expose you to every type of situation," she recalled. "Sloping sidewalks, parking lots, busy streets — you name it. And I'd never even had a dog before, so I didn't know how they'd react."

While the students come into the sessions cold, the dogs have been through 12 weeks of rigorous training Mrs. Rothweiler said. They are already familiar with avoiding obstacles, obeying directions and "learning how to park."

"Establishing specific times to go to the bathroom is one of the first things they're taught. That makes it nice for us!" she laughed.

INTENSIVE training with one instructor often makes it difficult for the dogs to make the transfer to their new masters, Mrs. Rothweiler said. As a result, the first day of classes is spent working with the students to determine which dog suits them best.

The selection process is "a big mystery to me," Mrs. Rothweiler said, "We spend a few ridiculous hours having our instructors lead us around while we bark orders at them, and they decide on that basis," she said.

The first meeting between the dogs and their masters is anticlimactic. "Dyke didn't even want to come near me at first," she recalled. "But the first thing we do is feed them. That's the fastest way to anyone's heart and pretty soon they're accustomed to us. From then on it's great."

Training with the dogs covers "every hazard you can imagine," Mrs. Rothweiler said hanging branches are the worst, but busy streets are a close second.

BUSY STREETS are bad enough in a quiet town, but navigating in New York City is a different ballgame, Mrs. Rothweiler said. The day the class spent in Fun City was "one big nightmare. The subway doors are only open for seven seconds — you have to get in there fast before you get crushed. The whole day I was sure I was going to knock over every old lady in the city."

"Many blind people are lonely, and they find it easier to avoid people through their dogs," Mrs. Rothweiler explained. "It's very easy to let the dog run your life because he serves such a vital function. But you just have to look at him as a useful aide."

"Believe it or not, there are still a lot of people who stand on the corner with their shepherd and tin cup," she added. "Schools like the one I went to try to get rid of this image, but it's still around."

Now that she's gotten used to the "millions of parking lots" in the Northwest suburbs, Mrs. Rothweiler and her husband are moving soon to Hyde Park in Chicago. She's more than a little apprehensive about the prospect, but she's never been more confident of herself or her abilities.

"Dyke and I are a perfect team," she said with a smile. "I make the major decisions and he makes the minor ones. I can't expect him to read street signs! It's me and him against the world — and we can handle it!"

$3.2 million

State to award creek contract

by JERRY THOMAS

The Division of Waterways of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation is expected to award a $3.2 million contract next week for the final phase of construction in the Upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

Bongl Carriage, Chicago, is expected to receive the contract.

The improvements project includes damming of Salt Creek below the junction of the north and west branches to build a 470-acre lake in Busso Woods.

Bernard Behrends, project engineer, said Bongl, now completing the second phase of the three-phase project, was low bidder for this portion of the site work, undercutting state estimates.

"I expect it's because they have their equipment on site now and can just flow into the final dirt work without interruption," he said. "Since their bid is so much lower than our estimates and two other bids we received they are sure to get the contract."

The Salt Creek Watershed project is estimated to take at least two more years and will cost $33 million.

Behrends said it will alleviate flooding and will benefit 20,000 landowners plagued by flooding.

FOR SOME 750 residents who live in a mobile home park on Higgins Road surrounded by Busso Woods in Elk Grove Township, the project means problems.

The Forest Preserve District has been trying since April to purchase the park, 941 Higgins Rd., for inclusion in the reservoir. They have filed a condemnation suit on Circuit Court to obtain the land.

State officials from the Division of Waterways have the responsibility of relocating the mobile park tenants when the land is purchased.

State officials notified the tenants of the park they are eligible for personal assistance and financial benefits to aid them in finding, financing and moving into a replacement home.

The state is conducting inspections in the park to determine what benefits its residents are eligible to obtain.

THE STATE EXPECTS the relocation to be completed in a year. Behrends said the Busso Woods main dam should be completed in September 1976.

State officials say they are attempting to complete interviews and relocations as quickly as possible. They also are attempting to meet a September 1976 completion date for the channel improvements north of Golf Road and the dam construction.

TOM JONES, played by Sam Goldsmith, and his love Sophia, played by Laurie Gould, will share their escapades with the audience tonight and Friday at 8 p.m. The play will be performed by students in High School Dist. 211's drama workshop at Hoffman Estates High School, 1100 W. Higgins Rd. Tickets are $1 adults and 75 cents, students and may be purchased by calling the school, 882-8000.

Community plan to be developed

750 houses to get health survey

Elk Grove Village residents will be questioned about their health in an effort to determine the community's health needs.

The family survey conducted by the village health department will poll 750 households during August.

Nancy Yiannias, health coordinator, said the board of health worked with village officials to come up with a questionnaire that it feels will help establish a health plan for the community.

She is seeking adult volunteers willing to donate 10 hours to help with the survey.

Mrs. Yiannias said volunteers would receive a short training course in the municipal building and then be asked to spend about eight hours at home telephoning residents.

The survey will be done from the volunteers' homes and only local numbers will be called.

Anyone interested may contact Mrs. Yiannias at 439-3900.

There are three sections to the questionnaire:

• THE FIRST deals with how people go about finding a doctor or dentist or where they seek medical care. It also asks what makes people put off going to a doctor or where they would go to find out how to receive medical help if they had no money.

One question asks how often people see a doctor or dentist and if they have used hospital or emergency service and if they were satisfied with the service.

This portion of the survey also asks the age of family members, where they were born, occupation of working members, education level, total income of the family, how long the people have lived in Elk Grove Village and how long they plan to remain.

• THE SECOND section deals with the type of testing or screening programs residents would use for diseases like venereal disease, glaucoma, diabetes and others.

It also includes questions about noise and litter, whether the family has pets and if they have donated blood to the community blood replacement program.

• THE THIRD section deals mainly with environmental questions — what school health programs are available to families and if they use them.

Mrs. Yiannias said the survey is intended to bolster data from the comprehensive health survey completed in 1972.

She said the August survey will identify health problem areas which were not included in the initial survey. The personal survey also was recommended by the 1972 study group when it was compiling health service information.

Mrs. Yiannias said the department hopes to complete the survey in time to use the data to plan programs for 1976.

Lindhahl quits service board post

Robert G. Lindahl of Elk Grove Village has resigned as a member of the Community Service Board.

Lindhahl's resignation is effective immediately. He has served as a member of the board since July 1971 and was re-appointed last year to serve a term that would have expired in late 1977.

Lindhahl, in a resignation letter to Village Pres. Charles Zettek, said the demands of his job make it impossible for him to continue his board membership and service.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Schiller Park man sentenced to 14 days

A Schiller Park man has been ordered to spend 14 days in the county house of corrections for striking an Elk Grove Village policeman earlier this month.

Torry Ouland, 22, of 302 Ruby St., was sentenced last week in the Elk Grove Village branch of Circuit Court after pleading guilty to a reduced charge of battery.

He will appear in court again Aug. 13 however on charges of resisting arrest placed against him by Cook County Forest Rangers.

Ouland and a Gardner, Ill. man, Gregory Wasi, 21, were arrested earlier this month by rangers and Elk Grove police following a scuffle and a high speed chase near Busso Woods, Elk Grove Township.

Wasi faces traffic charges and also will appear in court Aug. 15.

GOP day set at Dominick's

The Elk Grove Republican Organization will have a benefit day, Wednesday, Aug. 6, at Dominick's Finer Food store, 767 Golf Rd., Des Plaines.

Friends of the organization who shop that day at any of Dominick's 59 stores should present their Dominick's benefit day identification slip to the cashier in order for the group to receive 5 per cent of their purchase.

The slips are available from the Elk Grove Republican Organization or can be obtained at the store the day of the benefit for shoppers who do not have the regular ID slips.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatooles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatooles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatooles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the state's attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said.

"A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said.

"It depends on what attorney you

Calendar of Bicentennial events goes to press Friday

The Elk Grove Village Horizons '76 coordinating committee goes to press Friday with a calendar for 1976 listing hundreds of activities and functions to commemorate the nation's Bicentennial and the village's 20th birthday.

Deadline for listing in the calendar is 5 p.m. Friday but the committee is urging groups and citizens who wish to schedule activities to continue applying for reservation dates.

The committee plans to issue quarterly reminders in addition to the calendar and establish a telephone answering service for residents who wish to check on what commemorative events and functions are taking place.

TRUSTEE Nanci Vanderweel, committee chairman, said the committee's function only is to coordinate the hundreds of events it expects will take place next year.

Members also have offered suggestions for sponsoring groups such as sailboat races, a magic show, auctions, a rodeo, puppet show, pie or watermelon eating contests and a county or state fair type display and judging of homemade wares.

The list of unusual and ordinary events, that range from a fashion show to a frog jumping contest continues to grow with scheduled activities. They include:

• A Williamsburg tree tagging day,

Dec. 9 will be sponsored by the library. Residents are invited to attach a decorated name tag to a designated tree following an old custom.

• A Washington sale in February; April vacation sweepstakes; old sidewalk days sale; back to school sale; and harvest festival days are planned by the Merchants Assn. of Elk Grove Village.

• The Freedom Shrine documents and a replica of the Liberty Bell will be displayed at the library. The sponsoring group is the Bank of Elk Grove Village.

• A Traveling Freedom Stand, a reaffirmation of the liberties of American people will be sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Lodge.

• May outdoor picnic and dedication of an outdoor learning center will be sponsored by the Rupley School PTO.

• An Old Country rummage fair in April will be sponsored by the Junior Women's Club.

• A period fashion show will be held in September by the Lions Ladies.

• A health fair will be sponsored by the Elk Grove Nurses Club in May and September.

• A Firemen's Ball is planned for October hosted by the Firemen's Assn.

• The Elk Grove Park District bike club will sponsor several events including a June 5 midnight ride of Paul Revere on bikes. Others include an April 25 ceremony opening bike paths, and a festival in celebration of the introduction of the bicycle to the United States.

• A Colonial art and craft fair, will be sponsored in October by the Senior Citizens Club.

• A dancing and square dance exhibition is planned for June by the Phantoms Square Dance Club.

• The Ridge Court Neighbors are planning a June block party.

• Di-Jula-Nilroi Camp Fire Girls, will conduct a freedom survey in May.

• The Little People Preschool will display students' work, depicting their views of the changes that have occurred in the past 200 years.

• Resident Fritz Frazier will host a flag raising ceremony on July 4 at his home.

Persons interested in reserving a date may call the village at 439-3900.

The committee also is accepting reservations for commemorative coins. The coins, from the Hamilton Mint, are 10-gauge antique bronze with hand-finished numbers.

Tentative schools budget 13.7% more than 1975-76

A tentative $44-million 1975-76 budget, that calls for a 13.7 per cent increase in spending over last year has been approved by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Despite the increase in spending, the district tax rate is estimated to go down 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation from $2.45 to $2.30.

The district has been required to gradually decrease its local tax rate because of the state's three-year-old "resource equalizer" state school aid formula. The formula requires districts with high property tax rates to lower those rates as they receive additional state money.

The budget includes increases for every district academic department to cover teacher pay increases. More than $1-million has been budgeted for athletics, 12.4 per cent or $55,000 more than last year.

SOME $187,000 has been allocated for deaf education, compared to $74,000 in 1974-75, while $570,000 has been budgeted for special education in the district for this year compared to $462,000 last year, a 23 per cent increase.

More than $1-million has been allocated for transportation costs, up $181,000 from 1974-75, a 23 per cent increase.

The budget presently calls for a surplus "contingency fund" of about $430,000.

The tentative budget is subject to further review and change before final passage, scheduled for Sept. 22. The budget will go on public display Aug. 18 at the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington, Mount Prospect.

A public hearing on the budget has been set for Sept. 8 at the district administration center.

Propose energy monitoring system

High School Dist. 214 officials are investigating the possible installation of a district-wide energy monitoring system that may save the district up to $100,000 per year or 10 per cent in energy costs.

The board of education has given officials approval to seek bids for such a system, which uses a computer to monitor gas, oil and electrical using systems. Cost for such a system is estimated at $100,000, said Thomas Cosgrove, director of physical plants for the district.

The system, at first, will control and monitor heat and electrical system usage at Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Rolling Meadows high schools, Cosgrove said. Other district schools, Arlington, Forest View, Elk Grove, Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Cosgrove said the three schools were singled out for both monitoring and control because of their high electrical use. All three use more energy because they are air-conditioned.

The system would be similar to one already in operation at several High School Dist. 211 schools in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg.

The system in its first year of operation at Schaumburg High School cut gas usage 6.5 per cent while electricity usage went down 6 per cent.

The system would differ from that of Dist. 211 in that Dist. 214 will own its own control computer. Dist. 211 is tied by telephone line to a control computer in Lincolnwood.

50 more blood donors needed

Elk Grove Village needs at least 50 more pledges from prospective blood donors to meet its 250-pint quota for the all-day blood drive Saturday.

Approximately 200 residents have signed up for the 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. community blood drive.

The village participates in a 4 per cent community blood replacement program through the North Suburban Blood Center. Under the plan, if 4 per cent of village residents donate blood, all village residents and their families are fully covered.

To meet its donor quota Elk Grove Village must recruit 1,000 donors during the year. The village conducts four village blood drives and donors also may make appointments at Alexian Brothers Medical Center throughout the year.

Prospective donors may call 439-3900, ext. 267 to make an appointment for the Saturday drive.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the blood drive, urged persons who have previously not been eligible to be donors, to contact the village for information.

"New donor qualifications recently established by the American Assn. of Blood Banks make hundreds of persons who previously were unable to donate blood, now eligible to donate," she said.

The Saturday drawing will be at the fire department building, Blesterfield Road and Wellington Avenue.

Parks job begins in September

Fun lover back to run rec program

by JILL BETTNER

Take heart Mom and Dad, not all kids grow up and move away from home. Kathy Franke (Elk Grove High School '71, Western Illinois University '75) is back in town working for the Elk Grove Park District and loving it. Ms. Franke, 945 Wilshire Ave., is planning activities and programs at park district fun centers where she played as a child.

A lot of young people, hunting for excitement, strike out for parts unknown to start their careers. But for Ms. Franke, 22, there's plenty of adventure in the new job she's taken right in her own backyard.

"I LIKE IT around here, I always have," she said. "It might have been different if I'd grown up in a small town and hadn't lived near a big city all my life, but when I heard about this job possibility, I was interested. I like the fast-moving pace here where people are anxious to try new things."

Almost as soon as she was too old to play games at fun centers, Ms. Franke began working at them during her summers off from school. She became a playground leader as a sophomore in high school, later a senior supervisor and for the past two summers, she has coordinated activities at all six fun centers.

Beginning in September, Ms. Franke will start her first full-time job with the park district, replacing Bill Hughes as a recreation program supervisor. Hughes is leaving to take a position in Phoenix, Ariz.

One of the activities Ms. Franke will be in charge of is the park district's Cedar House teen program, something she helped to organize in 1968 while she was in high school. She was part of a teen council that worked to raise funds to build Lions' Community Center where the teen program operates.

The community center also is a meeting place for the park district's senior citizens' club, a group Ms. Franke said she is particularly excited about working with. She also looks forward to supervising the mini-gym classes for preschoolers, another of the 13 programs she will direct.

EAGER TO BEGIN her new duties, Ms. Franke said she caught a lot of her enthusiasm for park district work from the staff.

"These people have taught me so much and always have been great about giving me any information I needed for classes at school," she said. "They were excited I was going through the 'rec' program and really helped keep me inspired."

Looking ahead, Ms. Franke said someday she would like to take advantage of her double major in park and recreation administration and public health to improve cooperation between agencies in both fields. She pointed out, for example, how park district and mental health centers could coordinate programs for patients with special needs.

"I guess you could say that's my long-term goal, but right now, I just want to do the best job I can here," she said. "It's a good place to work because people are open to new ideas. They're constantly evaluating and trying new things and that's what makes any job interesting — no matter where you are."

Students work—outside class

Nineteen students are attending Hoffman Estates High School this summer and are getting paid for it.

The students, part of a work-experience program in the school's special education department, attend class for one hour each day and work for three hours in jobs in the High School Dist. 211 community.

Goal of the program, which began at Hoffman Estates two years ago, is to provide students with "independent work experience" outside school, said coordinator Don Minor who teaches the students along with Mary Bayles and Linda Oldberg.

During the class sessions students learn job skills such as basic math, budgeting, consumer education, and how to apply and interview for a job. One student is an assembler, another works in store security, and another is a teacher's aide in a preschool program. The students are accepted by the community and their employers, said Minor.

THE SUMMER program is an extension of the special education work program offered to students district-wide during the regular school year in both Hoffman and Fremd High School in Palatine. During the freshman year students are given vocational tests to determine job skills. The tests help "establish areas of strength and work with those strengths," said Minor.

As sophomores, students study five specific job areas. Juniors narrow choices to two job areas. The students hold jobs within the school working as clerks, switchboard operators, monitors, cafeteria workers and maintenance workers.

When the students become seniors they work in jobs in the community.

Macdonald to talk at Rotary today

State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, will be the speaker today at the Elk Grove Village Rotary Club luncheon meeting at the Maitre D' Restaurant, Elk Grove Village.

Mrs. Macdonald will give members an update on the legislature and RTA. Last week's luncheon program included a demonstration of 1,001 ways to make music.

Dale Thompson a retired Beloit, Wis., businessman, brought a collection of flute and pipe whistles and other unusual instruments and put on a show for the members.

Rotarians from other communities who attended last week's session are:

Ralph Niedert and James Coburn of Des Plaines; Charles Crompton of Arlington Heights; Jim Jones and Mike Myer of Park Ridge; Les Arnold and Allan Laya of Schaumburg; and Sig Chakow of Mount Prospect.

HOMETOWN GIRL Kathy Franke will stay in Elk Grove Village to begin a career in park and recreation administration with the Elk Grove Park District. The 22-year-old Western Illinois University graduate recently was hired as a recreation program supervisor.

Lawn watering ban instituted

by PAT GEHLACH

An emergency lawn watering and sprinkling ban began in Schaumburg Wednesday because of a temporary water shortage created by the malfunction of two deep wells which are the major source of village water.

"We have an adequate supply of water for domestic and fire use but it is absolutely necessary at this time to enact a ban on watering and sprinkling of lawns, trees and similar excessive uses of water," said Village Mgr. John E. Coste.

Sixteen shallow wells in the village system are functioning "perfectly," he said.

Unless there is a "substantial" amount of rainfall, the ban will continue through next week when repairs are completed on Well 16, in the Village-in-the-Park apartment complex, near Golf and Roselle roads, Coste said.

Work on Well 14, at Del Lago Villas subdivision near Higgins and Plum Grove roads is expected to take two to three weeks, Coste said. "If either of the two major wells are working there would be no problem," he said.

A THIRD DEEP well, now under construction in Schaumburg Centex Industrial Park, is expected to be operating next year, Coste said.

The village has never needed to enforce a sprinkling ordinance "on the books" because water supplies were adequate, said Public Works Dir. J. C. Smith. Smith said the ordinance, which limits sprinkling to specific days, is not now being enforced.

"We are simply asking residents to cooperate by not using water for any unnecessary purposes for the next few days," Smith said, adding he is "hopeful residents will cooperate."

Coste said the police department was asked to help inform residents of the ban and official notice of the water usage restriction were being hand-delivered by public works employees "to as many homes as possible."

Police search for possible overdose victim

Schaumburg police are searching for a 27-year-old man who wandered from his apartment and may be suffering from a drug overdose, police said.

Police, aided by a state police helicopter, combed fields near the Versailles-on-the-Lake apartment complex Wednesday looking for Alvin Hannah, 1108 N. Plum Grove Rd.

Hannah's roommate told police early Tuesday Hannah walked out of the apartment through patio doors after he had been drinking heavily and taking a quantity of tranquilizer pills with him.

Police said combining alcohol with tranquilizers can cause complications and even death.

Hannah's car remained in the parking lot.

Six Schaumburg policemen searched on foot through a field and retention pond area next to the apartment complex Tuesday night.

For three hours Wednesday police along with the helicopter searched fields near Golf and Plum Grove roads, but were unable to find Hannah.

Hannah was last seen walking east toward Plum Grove Road about 2 a.m. He is 5-feet 9 inches tall, and weighs about 145 pounds, police said. He has a slim build and brown hair, cut at medium length. He was wearing jeans and a cream-colored, long-sleeved shirt, police reported.

Persons who may have seen Hannah are urged to call the Schaumburg Police Dept. at 824-3141.

Two charged with service station burglary

Two men have been charged by Hoffman Estates police in connection with a burglary late Sunday at a Mobil service station at Golf and Barrington roads.

Charged with burglary were George H. Christo, 20, of 311 Streamwood Blvd., Streamwood, and Jeffrey L. Casario, 20, of Springfield, Wis.

Casario was arrested shortly after the break-in was reported at about 10:30 p.m. Police saw a car parked near the station after following a trail of blood, police said. Christo, who had cut himself during the break-in, had fled on foot but was later arrested by Streamwood police.

Taken in the burglary was about $16 in cash, police were told.

Christo was being held in County Jail in lieu of $30,000 bond pending an appearance Friday in the Hoffman Estates branch of Circuit Court. Casario was released on $5,000 bond pending a court appearance Sept. 6.

TOM JONES, played by Sam Goldsmith, and his friend, played by Laurie Gould, will share their escapades with the audience tonight and Friday at 8 p.m. The play will be performed by students in High School Dist. 211's drama workshop at Hoffman Estates High School, 1100 W. Higgins Rd. Tickets are $1 adults and 75 cents, students and may be purchased by calling the school, 882-8000.

Zoners OK McDonald's addition

Approval of a $58,000 McDonald's restaurant addition at 522 W. Golf Rd., was recommended Wednesday by the Schaumburg Zoning Board.

Construction of the addition, an 18-foot dining room and restroom wing, was halted June 26 by Building Comr. Joseph Julian, although a building permit was issued June 3.

Officials of McDonald's say the addition was 75 per cent complete when work was stopped by the village.

"I ordered the stop after viewing the work in comparison to other food operations in the village," said Village Mgr. John E. Coste after Wednesday's hearing.

COSTE AND OTHER village officials contend McDonald's should have applied for a special-use variance since they consider the building a drive-in.

In a 2½ hour hearing Wednesday, Michael Sife, an attorney for McDonald's, argued the facility is a "restaurant not a drive-in," noting that curb service is not provided.

Zoning board chairman Russell Parker called Sife's attention to the method of food packaging used by McDonald's and the number of waste cans provided outside the Golf Road building. Parker said he believes the chain encourages patrons to eat McDonald's food in their cars.

Board member Wayne Silva moved the zoning board recommend that a variance be granted allowing construction of the addition. "It is my concern that McDonald's not be damaged by the inability to go ahead with their addition. I feel no fraud was perpetrated on their part," Silva said.

The zoning board recommendation will be made at the Aug. 12 village board meeting.

Man arrested for $8,000 theft

Schaumburg police arrested a 19-year-old Schaumburg man late Monday in connection with an $8,000 burglary last week at the Buggy Whip in the Weathersfield Commons shopping center.

Charged with possession of stolen property was Paul P. Manno, 303 Monterey Ave. He was arrested after an investigation by detectives Patrick Hamill and James Schmedden.

In the break-in, about $8,000 worth of coins was reported stolen from the combination lounge and liquor store, police said. After the burglary, police alerted area banks and agencies to be on the lookout for persons exchanging large amounts of coins for bills.

A Woodfield Bank official notified police a youth had turned in a large amount of coins, police said. The wrappers on the coins were identified by the store's owner, and a bank employee identified Manno as the person who cashed in the coins, police reported.

Manno was released after posting $10,000 bond pending an appearance Aug. 6 in the Schaumburg branch of Circuit Court.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott, of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatooles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatooles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatooles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunken driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the state's attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said.

"A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said. "It depends on what attorney you

Police offer own time to build pistol range

Hoffman Estates policemen have offered to work on their own time to construct a pistol range if the village will pay for materials.

Police have made the proposal through their Fraternal Order of Police chapter in an attempt to obtain the shooting range which they have sought for several years.

The range was to have been included in the basement of the municipal building when the structure was built three years ago, but revenue limitations forced the village to cut the project and it has not been reinstated since then.

THE BASEMENT has remained vacant, except for storage use.

Village Mgr. George Longmeyer this week told trustees about the police proposal. He said police estimates say the original $65,000 cost of the range can be cut to $25,000 if labor costs are eliminated.

The proposal drew cautious support from trustees on the public health and safety committee, but the matter will be sent to the finance committee for study.

Sgt. Michael Stacy, the department's gun range officer, said the policemen's offer came after a unanimous decision among the men.

"One of the men had been talking to the heating and air-conditioning man about ventilation down there and they just started figuring what it would take (to build the range), and then they got seriously into it," he said.

STACY SAID the proposal was discussed among the men, who then agreed to present the offer.

The men would work on the project in their off-duty hours, Longmeyer said. They have also said the Detroit Bullet Trap Co., builders of pistol ranges, has agreed to provide the men with technical assistance in the construction.

"They (the police) did a pretty thorough job in their cost study," Longmeyer told trustees.

Hoffman Estates patrolmen currently use the Streamwood pistol range for shooting practice.

"We hope that with the cost coming down, we can do it," Stacy said. "The money is the big problem."

Teachers considering next step in pact talks

by MARILYN McDONALD

Teachers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 are considering the next step in their deadlocked contract negotiations with the board of education.

Talks are tentatively scheduled to resume Aug. 15.

Negotiations broke down July 17 after the board refused to discuss any revision other than salary in the teachers' year-old contract. Union negotiators said they wanted to add language on working conditions to the document, while board members said they had spent enough time on the comprehensive contract less than a year ago.

One of the most talked-about issues has been the inclusion of maternity leave policies in the new contract.

Sandra Johnson, president of the Classroom Teachers Council, said that the union wants to add certain working condition guarantees, including maternity leave, to the existing contract because of an "unexpected" change in the district's maternity leave policy during the past year.

Pregnant teachers in Dist. 15 traditionally were granted from one to two years maternity leave, according to their preference. Mrs. Johnson said that the practice, which was not included in the teacher contract, was suddenly changed in the middle of the last school year.

"LAST YEAR in the middle of the year, the administration and then the board took it away. Six to eight weeks is all you have. And they never made a formal statement of this change in practice," Mrs. Johnson said. "We were just informed by word of mouth."

"Teachers took this to be a very underhanded tactic," Mrs. Johnson continued. "This really has made a division. Teachers no longer feel they can look to the board to protect their best interest," she said.

Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent, said the district had the one or two year maternity leave policy until the Supreme Court ruled in 1974 that maternity leaves were discriminatory. The district now allows a pregnant teacher to have her baby on temporary incapacity time, returning to work when her physician advises her to do so. Teachers are paid as much sick leave pay as they have accumulated during their absence.

Teachers also may apply for more time off by asking for a normal leave of absence, available to any employee who wants extended time off for personal reasons.

MRS. JOHNSON said that union representatives and board members met this spring to iron out the issue, but teachers had not yet received a satisfactory answer.

"The board hasn't given them an answer yet, but that doesn't mean they aren't working on it," said Kiszka.

In reply to charges that the district's change in policy was "underhanded," Kiszka said:

"At no time has the board of education adopted or discussed a policy without an open meeting, and at no time have teachers ever been restricted from access to the teachers' manual," Kiszka said.

Teacher building representatives and union negotiators are scheduled to meet again Aug. 12 to determine what teachers want their negotiators to do at the next board session.

Guns, chairs, tools stolen from home

Schaumburg police are investigating a burglary in which about $800 worth of items was reported stolen Monday night from the Alan Heath home, 2205 Rochester Ct.

Taken were a shotgun, a .22-caliber automatic rifle, two lounge chairs, a ladder, power tools and a tool box, police were told.

Entry was gained by opening a garage door and prying open the door to the house, police said.

Movie gear, beer stolen from home

The William Brilliant family of Hoffman Estates returned home from vacation Monday night to find their home had been sacked by burglars, police said.

Brilliant, president of the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District, told police a movie projector and two 6-packs of beer were stolen from his home at 252 Ashley Rd.

Entry was gained by forcing open a window, police said.

ASSEMBLER Bob Crano spends a portion of his school day working at A. C. Davenport Co., Palatine. Bob is 1 of 19 students in a work-experience program this summer at Hoffman Estates High School.

Summer school work-study 'pays' off for 19 students

Nineteen students are attending Hoffman Estates High School this summer and are getting paid for it.

The students, part of a work-experience program in the school's special education department, attend class for one hour each day and work for three hours in jobs in the High School Dist. 211 community.

Goal of the program, which began at Hoffman Estates two years ago, is to provide students with "independent work experience" outside school, said coordinator Don Minor who teaches the students along with Mary Bayles and Linda Oldberg.

During the class sessions students learn job skills such as basic math, budgeting, consumer education, and how to apply and interview for a job. One student is an assembler, another works in store security, and another is a teacher's aide in a preschool program. The students are accepted by the community and their employers, said Minor.

THE SUMMER program is an extension of the special education work program offered to students district-wide during the regular school year in both Hoffman and Fremd High School in Palatine. During the freshman year students are given vocational tests to determine job skills. The tests help "establish areas of strength and work with those strengths," said Minor.

As sophomores, students study five specific job areas. Juniors narrow choices to two job areas. The students hold jobs within the school working as clerks, switchboard operators, monitors, cafeteria workers and maintenance workers.

When the students become seniors they work in jobs in the community. The idea of the program is to get the student "into one area so he'll gain proficiency at it," said Minor. "By the time they get to be seniors we hope for training for a job they will keep after graduation."

Minor is setting up jobs in the community for seniors this fall. Employers who are interested in hiring one of the students may call Minor at 882-8000.

Condo plan faces test

Madison Square Garden Corp. is running into trouble selling the idea of 2,700 condominium units on race track property to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission and other village officials.

Commissioners decided not to vote on the proposal and continued their scrutiny of the plan until Tuesday at the village hall.

Before a packed room, commissioners zeroed in on the 2,700-condominium-unit development. The commissioners said the density was too great.

THE COMMISSIONERS were joined by members of the village administration. Village planner Joe Kester and village planning engineer John Best reiterated opposition to the residential development at the track.

In response to questions raised at an informal session last week, Ronald Labinski, architect retained to design the proposed facility was not feasible. He said "Domed stadiums are not profitable" and money invested in other municipal stadiums may never be recovered.

Opposition to the density centered on use by the developers of the total 430-acre site. Best, reading from an opinion from Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel, said, "that land being set aside for commercial or industrial development should not be used in arriving at acreage-population ratios."

William Hannum, plan commissioner, said of the developer's plans, "I don't buy it. The density is much too high. I don't see how you can use land twice."

WILLIAM J. MOORE, attorney for Madison Square Gardens, said "I'm just not ready to concede that point."

In discussions about the stadium Ed McCaskey of the Chicago Bears reassured commissioners that the football team would not walk away from the stadium before any bond obligation is met. He repeated Bears owner George Halas' pledge to play in the stadium for the life of the bonds.

Michael Silverman, plan commissioner, questioned what would happen if the Bears organization were to cease operation before the bonds were paid off.

MOORE SAID about 25 nonprofessional stadium events would be staged at the stadium to help make it a profitable operation for the village. He said other stadium users would be the Chicago Sting, professional soccer team; eight nonathletic events, including contemporary music concerts; a college football game; and possibly high school football tournaments.

Moore said such popular attractions as Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand and Billy Graham-style religious crusades would be logical users of the facility.

A SPEEDY DESCENT marked the departure of the old sign at Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Wednesday. Workmen for Whiteway Sign Co. were replacing it with a new one when their crane broke and the steel plunged to earth. No one was hurt, but the crew sure was surprised.

Teachers considering next step

by MARILYN McDONALD

Teachers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 are considering the next step in their deadlocked contract negotiations with the board of education. Talks are tentatively scheduled to resume Aug. 15.

Negotiations broke down July 17 after the board refused to discuss any revision other than salary in the teachers' year-old contract. Union negotiators said they wanted to add language on working conditions to the document, while board members said they had spent enough time on the comprehensive contract less than a year ago.

One of the most talked-about issues has been the inclusion of maternity leave policies in the new contract.

Sandra Johnson, president of the Classroom Teachers Council, said that the union wants to add certain working condition guarantees, including maternity leave, to the existing contract because of an "unexpected" change in the district's maternity leave policy during the past year.

Pregnant teachers in Dist. 15 traditionally were granted from one to two years maternity leave, according to their preference. Mrs. Johnson said that the practice, which was not included in the teacher contract, was suddenly changed in the middle of the last school year.

"LAST YEAR in the middle of the year, the administration and then the board took it away. Six to eight weeks is all you have. And they never made a formal statement of this change in practice," Mrs. Johnson said. "We were just informed by word of mouth."

"Teachers took this to be a very underhanded tactic," Mrs. Johnson continued. "This really has made a division. Teachers no longer feel they can look to the board to protect their best interest," she said.

Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent, said the district had the one or two year maternity leave policy until the Supreme Court ruled in 1974 that maternity leaves were discriminatory. The district now allows a pregnant teacher to have her baby on temporary incapacity time, returning to work when her physician advises her to do so. Teachers are paid as much sick leave pay as they have accumulated during their absence.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT and TONI GINNETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in the drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights, a former assistant state's attorney, and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles, Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatroles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatroles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatroles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Slitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the states attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said. "A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said.

"It depends on what attorney you

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Local unemployment situation may be easing

by NANCY COWGER

Indications are that the unemployment situation may be easing locally with a quicker return for the jobless to work, said Rudolph Balek, Rolling Meadows welfare director.

About a half dozen new applications for family assistance are received each week, but the number of repeat requests has declined Balek said.

"People are finding jobs. As far as I can see, there have been less recurring cases," he said.

The quick return of unemployed persons to work may indicate better times ahead, he added. Many of the requests are for assistance in meeting large regular bills, such as rent or mortgage payments. The reemployment of applicants is becoming apparent because the families do not need assistance with the same major bill the next month, Balek said.

DEMANDS ON the city welfare budget have been unstable during the past nine months. Before December, the city received about 20 requests annually for assistance. But early in 1975, an increase was apparent, former Director Eugene O'Sullivan said. The number of applications was up to four per week by March.

O'Sullivan was reviewing six applications a week by April and city officials were concerned that the annual $6,000 budget might be inadequate to meet demands. The funds covered only approved requests, and the city council increased its allocation to $8,000 for fiscal 1975-76.

O'Sullivan resigned the post and Balek was appointed in May. During Balek's first three weeks, he received only six applications. Since then, the number has been climbing to its present level.

MOST APPLICANTS have been laid off from manual or skilled labor positions, Balek said. He has only received two requests for help from professional persons — an electrical engineer and a designer of sheet metal home heating and air-conditioning systems.

Balek said he has taken a firm approach to applicants, making them prove a "real need and real emergency" before approving funds. He has turned down aid requests from five or six families in recent weeks, which amounts to about one in every five applicants, he said.

Persons seeking aid represent a variety of situations, he said. The city program provides only short-term aid until families qualify for township or county welfare.

ASSEMBLER Bob Crane spends a portion of his school day working at A. C. Davenport Co., Palatine. Bob is 1 of 19 students in a work-experience program this summer at Hoffman Estates High School.

Summer school work-study 'pays' off for 19 students

Nineteen students are attending Hoffman Estates High School this summer and are getting paid for it.

The students, part of a work-experience program in the school's special education department, attend class for one hour each day and work for three hours in jobs in the High School Dist. 211 community.

Goal of the program, which began at Hoffman Estates two years ago, is to provide students with "independent work experience" outside school, said coordinator Don Minor who teaches the students along with Mary Bayles and Linda Oldberg.

During the class sessions students learn job skills such as basic math, budgeting, consumer education, and how to apply and interview for a job. One student is an assembler, another works in store security, and another is a teacher's aide in a preschool program. The students are accepted by the community and their employers, said Minor.

THE SUMMER program is an extension of the special education work program offered to students district-wide during the regular school year in both Hoffman and Fremd High School in Palatine. During the freshman year students are given vocational tests to determine job skills. The tests help "establish areas of strength and work with those strengths," said Minor.

As sophomores, students study five specific job areas. Juniors narrow choices to two job areas. The students hold jobs within the school working as clerks, switchboard operators, monitors, cafeteria workers and maintenance workers.

When the students become seniors they work in jobs in the community. The idea of the program is to get the student "into one area so he'll gain proficiency at it," said Minor. "By the time they get to be seniors we hope for training for a job they will keep after graduation."

Minor is setting up jobs in the community for seniors this fall. Employers who are interested in hiring one of the students may call Minor at 832-8000.

No decision on razing farmhouse

Officials of the Arlen Management Realty Corp. have yet to decide if a farmhouse on their Georgetown of Willow Bend apartment complex in Rolling Meadows will be demolished or restored as a museum.

Anthony Pusateri, new regional manager for Arlen, said the corporation this week will try to meet with city officials to determine if the city has any interest in the farmhouse.

Building department officials confirmed a telephone call had been received in connection with the potential donation, but said no meeting had been scheduled.

THE DONATION has been sought by the Rolling Meadows Junior Women's Club, in a movement spearheaded by Patricia Shearer, a member, to obtain the building for a museum site. City inspectors have estimated a minimum cost of $60,000 to restore the structure, but Mrs. Shearer has suggested volunteer labor and donations could reduce the expense.

Pusateri said corporate officials in New York are reviewing the request this week to consider potential legal problems.

Pusateri said he is not fully aware of all the potential legal ramifications, but he said the company might decline to donate the building if it is thought the gift would cost the firm "thousands of dollars" in legal fees.

Pusateri also confirmed he is proceeding with steps necessary to demolish the building, because "I have to. I have a deadline from the city to pay a fine or remove the building."

THE CORPORATE decision on the donation can be made "very easily and very simply" before the city action forces razing of the building, Pusateri said. He believes "it would be a good move" to give the building to the city for an historic museum.

But Pusateri said he has no idea how his firm will react to the demolition versus donation question, and must first "see if the city will even accept it."

Condo plan faces test

Madison Square Garden Corp. is running into trouble selling the idea of 2,700 condominium units on race track property to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission and other village officials.

Commissioners decided not to vote on the proposal and continued their scrutiny of the plan until Tuesday at the village hall.

Before a packed room, commissioners zeroed in on the 2,700-condominium-unit development. The commissioners said the density was too great.

THE COMMISSIONERS were joined by members of the village administration. Village planner Joe Kesler and village planning engineer John Best reiterated opposition to the residential development at the track.

In response to questions raised at an informal session last week, Ronald Labinski, architect retained to design the proposed Chicago Bears stadium, said a domed facility was not feasible. He said "Domed stadiums are not profitable" and money invested in other municipal stadiums may never be recovered.

Opposition to the density centered on use by the developers of the total 450-acre site. Best, reading from an opinion from Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel, said, "that land being set aside for commercial or industrial development should not be used in arriving at acreage-population ratios."

William Hannum, plan commissioner, said of the developer's plans, "I don't buy it. The density is much too high. I don't see how you can use land twice."

WILLIAM J. MOORE, attorney for Madison Square Gardens, said "I'm just not ready to concede that point."

In discussions about the stadium Ed McCuskey of the Chicago Bears reassured commissioners that the football team would not walk away from the stadium before any bond obligation is met. He repeated Bears owner George Halas' pledge to play in the stadium for the life of the bonds.

Michael Silverman, plan commissioner, questioned what would happen if the Bears organization were to cease operation before the bonds were paid off.

MOORE SAID about 25 nonprofessional football events would be staged at the stadium to help make it a profitable operation for the village. He said other stadium users would be the Chicago Sting, professional soccer team; eight nonathletic events, including contemporary music concerts; a college football game; and possibly high school football tournaments.

Moore said such popular attractions as Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand and Elly Graham-style religious crusades would be logical users of the facility.

Second rape suspect surrenders to police

The second suspect wanted in connection with the rape of a Hoffman Estates girl in Palatine surrendered Wednesday night to police.

Eric A. Bloom, 18, of 1345 N. Illinois Ave., Arlington Heights, turned himself in at the Palatine police station, police said. He was charged with unlawful restraint and rape in connection with the sexual assault of a 16-year-old girl at Lake Irene, Ill. Rte. 53 and Kenilworth Avenue.

Jeffrey R. Baker, 708 Rand Grove Ln., was arrested Tuesday on the same charges.

Police said the girl was assaulted by two men about 3 a.m.

Bloom was released after posting $15,000 bond. He and Baker are scheduled to appear Aug. 14 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

TOM JONES, played by Sam Goldsmith, and his love Sophia, played by Laurie Gould, will share their escapades with the audience tonight and Friday at 8 p.m. The play will be performed by students in High School Dist. 211's drama workshop at Hoffman Estates High School, 1100 W. Higgins Rd. Tickets are $1 adults and 75 cents, students and may be purchased by calling the school, 882-8000.

Beautification plans wilt; community apathy blamed

by DIANE MERMIGAS
Palatine beautification projects have slackened this summer because of insufficient support from residents and civic groups, said Ralph Deger, Palatine Beautification Committee chairman.

The committee, a branch of the Palatine Advisory Board, slated seven village clean-up projects for the summer in March, "never anticipating the lack of participation we have gotten from the community," Deger said.

The committee started the village's first beautification program in April with the installation of lights and landscaping at People's Park, Slade and Broadway streets, in Palatine's downtown area.

THE PALATINE Jaycees provided the manpower and local banks financed the project. The groups worked cooperatively in constructing the park "so we could count on their help with the project," Deger said.

The Palatine Rotary Club supervised a second project at the beginning of the summer, cleaning debris from along Northwest Highway throughout the village.

"Only 15 high school students and a handful of adults, including village officials and their wives, turned out to help with that project. It was a lot less than we anticipated, but we did as much as we could," Deger said.

The beautification committee announced in May that it would offer matching funds for any village organization willing to plant and maintain flower gardens in public areas.

RESPONSE TO the garden-plot program "has been disappointingly minimal," Deger said.

The Plum Grove Garden Club has been the only community group to sponsor a garden plot this summer under the third beautification project.

Clubs have "shied away from starting a garden plot" because they are concerned about the continued finance and maintenance of the project, he said.

"Many groups have inquired about the program, but then back down because they don't have the funds or are afraid they may lose the right to continue the garden in the same spot in future years," he said.

The remainder of the seven beautification projects originally planned have been "postponed" until more community support can be developed. The remaining projects included cleaning up neighborhood parks and beautifying entrance ways into village subdivisions, he said.

"WE'VE TRIED to pick apart what we have done wrong so far this year with these beautification programs, and I don't think we've done anything wrong. I just think that the timing on some of these things might be a little off," Deger said.

The summer months "are traditionally a bad time to get people to work on something because they are always off on vacation," he said.

So, Deger plans to make a beautification comeback late in August with the planting of trees and shrubs along the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks and along Northwest Highway at either end of the village.

The committee will appeal to service organizations like the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts to assist with the project.

Ford summit paves way to arms accord

HELSINKI (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in a "very constructive" private summit Wednesday, opened the way for the two to meet in Washington in October and complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger said if the diplomatic momentum continues, "chances are good" for the pact.

The Ford-Brezhnev session went so well that the two leaders were able to push ahead into preliminary discussions of U.S. efforts to mediate an Arab-Israeli interim agreement.

"The two leaders spent so long at their meeting that the ceremonial opening of the 35-nation European security summit here had to be delayed 10 minutes for Ford's arrival.

As the conference opened, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned that none of the nations signing a security pledge for Europe would have any excuse in the future to intervene in the internal affairs of other nations.

The statement appeared designed as a direct challenge to Moscow's so-called "Brezhnev Doctrine," propounded by the Soviet Communist party general secretary after the invasion of Czechoslovakia seven years ago. Brezhnev proclaimed the right of the Soviet Union to intervene in any East European country.

Brezhnev appeared in top form at his meeting with Ford, despite persistent recent reports of his ill health.

But U.S. delegation members who attended a dinner given by President Urho Kekkonen of Finland for all the summit leaders said Brezhnev slipped

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunk drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorney's fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearances forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filled appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

66 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Tatroles of Wheeling and Chicago. Tatroles was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Tatroles' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

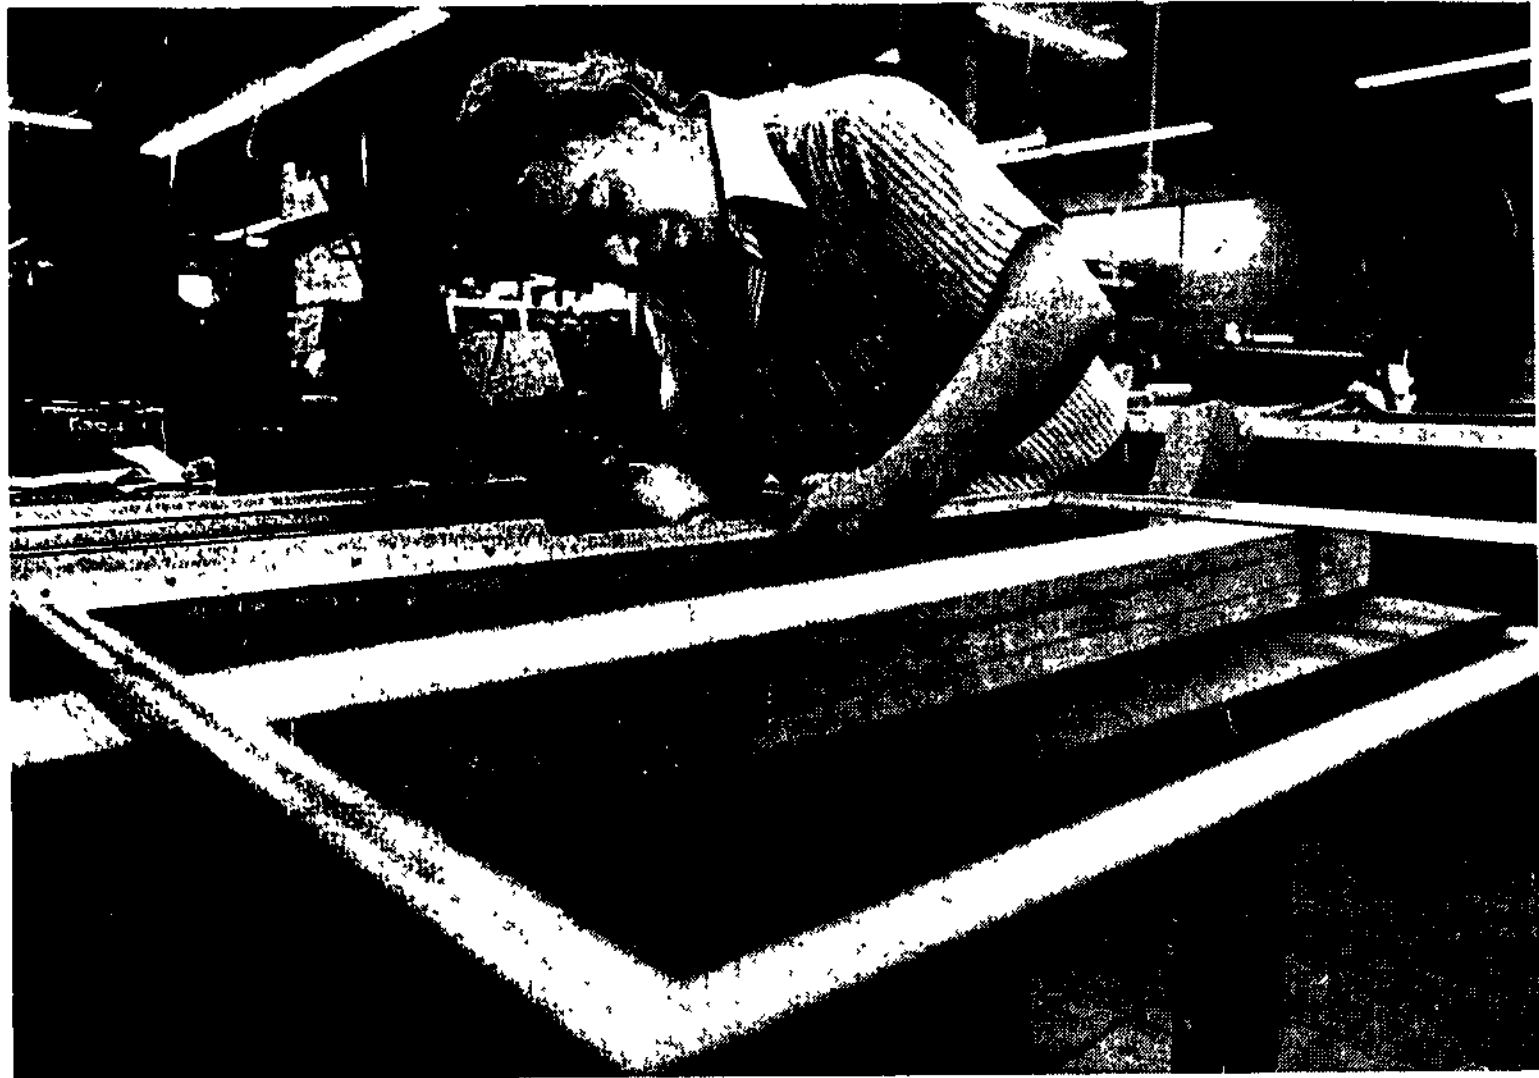

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the states attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said. "A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said. "It depends on what attorney you

ASSEMBLER Bob Crane spends a portion of his school day working at A. C. Davenport Co., Palatine. Bob is 1 of 19 students in a work-experience program this summer at Hoffman Estates High School.

Summer school work-study 'pays' off for 19 students

Nineteen students are attending Hoffman Estates High School this summer and are getting paid for it.

The students, part of a work-experience program in the school's special education department, attend class for one hour each day and work for three hours in jobs in the High School Dist. 211 community.

Goal of the program, which began at Hoffman Estates two years ago, is to provide students with "independent work experience" outside school, said coordinator Don Minor who teaches the students along with Mary Bayles and Linda Oldberg.

During the class sessions students learn job skills such as basic math, budgeting, consumer education, and how to apply and interview for a job. One student is an assembler, another works in store security, and another is a teacher's aide in a preschool program. The students are accepted by the community and their employers, said Minor.

THE SUMMER program is an extension of the special education work program offered to students district-wide during the regular school year in both Hoffman and Fremd High School in Palatine. During the freshman year students are given vocational tests to determine job skills. The tests help "establish areas of strength and work with those strengths," said Minor.

As sophomores, students study five specific job areas. Juniors narrow choices to two job areas. The students hold jobs within the school working as clerks, switchboard operators, monitors, cafeteria workers and maintenance workers.

When the students become seniors they work in jobs in the community. The idea of the program is to get the student "into one area so he'll gain proficiency at it," said Minor. "By the time they get to be seniors we hope for training for a job they will keep after graduation."

Minor is setting up jobs in the community for seniors this fall. Employers who are interested in hiring one of the students may call Minor at 822-8000.

No decision on razing farmhouse

Officials of the Arlen Management Realty Corp. have yet to decide if a farmhouse on their Georgetown of Willow Bend apartment complex in Rolling Meadows will be demolished or restored as a museum.

Anthony Pusateri, new regional manager for Arlen, said the corporation this week will try to meet with city officials to determine if the city has any interest in the farmhouse.

Building department officials confirmed a telephone call had been received in connection with the potential donation, but said no meeting had been scheduled.

THE DONATION has been sought by the Rolling Meadows Junior Women's Club, in a movement spearheaded by Patricia Shearer, a member, to obtain the building for a museum site. City inspectors have estimated a minimum cost of $60,000 to restore the structure, but Mrs. Shearer has suggested volunteer labor and donations could reduce the expense.

Pusateri said corporate officials in New York are reviewing the request this week to consider potential legal problems.

Pusateri said he is not fully aware of all the potential ramifications, but he said the company might decline to donate the building if it is thought the gift would cost the firm "thousands of dollars" in legal fees.

Pusateri also confirmed he is proceeding with steps necessary to demolish the building, because "I have to. I have a deadline from the city to pay a fine or remove the building."

THE CORPORATE decision on the donation can be made "very easily and very simply" before the city action forces razing of the building, Pusateri said. He believes "it would be a good move" to give the building to the city for an historic museum.

But Pusateri said he has no idea how his firm will react to the demolition versus donation question, and must first "see if the city will even accept it."

Condo plan faces test

Madison Square Garden Corp. is running into trouble selling the idea of 2,700 condominium units on race track property to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission and other village officials.

Commissioners decided not to vote on the proposal and continued their scrutiny of the plan until Tuesday at the village hall.

Before a packed room, commissioners zeroed in on the 2,700-condominium-unit development. The commissioners said the density was too great.

THE COMMISSIONERS were joined by members of the village administration. Village planner Joe Kesler and village planning engineer John Best reiterated opposition to the residential development at the track.

In response to questions raised at an informal session last week, Ronald Labinski, architect retained to design the proposed Chicago Bears stadium, said a domed facility was not feasible. He said "Domed stadiums are not profitable" and money invested in other municipal stadiums may never be recovered.

Opposition to the density centered on use by the developers of the total 450-acre site. Best, reading from an opinion from Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel, said, "that land being set aside for commercial or industrial development should not be used in arriving at acreage-population ratios."

William Hanum, plan commissioner, said of the developer's plans, "I don't buy it. The density is much too high. I don't see how you can use land twice."

WILLIAM J. MOORE, attorney for Madison Square Gardens, said "I'm just not ready to concede that point."

In discussions about the stadium Ed McCaskoy of the Chicago Bears reassured commissioners that the football team would not walk away from the stadium before any bond obligation is met. He repeated Bears owner George Halas' pledge to play in the stadium for the life of the bonds.

Michael Silverman, plan commissioner, questioned what would happen if the Bears organization were to cease operation before the bonds were paid off.

MOORE SAID about 25 nonprofessional football events would be staged at the stadium to help make it a profitable operation for the village. He said other stadium users would be the Chicago Sting, professional soccer team; eight nonathletic events, including contemporary music concerts; a college football game; and possibly high school football tournaments.

Moore said such popular attractions as Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand and Billy Graham-style religious crusades would be logical users of the facility.

Second rape suspect surrenders to police

The second suspect wanted in connection with the rape of a Hoffman Estates girl in Palatine surrendered Wednesday night to police.

Eric A. Bloom, 18, of 1345 N. Illinois Ave., Arlington Heights, turned himself in at the Palatine police station, police said. He was charged with unlawful restraint and rape in connection with the sexual assault of a 16-year-old girl at Lake Irene, Ill. Rte. 53 and Kenilworth Avenue.

Jeffrey R. Baker, 708 Rand Grove Ln., was arrested Tuesday on the same charges.

Police said the girl was assaulted by two men about 3 a.m.

Bloom was released after posting $15,000 bond. He and Baker are scheduled to appear Aug. 14 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

TOM JONES, played by Sam Goldsmith, and his love Sophia, played by Laurie Gould, will share their escapades with the audience tonight and Friday at 8 p.m. The play will be performed by students in High School Dist. 211's drama workshop at Hoffman Estates High School, 1100 W. Higgins Rd. Tickets are $1 adults and 75 cents, students and may be purchased by calling the school, 882-8000.

Beautification plans wilt; community apathy blamed

by DIANE MERMIGAS
Palatine beautification projects have slackened this summer because of insufficient support from residents and civic groups, said Ralph Deger, Palatine Beautification Committee chairman.

The committee, a branch of the Palatine Advisory Board, slated seven village clean-up projects for the summer in March, "never anticipating the lack of participation we have gotten from the community," Deger said.

The committee started the village's first beautification program in April with the installation of lights and landscaping at People's Park, Slade and Broadway streets, in Palatine's downtown area.

THE PALATINE Jaycees provided the manpower and local banks financed the project. The groups worked cooperatively in constructing the park "so we could count on their help with the project," Deger said.

The Palatine Rotary Club supervised a second project at the beginning of the summer, cleaning debris from along Northwest Highway throughout the village.

"Only 15 high school students and a handful of adults, including village officials and their wives, turned out to help with that project. It was a lot less than we anticipated, but we did as much as we could," Deger said.

The beautification committee announced in May that it would offer matching funds for any village organization willing to plant and maintain flower gardens in public areas.

RESPONSE TO the garden-plot program "has been disappointingly minimal," Deger said.

The Plum Grove Garden Club has been the only community group to sponsor a garden plot this summer under the third beautification project.

Clubs have "shied away from starting a garden plot" because they are concerned about the continued finance and maintenance of the project, he said.

"Many groups have inquired about the program, but then backed down because they don't have the funds or are afraid that they may lose the right to continue the garden in the same spot in future years," he said.

The remainder of the seven beautification projects originally planned have been "postponed" until more community support can be developed. The remaining projects included cleaning up neighborhood parks and beautifying entrance ways into village subdivisions, he said.

"WE'VE TRIED to pick apart what we have done wrong so far this year with these beautification programs, and I don't think we've done anything wrong. I just think that the timing on some of these things might be a little off," Deger said.

The summer months "are traditionally a bad time to get people to work on something because they are always off on vacation," he said.

So, Deger plans to make a beautification comeback late in August with the planting of trees and shrubs along the Chicago and North Western Rys, tracks and along Northwest Highway at either end of the village.

The committee will appeal to service organizations like the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts to assist with the project.

Historical museum fund drive planned

The conversion of a 103-year-old Victorian house into a village historical museum will require "total community involvement," said Thomas Ahern, chairman of the Palatine Bicentennial Committee.

Ahern met with about 35 representatives of civic and community organizations Tuesday. After a tour of the house at 224 E. Palatine Rd., Ahern told the group he will contact them in September and October to seek support for fund raising.

Purchase price for the house is $48,000 and renovation costs are estimated at $12,000. Residents and businessmen will be approached during the first two weeks of September for contributions to raise a $10,000 down-payment, Ahern said.

"We will try to get the property so it is ours by Sept. 15," he said. He added that some contributions have been made but he did not know how much.

THE BICENTENNIAL Committee is planning to put a plaque in the house identifying the major benefactors of the historical museum.

After the down payment has been raised village organizations will be asked to hold one fund-raiser during the year for the museum.

"We are trying to do something different than most fund-raising projects. We will wind up with something that will be here long after the people have departed the area," Ahern said. He added that he was "very encouraged" by the response he received Tuesday.

The Bicentennial Committee hopes to open the historical museum July 4, 1976. After the house has been bought and renovated it will be turned over to the Palatine Park District to maintain.

The park board has agreed to begin levying a museum tax next year to pay for museum upkeep.

Youth's death to spur fence at railroad shortcut

Palatine soon will erect a fence to block a hazardous shortcut across the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks where a 10-year-old boy was killed last month.

The fence will be paid for from village funds. North Western officials were asked to pay the estimated $125 cost of installing the fence on their right-of-way nearly three weeks ago but still have made no commitment.

"We are going to go ahead and put the fence up and not worry about the $125. If the Chicago and North Western can't find $125, Palatine can," Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said. "We would pay $125 in administrative costs just trying to find out who is going to pay for the fence."

Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig agreed that the fence is too important to wait for any longer while officials tried to decide who should pay for it.

"It's such a nominal amount and such an important thing. It's just not worth quibbling about," Harwig said. Harwig held up hope that Chicago and North Western officials may be able to reimburse the village for the cost of the fence in the future.

A temporary barricade has blocked the shortcut for the last two weeks at the request of residents in the area of Washington and Oak streets.

The permanent fence would be approximately 40 feet long and connect two existing fences.

Village officials have warned residents that the fence will only act as a deterrent and policing of the path will be necessary by the parents.

Register new kids for school Aug. 4-15

Now residents of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 with elementary school age children may register them Aug. 4-15 at the administration center, 505 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

Registration will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Children need not accompany their parents to registration.

Parents will be required to show a transfer or other evidence of the previous school their children attended. An official birth certificate must be presented at the time of registration. Hospital or baptismal certificates are not acceptable proof of date of birth.

Children registering for kindergarten must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1.

Parents will be asked to fill out forms including the name and telephone number of a local physician and of two individuals in the community who can be called in case of emergency.

Book rental fees will be collected at the time of registration. The fee is $10 for children in kindergarten through sixth grade and $11 for children in grades seven and eight.

Insurance plans for students will be available for a $2.00 premium which provides coverage from the time the child leaves home until he returns and an $18 premium which provides 24-hour coverage.

Parents and children may visit the schools where the children will attend Thursday, Aug. 28, from 1 to 2 p.m. School begins Friday, Aug. 29.

Arson suspected in $5,000 home fire

Arson is suspected as the cause of a fire that caused about $5,000 of damage early Tuesday to a Palatine Township home.

Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said a liquid apparently was poured from the front door through several rooms and that the fire burned a pattern through the house at 1237 Doe Rd. State fire marshals joined Palatine fire officials in the investigation of the blaze, which occurred about 3:50 a.m.

Helms said no one was at home at the time of the fire, and authorities found the rear patio door open. The name of the owner of the house was not available.

Firefighters quickly extinguished the fire. There were no injuries reported.

ASSEMBLER Bob Crane spends a portion of his school day working at A. C. Davenport Co., Palatine. Bob is 1 of 19 students in a work-experience program this summer at Hoffman Estates High School.

Summer school work-study 'pays' off for 19 students

Nineteen students are attending Hoffman Estates High School this summer and are getting paid for it.

The students, part of a work-experience program in the school's special education department, attend class for one hour each day and work for three hours in jobs in the High School Dist. 211 community.

Goal of the program, which began at Hoffman Estates two years ago, is to provide students with "independent work experience" outside school, said coordinator Don Minor who teaches the students along with Mary Bayles and Linda Oldberg.

During the class sessions students learn job skills such as basic math, budgeting, consumer education, and how to apply and interview for a job. One student is an assembler, another works in store security, and another is a teacher's aide in a preschool program. The students are accepted by the community and their employers, said Minor.

THE SUMMER program is an extension of the special education work program offered to students district-wide during the regular school year in both Hoffman and Fremd High School in Palatine. During the freshman year students are given vocational tests to determine job skills. The tests help "establish areas of strength and work with those strengths," said Minor.

As sophomores, students study five specific job areas. Juniors narrow choices to two job areas. The students hold jobs within the school working as clerks, switchboard operators, monitors, cafeteria workers and maintenance workers.

When the students become seniors they work in jobs in the community. The idea of the program is to get the student "into one area so he'll gain proficiency at it," said Minor. "By the time they get to be seniors we hope for training for a job they will keep after graduation."

Minor is setting up jobs in the community for seniors this fall. Employers who are interested in hiring one of the students may call Minor at 882-8000.

The Arlington Crest Homeowners' Assn. has donated $110 to the Village of Palatine to purchase a telemetry heart unit for the fire department's paramedic service.

The association raised the funds during an ice cream social July 10.

The village has asked homeowners associations to sponsor fund-raising events to raise approximately $3,500 to purchase the unit. The village plans to provide whatever additional funds are necessary.

How-to-study class offered

The Buehler YMCA, Northwest Highway and Countryside Drive, Palatine will offer a "How to Study in College" course Aug. 11-14 from 7 to 9 p.m.

The $27.50 registration fee, which includes materials, can be paid the first day the course is offered.

at 8 p.m. today at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The eight-part study — prepared for Madison Square Garden, Inc. by Alfred Benesch and Co., consulting engineers, Chicago — cites traffic congestion and high concentrations of carbon monoxide as the only negative effects on the environment.

Jean Hanlon, commission chairman, said she will have no comment on the study until she studies the report thoroughly. ECC members received copies of the study Tuesday night.

Mrs. Hanlon said the hearing will be "information gathering. We're trying to get all viewpoints. There will be no decision made."

Members of the public will be able to speak after commission members review the report. Copies of the environmental impact study are available for public review at the municipal building and the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton St.

Master plan must wait: Grier

by LYNN ASINOF

Mount Prospect's proposed comprehensive plan won't be tackled until other issues in the village calm down, said James P. Grier, Jr., chairman of the comprehensive plan subcommittee.

Grier said the plan originally was scheduled for public consideration at hearings in May. He said those hearings were delayed because the village board became enmeshed in more pressing matters including the public library and financial issues.

"They are in no position to mentally apply themselves to the comprehensive plan when they can't even handle the day to day finances of the village," Grier said, referring to the board's current problem of raising $371,000 to cover employee pay raises.

GRIER SAID hearings also were postponed because of a proposed boundary agreement between Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. The agreement would allow for future planning for the area between Central and Golf roads from Arlington Heights Road to Meier Road.

Although Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect officials have met to discuss the agreement, no final decisions have been made.

"As long as there seemed to be such imminent action on settling that boundary, we thought we would settle that and make it part of the comprehensive plan," Grier said.

Grier said, however, his group has started planning for an in-depth review of the master plan. "We sent letters out to all sorts of agencies," he said, "and had an end of June deadline on it to reply if they chose to. Our response was not uproarious."

MOST OF THE replies, according to Grier, were perfunctory thank-yous which complemented the plan. He said he has not heard from any of the various homeowner associations, which were also sent copies of the master plan.

Several homeowners' groups, however, are currently in the process of reacting to the plan, which was released in February. The Northwest Suburban Council of Associations has urged its member groups to send comments on the master plan to Grier.

Grier said he plans to contact Mayor Robert D. Telchert to set a date for public hearings. "I want to see what he foresees the board running into," he said.

Creek project to bring flood relief by spring

State officials Wednesday said planned improvements to McDonald Creek are on schedule and residents along the creek can expect flood relief by next spring.

The project includes the widening and dredging of the lower portion of McDonald Creek, and is scheduled for completion in early 1976. The project will allow the opening of the Soo Line R.R. culvert, west of Quince Lane, which in turn is expected to reduce upstream creek levels substantially.

Leon Winn, engineer with the state division of water resources, said the state has successfully acquired about half the right-of-way required for the project. He said he is hopeful that the rest of the right-of-way work will go as smoothly, since nothing can be done to the creek until the needed land is obtained.

THE WIDENING and dredging will affect portions of the creek from the Soo Line R.R. culvert south to the Des Plaines River.

This section is narrower than the upstream part of the creek. Residents in the area pushed for the widening and dredging work, fearing they would be flooded if the culvert was opened without downstream improvements.

If no unexpected snags are encountered in obtaining the right-of-way, Winn said the state will look towards a full contract. Actual construction is estimated at about $170,000 with the total project costing about $300,000.

'No, No Nanette' on the stage

"NO, NO, NANETTE," a combined musical production of Hersey and Buffalo Grove high schools, runs today through Sunday at Buffalo Grove High, Dundas and Arlington Heights roads. Paula Kinney, right, as Nanette, and Jeff Anderson, as Tom, are among the cast. Performances are 8 p.m. nightly and 3 p.m. Sunday.

Parks show $1,006 loss on 3-season programs

A financial study of the 1974-75 fall, winter and spring programs of the River Trails Park District shows 29 programs and activities lost a combined total of $1,006.

The study, prepared by Park director Marvin Weiss and his staff, shows the programs brought in $24,645 in receipts but had expenses of $9,974 for supplies and $15,677 for salaries.

Two of the three most popular programs, those with the highest enrollments, showed profits. Of the eight programs with the smallest enrollments, five showed profits, although the profit was often minimal.

THE BALLET program had the highest enrollment with 375 but it had a $125 loss. An allied activity, the ballet show with 150 participants, had a loss of $74.

The other two high enrollment programs, the play program with 234 involved, and tumbling and gymnastics with 241 registered, showed profits of $997 and $133 respectively. The play program profit was the highest of any activity and offset the $882 spent on the ice rinks, which bring in no income.

The smallest program, wrestling with only 21 participants, showed a profit of $68, but the next two smallest programs, croquet with 26 and Saturday morning recreation with 30, showed profits of only $8 and $23 respectively.

The programs that lost the most money included boys' basketball ($311), ice hockey ($149), senior citizens club ($844) and running of the sled hill, which cost $330 and generated no income.

Partially offsetting the large losses were sizeable incomes from belly-dancing ($273), play hour ($110) and women's volleyball ($228).

WEISS SAID the study is made "to inform the board on the cost of the programs and as an analysis of what the programs are costing us."

He said that based on the report some programs could be dropped or have their fees increased. A program that shows a loss of revenue and a decrease in participation, such as boys' basketball, he said, would be the most likely program to be dropped.

Weiss said that despite its large cost to the district, a program such as the senior citizens club would not be dropped because "we feel it is a worthwhile program."

Drops in registrations over the past couple of years threaten both boutique and croquet programs, Weiss said. The croquet may be replaced with knitting or rug hooking, which might generate more interest, he said.

"The activities go in cycles, sometimes because of fads," Weiss said.

Weiss said participation in the ice hockey program has been lowered because of three bad winters in a row (short freezing spells) resulting in little skating time and the opening of the indoor Randhurst Twin Ice Arena.

Weiss said the district will study the possibility of buying ice time at an indoor facility so that it can run a program with guaranteed skating time.

Attorney key in fighting drunk driving charge

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
and TONI GINETTI

(Fourth in a series)

Six dollars buys four mixed drinks or six beers. Drive home from your favorite watering spot with that under your belt and you could be arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI).

About $750 will then hire you a top suburban defense attorney and a better-than-average chance of winning your case in a Northwest suburban court.

A Herald investigation of nearly 1,500 drunk driving cases since 1973 found that eight attorneys are frequent, successful defenders of local motorists charged with drunken driving.

Although convictions of accused drunken drivers average 30.5 per cent in the Northwest suburbs, the eight attorneys lost only 24 per cent of their cases of DWI — one in four — during the period examined by The Herald.

TECHNICALITIES in drunken driving laws, pre-trial preparation time and experience in maneuvering within the suburban court system combine to give an advantage to defense attorneys' pleas for DWI acquittals, The Herald found.

"Murder is easier to prove than

drunk driving," an assistant state's attorney told The Herald.

For accused drunken drivers — who face a possible $1,000 fine, a year in jail and mandatory license revocation — attorneys' fees that range from $400 to $1,200 for a non-jury drunk driving case "are worth every cent of it," a Northwest suburban resident said.

"My license, my car insurance and possibly my job were on the line," the defendant said. "I wanted every advantage I could buy."

Herald reporters examined hundreds of lawyers' court appearance

forms and observed trials throughout the Northwest suburbs to determine which attorneys are hired by drunk driving defendants.

Most active attorneys include:

• Paul H. Knott of Arlington Heights. Knott, a former assistant state's attorney and a former U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, represented nearly twice as many clients charged with drunken driving as any of 300 lawyers who filed appearance forms. About 29 per cent of drivers represented by Knott were convicted of drunken driving.

• Alan Lapping of Chicago. Lapping lost only one of 11 DWI cases. Lapping is a former chairman of the Chicago Bar Assn. traffic court committee. About 50 per cent of Lapping's local clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

• Ronald Sandler of Northbrook. Sandler is Buffalo Grove village prosecutor, a part-time position. As a defense attorney, Sandler averaged a "high" 4.8 continuances per case, and had 29 per cent of DWI cases reduced to lesser charges, the highest of the eight.

• Kenneth Cohen of Niles. Cohen, who shares law offices with Niles Mayor Nicholas Blase, lost 33 per cent, or one of three, DWI trials, but

65 per cent of his clients were fined less than $100.

• John Taloos of Wheeling and Chicago. Taloos was most successful in plea bargaining convictions to lesser charges in exchange for DWI acquittals. About 45 per cent of Taloos' DWI cases ended with convictions on lesser charges.

• Myron Goldstein of Chicago. Goldstein averaged only 1.6 continuances per case and won acquittals or reduced charges in 64 per cent of DWI trials.

• Richard Adler and Robert Martwick, both of Chicago. Only 22 per cent of both Martwick and Adler's DWI cases ended in convictions. Nearly 90 per cent of Martwick's clients were non-Northwest suburban residents.

Attorneys from two Arlington Heights law firms also frequently appear in area courts to represent drunk drivers, The Herald found.

John B. Clarke, of Burfield, Schlickman Ltd., said that Herald statistics which indicate that 60 per cent of his clients were convicted of drunk driving in 1973-74 "are very unrepresentative." Clarke, who graduated from IIT-Kent College of Law in 1970, said he recently "has lost very few DWI cases."

Henry C. Szala, of Stitt, Moore,

Kearns and Szala, said that less than 2 per cent of his clients have prior DWI convictions. The firm lost 50 per cent of DWI cases in The Herald investigation.

None of the attorneys interviewed "specializes" in defending drunken drivers, although Clarke, Lapping, Goldstein and Szala said they defended more accused drunk drivers than those cited in The Herald study.

The Herald study included only Northwest suburban DWI arrests.

"I'd say I handle 50 in a year. In fact, it may even be more than that," Goldstein said.

LOW CONVICTION rates throughout the suburbs indicate "that the way the (drunken driving) laws are now, it is very difficult for state's attorneys and police to win a case," Lapping said.

"It's a lot easier for a defense attorney to win a DWI case than any other type," a state's attorney told The Herald.

Plea bargaining, loopholes and technicalities in drunk driving and implied consent laws, continuances and the right of a defendant to a jury trial provide an arsenal of weapons to defend accused drunk drivers, The Herald found.

"I go into every case asking for a plea bargain" to save court time and to assess strength of the prosecution's case, Lapping said.

Although some attorneys oppose the concept of plea bargaining — where a defendant pleads guilty to a reduced or lesser charge like reckless driving to avoid conviction on a more serious charge like drunk driving — most attorneys argue that crowded court calendars force its use.

"If an attorney has done his homework, he can present defects in the state's case (during a pre-trial conference) and they're not going to take up the court's time" with a trial, Clarke said.

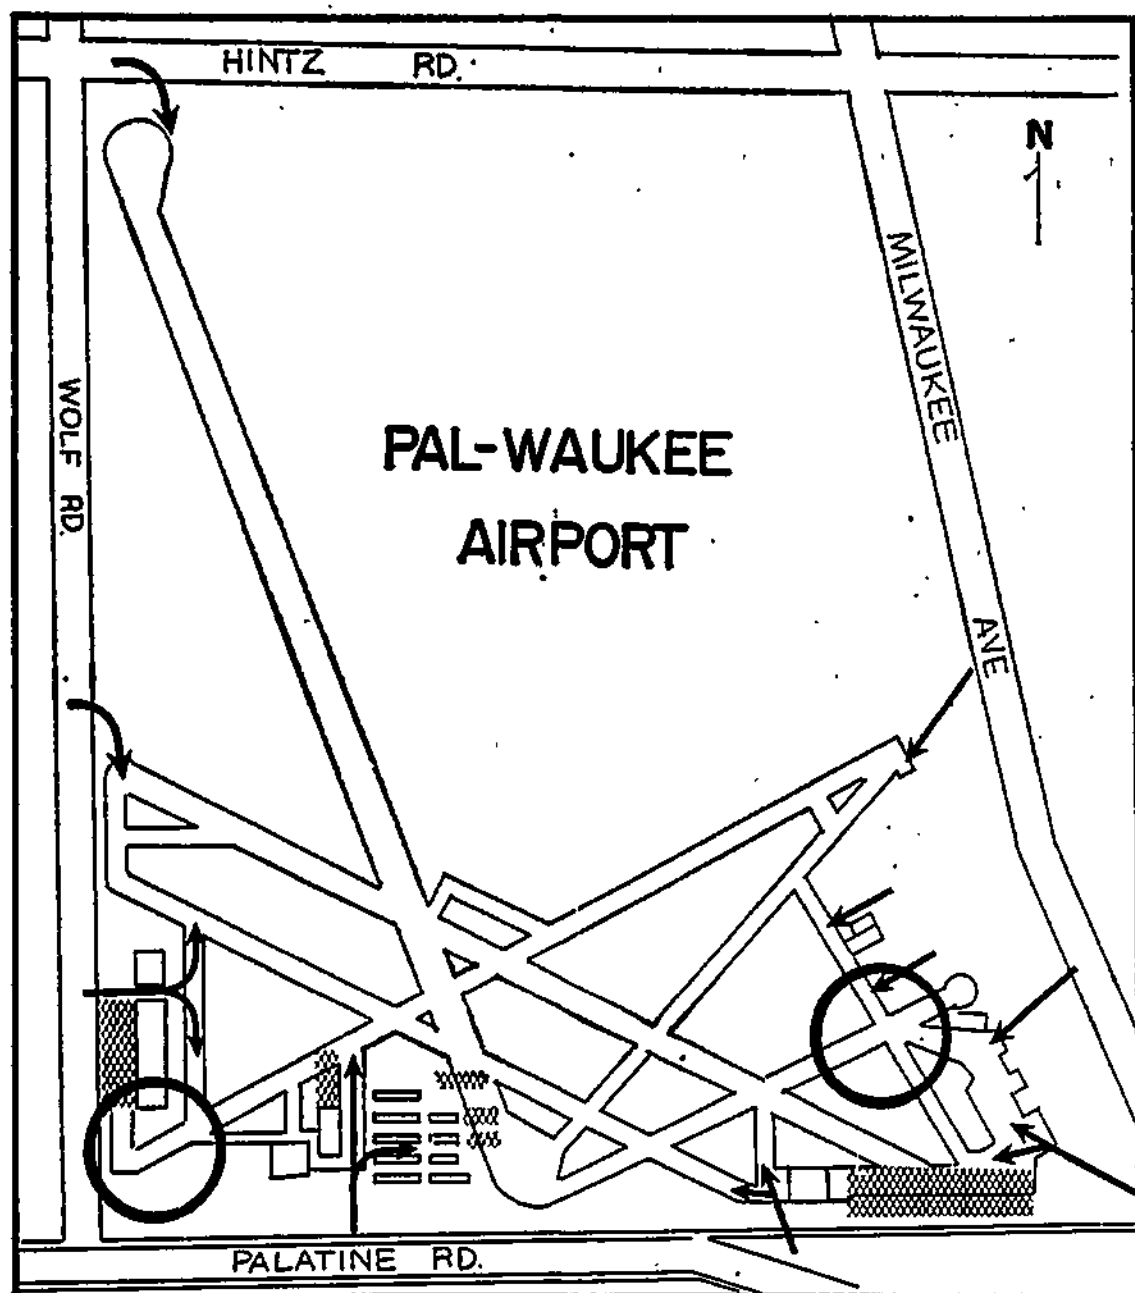

"HOMEWORK" for the defense attorney includes pre-trial interviews of clients and witnesses and time to prepare a defense. The comfort of pre-trial preparation time often is denied the assistant state's attorney who prosecutes the case. Asst. State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, chief of Dist. 3, recently asked local police to send his office copies of DWI complaints within 48 hours of arrest to allow pre-trial preparation.

"Rarely will the state's attorney have talked to the arresting police officer before the trial date," Sullivan said.

"A good defense is like anything else you get involved in," Clarke said.

"It depends on what attorney you

Deadline to file for school job nears

Monday is the deadline for applications to fill the vacancy of River Trails Dist. 26 Board Pres. Michael Sheyker.

Sheyker announced his resignation July 17 but it becomes effective Aug. 15. The board legally has 30 days to appoint a new board member, but board members decided this week to set a deadline for applications because "we'd like to fill the vacancy as soon as possible," said Leora Rpsen, board secretary.

Thus far, Peggy Golden, 631 Maple Ct., and Richard Foster, 936 N.

Wheeling Rd., both of Mount Prospect, have applied for the seat. Both were defeated in bids for the board in April.

MRS. GOLDEN LOST the board election by only two votes to Edward Pugliese. She is past president of the Bond School PTA.

"I couldn't let the opportunity go by," she said of her interest in the board appointment. "It's part of my sustained interest in the district," she added.

Foster is a staff coordinator for Bankers Life and Casualty Co. and has served as a classroom volunteer at Euclid School. He also served as moderator and secretary for the recent Bond School assessment hearings.

Foster declined to make a statement concerning his interest in the board vacancy. "I'd rather wait until after the board makes their decision," he said.

Candidates must be at least 21 years old, a resident of the district for at least a year and not a school trustee or treasurer.

Applicants are asked to call Supt. John Fridlund at the district's central office.

Last-minute aspirant gets schools seat

Barbara Farr, a last-minute candidate for the vacant seat on the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education has been named to that post.

Mrs. Farr applied July 18 for the post vacated by Edwin Smith who recently resigned. Mrs. Farr, 43, lives at 60 E. Jeffery Ave., Wheeling. A resident of the village for 20 years, she is an instructor in British history at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus.

Mrs. Farr said she had heard of the vacancy July 18 and was not active in the district's affairs until her appointment.

Board Pres. Jack Lane said Mrs. Farr was the unanimous choice of board members. Four candidates applied for appointment to the seat.

"I have no special interest, or ax to grind," Mrs. Farr said. "I'm very pleased to be picked from the very fine field of candidates."

Smith resigned July 1 after serving on the board for eight years.

Tentative schools budget 13.7% more than 1975-76

A tentative $44-million 1975-76 budget, that calls for a 13.7 per cent increase in spending over last year has been approved by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Despite the increase in spending, the district tax rate is estimated to go down 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation from $2.45 to $2.30.

The district has been required to gradually decrease its local tax rate because of the state's three-year-old "resource equalizer" state school aid formula. The formula requires districts with high property tax rates to lower those rates as they receive additional state money.

The budget includes increases for every district academic department to cover teacher pay increases. More than $1-million has been budgeted for athletics, 12.4 per cent or $55,000 more than last year.

SOME $187,000 has been allocated for deaf education, compared to $74,000 in 1974-75, while $570,000 has been budgeted for special education in the district for this year compared to $462,000 last year, a 23 per cent increase.

More than $1-million has been allocated for transportation costs, up $191,000 from 1974-75, a 23 per cent increase.

The budget presently calls for a surplus "contingency fund" of about $430,000.

The tentative budget is subject to further review and change before final passage, scheduled for Sept. 22. The budget will go on public display Aug. 18 at the district administration center, 799 W. Kensington, Mount Prospect.

A public hearing on the budget has been set for Sept. 8 at the district administration center.

Kindergarten bus fee retained

The kindergarten bus fee policy will remain the same in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 next year despite the board's consideration of eliminating these fees.

During a work session last week the board agreed that the $31 annual bus fee could not be eliminated for all kindergarten students. Board members said they were afraid too many kindergarten students would decide to ride the bus which would overcrowd the morning kindergarten sessions.

Kindergarten students who are bused must attend the morning session because of the bus schedule.

The board was considering eliminating the fee for kindergarten students who live within one mile of school. Kindergarten students living beyond one mile are bused by the district and do not pay a fee.

Kindergarten students living more than eight-tenths of a mile from school can ride the bus to school but they must pay the fee.

Unauthorized intrusions

by TOM VON MALDER

A national aviation safety group has criticized security measures at Palwaukee Airport for allowing potentially dangerous intrusions by unauthorized personnel onto aircraft movement areas.

The Aviation Safety Institute (ASI), of Worthington, Ohio, said it has more than 50 documented cases of unauthorized persons and vehicles on the airport's runways, taxiways and ramps. Many of the incidents at the airport, which is south of Wheeling, could have led to a serious accident, the ASI said.

"Palwaukee has very poor airport security procedures," the ASI said in its Monitor publication for pilots.

"Aircraft have had close calls on numerous occasions."

The institute, an independent safety research organization, cited examples of trucks, motorcycles, cars and small children crossing the airplane movement areas at Palwaukee. One example cited a small girl caught walking across an active runway with a bicycle which had a flat tire, because "It was the shortest way home."

CHARLES PRIESTER, airport manager, agreed the intrusions are a problem, but said the institute gave a distorted picture. "The safety institute is not aware of Palwaukee and the problems here," he said, referring to the institute's Ohio location. "They make it appear like nothing is being done."

Priester said the airport has put in guard fence, which keep out vehicles but not pedestrians, at the northwest corner of the airport and along the west side. More of the guard fences are planned for the east side next month.

As for keeping all unauthorized persons off the airport grounds, Priester said, "There's nothing you can do. That's the problem." He said it was "ridiculous" to try to patrol 300 acres and he said regular fencing around the airport had a "prohibitive" cost of about $115,000 to $120,000.

The airport cannot obtain federal funds for fencing or security because it is privately owned, although used by the public, and Priester said the airport itself cannot afford such improvements. He added that attempts have been made to have the U.S. Congress change the eligibility situation for federal funds, but none have been successful yet.

"We're doing the best we can," he said. In addition to the guard fences, any unauthorized person found walking where airplanes move are arrested for trespassing, if they have no right being at the airport, or first warned and then told to keep their airplane somewhere else, if they use the airport, he said.

PRIESTER SAID there have been cases of motorcycles and cars being driven down runways at night and even a snowmobile being used on the runways last winter.

"There have been no accidents caused by this problem," Priester stressed. His statement was supported by Leo Ullsperger, Federal Aviation Administration chief of air traffic control at Palwaukee. "We've had no accidents, near accidents or injuries because of it," Ullsperger said.

Both Priester and John B. Galipault, ASI president, agreed that public education of the potential dangers is needed. Galipault said, "The events represent a very serious threat to the lives of the transgressors and the people in business and pleasure aircraft."

The ASI is a registered non-profit institution which has started a nationwide safety data system on airports, worked on new safety standards and studied risk rating procedures for insurance companies.

Schools weigh energy monitor

High School Dist. 214 officials are investigating the possible installation of a district-wide energy monitoring system that may save the district up to $100,000 per year or 10 per cent in energy costs.

The board of education has given officials approval to seek bids for such a system, which uses a computer to monitor gas, oil and electrical using systems. Cost for such a system is estimated at $100,000, said Thomas Cosgrove, director of physical plants for the district.

The system, at first, will control and monitor heat and electrical system usage at Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Rolling Meadows high schools, Cosgrove said. Other district schools, Arlington, Forest View, Elk Grove, Prospect, and Wheeling will only be monitored.

Cosgrove said the three schools were singled out for both monitoring and control because of their high electrical use. All three use more energy because they are air-conditioned.

The system would be similar to one already in operation at several High School Dist. 211 schools in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg.

Teacher contract talks declared at an impasse

by MARILYN McDONALD
Teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 may not have a satisfactory contract when they return to school next month, now that contract talks with board members are at a standstill.

Board negotiators declared an impasse after the third round of contract talks July 17. At that meeting board members increased offers on extra duty pay, summer school pay and merit pay, but teachers made no concessions in return.

"My interpretation of negotiation is give and take. Both have to give a little and get a little. We received basically nothing," said Alan Krinsky, board member and chairman of the board negotiating team.

KENNETH BATES, spokesman for the teachers' union negotiating team, said he was "surprised" by the declaration of impasse.

"Indications seem to be that we'll go into school this year without a contract," he said.

The teachers technically will have a contract in August because they signed a two-year document last year with the provision that salary items could be reopened this year. Bates said he thought the number of salary demands made by teachers this year angered the board.

"Coupled with Gov. (Daniel) Walker (his 4.9 per cent state education budget cut) and tight times, they

But Bates defended the teachers' requests. "Last year, they offered us $45,000 (for merit increases) as a starting package. They tell us that their operating expenses are higher. Their bills are larger than mine, but mine have gone up too," he said.

AMONG THEIR salary requests teachers have asked for $60,000 for merit and across-the-board raises. In its latest proposal, board members offered $40,000 for merit and across-the-board raises. Teachers wanted a 15 per cent increase in extra duty pay, and the board last offered a 10 per cent increase. Teachers also asked for a 15 per cent hike in summer school pay, but board members last offered

Negotiations in the district have been rocky before. Impasses have been declared at some point in the last three contract negotiations. In 1972, the contract was settled with mediation. In 1973, the two sides settled in the last meeting they were to hold before a mediator was brought in. Last year, a mediator settled the final contract.

According to impasse procedure in the teacher contract, teacher negotiators will meet with the entire Dist. 23 board Aug. 13. Board negotiators will meet with the full teaching staff Aug. 14. Then both negotiating teams will meet again Aug. 21. Should this meeting fail to clear the impasse, a professional mediator will be brought in.

Fracas results in battery charge

Des Plaines police charged a Mount Prospect man with battery Wednesday following a fracas in a city tavern apparently related to the current Central Telephone Co. strike.

Arrested was Robert J. Smey, 34, of 752 Dempster St. Police said he and another man pushed John Knowles, 21, of Des Plaines, through a door of the Beacon Tap, 1374 Lee St. Knowles was taken to Holy Family Hospital but was released after treatment.

Police said Knowles and two companions, all working Central Telephone employees, entered the tavern shortly before 10 p.m. and were confronted by a group of striking workers. Knowles told police he was pushed through the door when he attempted to leave and notify police.

Smey, who police said is a union steward for the striking workers was released on $1,000 bond pending an Aug. 21 appearance in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.
